Very thoughtfully Sir Antony made his way out into the street. He walked a few yards, then hailed a hansom.

"I wish Feo had not said that," he found himself thinking, as he was driven swiftly through the streets.

He was most uncomfortable; he had a stinging pain at his heart and an uneasiness that was not caused by a certain trouble he had been bearing and struggling with through many past months.

Lady Feodora's efforts to remove the impression of her first quick, almost fierce outburst of anger against his guardian had not deceived Sir Antony in the least. He knew far better indeed, from her manner and the tone of her voice, than any words could have told him, that Feo's old childish dislike to and unreasoning jealousy of Richard Saville had developed into something much stronger and different altogether during the past few hours. He could not disguise this fact from himself; yet, for all the pain and sudden uneasiness it brought him, Antony somehow could not feel angry with his cousin for her bitter words; instead, he began excusing them to himself, explaining them away as far as he could.

"Feo has always been hard on Dick. She is, of course, dreadfully disappointed about Miss Druro, and angry too; and, when Feo is angry, she says many things which she does not mean, and which she forgets when her anger is gone."

So he argued with himself; but the pain at his heart remained. He was not vexed with Feo, only disturbed by her, shaken by the news she had imparted in her curt summing-up against Saville, and by the judgment which her disappointed hopes had led her to pass upon him.

"It was only natural she should be angry," he repeated to himself; then the other thought would recur to him, and he muttered, "But, oh, I wish she had not said what she did!

He had a tired, over-strained feeling as he was driven swiftly through the gray gloaming of the summer night. He wondered vaguely why he felt such deep regret at the news of his "big brother's" unexpected inheritance. There was, on the face of it, no real reason why he should resent the circumstance so much, or why he should be almost yearningly desirous to discover that the report was ill-founded. He had the sincerest sympathy for Richard Saville. Lady Feo's words had jarred upon him, and the jarring pain still lingered; but it would take more than a few angry words to shake the foundations of Antony Pelle's love for and faith in his guardian, trusted friend, and adopted brother.

"It must have been a great shock to Dick—poor old chap!" he said to himself, his generous noble young heart going out with a rush to the man he held so dear. "I expect he is quite upset about it. I wonder how he will manage the matter! He will, of course, be troubled about Miss Druro. I hope she will be kind and meet him halfway. She must see, as we all see, that it is a painful position—it would be so for any man. If I knew her better, I would plead with her for Dick; but—" Sir Antony pulled himself up in his thoughts and gave a faint laugh; the hansom had turned into Bloomsbury Square, he was approaching Elizabeth's home. "There is something funny in my imagining that Dick should want my help in this or any other business. It may be an awkward moment, but, when a man has tact like Dick's, he is not likely to fail in arranging even such an awkward business as this; at all events, if Dick should want some one to stand by him, he knows where to find his man. Dear old fellow, how I wish I could pay you back only half what you have done for me! But the debt gets heavier each day, instead of lighter. I think, if Feo could but have known all that you have been to me—all that you have done for me—she would have cut out her tongue before she would have spoken against you as she did tonight!"

Sir Antony brushed his hand roughly across his eyes—they were wet with a mist of tears—then put up his stick and stopped the hansom. He had just paid the man, and was turning towards the steps of the gloomy old house, when the door opened from within, and a girl stepped out. Although she was wrapped in a long cloak, with her face shrouded in a thick veil, Sir Antony recognized her at once. It was Elizabeth herself who stood before him.

A STERILIZED BARBER SHOP.

Everything is Made Aseptic, so That Disease Germs Shall not Reach Customers

While investigators have been working to isolate the germ which causes baldness, a practical preventive of the ravages of this and other germs common to barber shops has been put into operation by a Baltimore barber at the instigation of a young physician.

When a customer is to be shaved he reclines in the chair and is enveloped in a "gown," as the barbers call it. The barber then washes his hands with soap and water, and, after rinsing them, dips them in a chemical solution to neutralize any germs which may be lurking about his finger tips or nails. Previously he has trimmed his nails short and has buttoned closely around his wrists the sleeves of his working jacket.

Sterilized towels come from the dry-heat sterilizer in bunches of ten in a linen cloth. One of these is pulled out from the bundle by the aseptic hands of the barber and deftly tucked about the neck of the customer. Lather rubbed up in a sterilized cup, with a sterilized brush is applied, and a sterilized razor is used to scrape off the growth of beard.

The freshly shaven face is washed and dried with sterilized towels, and powder is applied by dipping a sterilized towel into the powder and then dusting it on the face. This does away with the germ-breeding powder puff.

Sterilized brushes and combs are used, so that nothing comes in contact with the customer except it has previously been through the sterilizer. All the implements have aluminum handles, so that they are not affected by heat. They are furnished in numbers, so that as fast as one thing is used it is forwarded to the sterilizer, and does not touch another customer until its possible burden of germs has been removed.

Back in a corner of the shop are two copper sterilizers heated by electricity and in charge of a young man clad in a spotless and sterilized apron. As the cups, brushes, razors and combs come from use they are put on a marble-top table, from which they go to the sterilizer. Each razor is stropped before it is sterilized, so that it is then in readiness for instant use after remaining the specified time within the hot precincts of the sterilizer boiler.—Baltimore Sun.

WHIST

There is to be a change in the representation of the Park Club in the friendly contest for the whist championship of the State. This year the contest is played according to the new lines, the teams living along the line of the Jersey Central playing together and the winner meeting in a final match the winners of the other sections of the State. Instead of the veteran team which has heretofore represented the Park Club, a "pony" team will make its appearance and will play under the name of the Park Club for the season. The "pony" team will be composed of Fred H. Freeman, Arthur A. Freeman, Albert O. Woltmann and Peter B. Matthews. The old team will make another try for the National trophy.

Henry Haurand and Max Wiertz started off this morning on a fishing trip.

Last Sunday morning a fishing party, consisting of Sam Randolph, Tom Randolph, Eugene O'Reilly, Alex Sargeant and Gus Martin, hied themselves to Bowmantown in search of the finny tribe. They returned in the evening and when they made the "divvy" they found that their total catch amounted to nine weakfish, six snap mackerel, nine crabs and one turtle. They are now fattening the turtle and intend giving their friends a supper of turtle soup and the customary "fixins" in the near future.

THE TROLLEY FRANCHISE

kind. But for a clerical error of trifling importance, the franchise would have already been granted and by the vote at that time, it looked to Mr. Liefke as if the Councilmen were rather bound by it.

There are several things in the present franchise that Mr. Liefke said that might be changed to the betterment of the community. He expressed himself as not believing in the granting of a perpetual right to any trolley company. He thought that there should be a time limit on it all, as in the case of the county trolley. Then he felt sure that if the ordinance was passed as it stands at present, there will surely be trouble with the county authorities. All this he believed could be avoided if a clause was added compelling the Plainfield company to grant the city the right to give another company permission to run its cars over the tracks of the Plainfield company at the disputed point. That, he said, would prevent the anticipated trouble and stop a long and expensive law suit before it was begun.

Mr. Liefke said that the Common Council could secure anything it wished from the trolley corporation if it put on a determined front. The company, like any good business man, was not going to grant any more than was necessary. It was a business transaction and should be regarded as such. Mr. Liefke believed that the Councilmen were making a mistake in not getting together and holding an informal discussion of the matter. The street committee had talked it over, but the rest had been given no chance to express themselves in an informal discussion. Mistakes could far easier be corrected before the ordinance was passed than afterward. This was a very important question for the Council to look after and it needed a fair and impartial discussion. It should not be rushed through.

The trolley franchises, he continued, are growing more valuable every year and what now might be considered good terms for the city may not be looked on that way afterwards. He thought that the city should go slow and secure all the concessions possible. As to the trolley company going by the way of Mountain avenue, he did not believe it. They wanted to keep close to the line of John Kean's company and would not go so far out of their way except as a very last resort.

HOTEL GRENADA SOLD.

JOHN P. EMMONS HAS BOUGHT THE VALUABLE PROPERTY.

Mr Emmons Intends to Make Practically a New Building of it and Put it to Several Different Uses

John P. Emmons, who has recently embarked in the real estate business, yesterday consummated a deal whereby he undertakes an enterprise of considerable magnitude, and one which many other men have steered clear of. It is the purchase of the Hotel Grenada property from Coudert Brothers, the celebrated New York lawyers. The building has stood vacant since Wallace V. Miller retired from the hotel business a year and a half ago. The deal was made through John H. Shotwell, of Washington avenue.

Mr. Emmons intends to make practically a new building of it, and put it to several different uses. The whole interior will be changed from top to bottom. On the first floor a new, modern front, with plate glass windows, will be put in. The store occupied by William Claassen's barber shop at present will probably be continued as such, with bathrooms in the rear. The middle store will be used for a cafe, a tenant, it is said, having already been secured. The other store will be used for a purpose not yet decided upon.

On the second floor the front rooms will be changed into business offices, and those on the rear will be made into a flat, probably for the use of the person who will conduct the cafe. The third and fourth floors will be used as hotel rooms in probable connection with J. H. McVey's business.

The building will be entirely replumbed, painted and papered, and made a substantial and modern structure in every respect. Work will be started about November 1st, and the repairs will take three months.

COUNTY PROPERTY STOLEN.

For some time past the workmen who are making repairs to the Elm place bridge over Green brook, have noticed that the bridge planks were slowly disappearing night after night. They became convinced that some one was stealing then, so notified the Freeholders of both Somerset and Union counties.

So this morning, John H. Tier and Andrew Lutkins, the former from the Union County Board the latter from the Somerset County Board went to Justice Mosher and had a search warrant issued, and this afternoon sometime Constable Rockafellow will go to 64 Elm place where the Freeholders think the planks are stored, and see if their supposition is correct.

The Freeholders say that they have discovered pieces of the plank in front of the house, and that the woman who lives there says the dog drew them from the bridge to the house. As the planks are large and heavy, the Freeholders say this is not a likely story.

A DELIBERATE ATTEMPT.

No Doubt But What Ettinger Intended to Kill Himself.

Now that Michael Ettinger has followed out his threat and shot himself, it has been discovered that the man must have made up his mind some days ago to commit suicide, for he told almost every one he met of his intention. Monday morning he was in John Goff's saloon, so intoxicated that the bartender refused to sell him anything to drink. Mr. Goff overheard Ettinger say he was going to kill himself, and sent word out to the police that Ettinger was intoxicated and had threatened to commit suicide. Ettinger, while in the saloon, gave Jules Boutes the address of his brother in France with the request that he notify him when he was dead. This noon Ettinger's condition remained the same, with very few chances of recovery.

Changing Primary Rules.

There was a meeting of the City Republican executive committee last evening. Routine business was transacted and the amendments to the by-laws governing the primaries were laid on the table. They consisted of several unimportant changes that Assemblyman Roger F. Murray decided would add to the effectiveness of the rules he prepared for the government of primaries some time ago.

Report of Children's Home.

The twenty-first annual report of the Children's Home Association for the year ending May 1st, 1898, has just been issued and is indeed a very creditable one. There is a total balance of $502.01 in the treasury, and in every way the home is in excellent condition.

Commissioners in Joint Session.

Paris, Oct. 12.—The United States and Spanish peace commissions held a separate session yesterday morning, preparatory to the fourth joint session, which began at two o'clock in the afternoon.

Madrid, Oct. 12.—The semi-official Correspondencia, touching upon the negotiations now in progress at Paris, says:

"Well informed circles assert that the peace negotiations are not proceeding satisfactorily. Senor Montero Rios has written asking for new instructions to enable him to come to an agreement with the American commissioners. His letters have been read at a meeting of the cabinet, and the ministers have agreed upon the terms of new instructions, which will be sent before this morning's meeting of the commissioners. A minister has expressed the opinion that probably the Philippine question will not be discussed, as the Americans are also waiting for instructions. Senor Montero Rios writes daily to Premier Sagasta and the foreign office concerning the work of the commission.

New York, Oct. 12.—William E. Havana, Oct. 12.—Secretary Giranta of the Spanish commission has delivered to the American commission a note from the Spanish commissioners stating that since August 4,266 Spanish troops had embarked for Spain from Havana.

Trap for the Little Minnow.

The minnow trap, used for catching minnows for bait, is of glass, shaped like a jar or bottle without a neck, and of a capacity of six or eight quarts. The bottom of the trap rises in a cone like the bottom of a champagne bottle, but instead of being solid the top of the cone is cut off, making an opening in the trap. The top of the trap has over it a metal cap on a hinge. The cap is perforated with a number of holes to permit of the circulation of water through the trap.

The minnow trap is slung horizontally in a wire holder, which has a handle on top to which a rope is made fast. Suitable bait to attract minnows is placed in the trap, which is then lowered into the water. The cone with the opening at the inner end in the bottom is in effect like the opening into an eel or fish trap. It is easy for the minnow to get through it into the trap in search of the bait, but hard for them to get out. When the trap has been raised the captured minnows are got out by opening the cap at the other end of the trap.

GUATEMALA'S CROESUS.

Once a Slave, Now Worth Millions. Employs the Son of a Former Owner.

Don Juan Knight is popularly supposed to be the richest man in Guatemala. He is said to be worth $7,500,000. And yet, previous to our civil war, Don Juan Knight was a negro slave, the property of Daniel Upton, who lived in Dadeville, Tallapoosa county, Alabama.

Born in the bondage of slavery, John Knight never knew his father. His parents were separated at a sale of slaves before he was born. At the close of the war, when the slaves were declared free, he walked to New Orleans. He was twenty years old and hadn't a dollar to his name. Now his annual income is over $400,000.

And more than this, by the strange irony of fate, he has, in the days of his affluence, befriended those who formerly claimed him as a part of their goods and chattels. The son of his former owner is in his employ as superintendent of his mines. Mrs. Upton, his former mistress, is the recipient of his bounty in her declining years. Thus has the negro slave boy totally reversed the order of things.

Daniel Upton, Knight's former master, was a scholarly man, and his wife was a former school teacher. They had half a dozen slaves, all of whom had been treated well. Knight was born in the plantation one spring morning in 1845. Mrs. Upton gave the negro child sufficient lessons to get him started on childish studies by himself. Later Mr. Upton became interested in little "Black John" and provided him with common school books. He became the most promising negro in Tallapoosa county.

Mr. Upton died in 1860, and the smart black boy was auctioned off to a new master, who took him to a cotton plantation in Central Alabama. The master entered the Confederate army. Young John became the overseer of a part of the plantation. For four years he superintended the gathering of the cotton and its shipments to New Orleans at the best market prices until the close of the war.

Then he walked to New Orleans and worked as a wharf laborer for a firm which handled fruits from Central America. He saved his money. In 1866 he was sent by his employer to Yucatan, in Central America, to live there as boss of the packing and shipping of fruits to New Orleans. That was practically the beginning of John Knight's millions, says the San Francisco Examiner.

A lively, wide awake person was something unique in those days of siestas and tropical sunshine. A revolution in Guatemala, in which Ramon Sanchez had been deposed, was just at its close. Knight saw what hard work and an opportunity to gain the favor of the new administration would do for himself. He proposed that for a concession of some 50,000 acres of land suitable for pineapples and banana growing, he would go to New Orleans and get the wholesale fruit dealers, who ruled the American markets thirty years ago, to agree to buy $2,000,000 a year of Guatemala fruits. The Guatemala government gladly accepted the proposition. In less than three months the deal was consummated at New Orleans. It was the beginning of the trade in millions of dollars annually.

He married a native young woman in Stapa in 1872, and the union has been a great help to his fortunes.

There are seven children in Juan Knight's home, and all have been educated in the United States. Two of the boys are in a military academy in Mississippi now. One daughter is an accomplished portrait painter in Boston. Once a year the father and mother go on a trip to New Orleans, and from there to New York. They were in Europe in 1894.

Where the Marriage Knot Is Tied.

In India, only, of all the countries in the world, is the much-talked-of marriage knot ever actually tied. Among the Brahmins marriage is a matter of purchase, and the would-be bridegroom is liable almost till the last moment to be ousted by a higher bidder; but, if no suitor appears willing to give the father a more valuable present, he leads his daughter to the first to offer himself, saying:—

"I have no longer anything to do with you; I give you up to the power of another."

Then the bridegroom laces the tail, the insignia of marriage, around her neck, and secures it with a knot. The tail consists of a piece of ribbon with a gold bead suspended upon it. The knot it is that legally binds the wife to her husband and makes the marriage indissoluble, for Brahmins do not recognize divorce.

Mule Will Kick, But Never Runs Over.

Touching the protest we occasionally hear against the dangerous practice of driving loose mules through the streets it may be well to assure the timorous that there is no possible danger of a mule running over a child. You may set a baby in the middle of Marietta street and drive a thousand mules at a wild gallop through it and not one would hurt the baby. It is well enough to give a mule's heels a wide berth, but no one ever heard of a child or man being run over by one. You could not drive a mule over a child.—Atlanta Commercial.

Everybody Satisfied.

"Dere's always bound to be kickers," exclaimed Meandering Mike. "Did you ever know a time when de people agreed unanimously dat dey had de right man in de right place?"

"On'y once," replied Plodding Pete. "I was bein' put into jail on de occasion."

WEDDED IN CHURCH AT THE EVENTIDE.

Miss Adeline B. Parsons and J. A. Robinson Married.

BOTH ARE PLAINFIELDERS.

CEREMONY PERFORMED IN CONGREGATIONAL CHURCH.

Church Was Charmingly Decocrated With Flowers and Potted Plants—Episcopal Service Used—Informal Gathering at House Afterwards—Jolly Send Off Given to Mr. and Mrs. Robinson.

One of the prettiest of autumnal weddings was that of Miss Adeline Beebe Parsons, of 730 Watchung avenue, daughter of the late P. Nelson Parsons, of Philadelphia, and Joseph Alexander Robinson, of 307 East Fifth street, which took place yesterday evening at five o'clock, in the Congregational church. The pretty little church was crowded to the utmost with the many friends of the couple, and was very artistically decorated in green and white, the plants forming a pyramid effect about the pulpit, and being banked on either side of the white altar rail. At five o'clock the bridal party entered the church. The four ushers, Louis Irving VanAlstyne, John G. McLaughlin, Charles Burdette Morse and George E. Fuller, led the procession, followed by the maid of honor, Miss Mary E. Robinson, sister of the groom, dressed in white organdie over white taffeta, and carrying pink roses. Then came the bride, leaning on the arm of William VanAlstyne, of Watchung avenue. Miss Parsons was dressed in a white satin gown, en train, trimmed with chiffon and duchesse point. She wore a tulle veil, fastened with lilies of the valley, and carried white bride roses. At the same time the groom, accompanied by the best man, Seymour L. Smith, of Brooklyn, and the clergyman, Rev. Charles Lyman Goodrich, pastor of both bride and groom, entered the chancel by another aisle, meeting the bride at the altar. The impressive Episcopal marriage service was used. The bride was given away by Mr. VanAlystyne, the solemn vows were said, and then Mr. and Mrs. Robinson walked together up the aisle, to the joyous strains of the wedding march, followed by the maid of honor and best man, and the four ushers.

The organinst at the church was Harvey Wickham, of Middletown, N. Y.

After the ceremony, the relatives of the couple gathered at the VanAlystyne home to congratulate them. It was a small and informal, but very pleasant gathering, and Mr. and Mrs. Robinson received many warm good wishes. At the close of the evening, Mr. and Mrs. Robinsen took the train for two weeks of pleasant journeying, receiving a jolly send-off as they left the house. After their return, they will reside on East Fifth street.

During the evening, the guests at the house had an opportunity to view the many beautiful gifts bestowed upon the newly-married pair, by their many friends. The house, as well as the church was artistically decorated with flowers, the decorations at both places being the work of Mrs. Denton.

There was the usual distribution of rice over the couple on their departure. They then drove to the Fanwood station, a party of friends accompanying them in a wagonette for a final farewell when they boarded the train. Colored fire, cannon crackers and rice were used as a parting salute.

HIGH SCHOOL DEBATES.

Organization of New Literary Society Favored by Principal Travell.

Principal Ira W. Travell, of the Plainfield High School, started a movement yesterday at the High School looking toward the organization of a debating society for the young women and the young men of the school. Mr. Travell favored changing the Kappa Delta Phi, the present literary and secret organization of the young men into a joint society and doing away with the secret element. The members, however, prefer to retain their old name and organization and let an entirely separate society be started.

BOUND BROOK'S BANK.

GROUND BROKEN FOR THE NEW BUILDING MONDAY.

It Will Be the Finest Structure In the Town and Will be Well Equipped—Most of the Contracts Awarded.
(Special to The Daily Press.)

Bound Brook, Oct. 13—Ground was broken Monday for the new building of the First National Bank, of Bound Brook, which is to be erected on Hamilton street, but a short distance from Main street. There has been much interest aroused in the awards of the awards of the contracts which amount to $18,000. The competition was very close between a near-by firm of contractors for the whole work and a number of separate bidders, mostly local, for the work in their own respective lines. Part of the contracts have been awarded as follows: Carpenter work, George Stryker, of Bound Brook; mason work, William Farrier, of New Market; plumbing, George H. Murphy, of Bound Brook. The contracts for vault work and heating apparatus have not yet been awarded.

The building is to be a handsome structure of three stories built with a front of buff brick. Messrs. Resseter & Wright, of New York, are the architects. The vaults are to be of the latest improved design and will contain safe deposit boxes. The second floor of the building will be fitted up as apartments and the third floor as a lodge room. The building, as planned, will be the handsomest in Bound Brook and will be a credit to the enterprising local business men who have successfully piloted it. George LaMonte, inventor of the well-known National Safety paper, is president of the institution. H. G Herbert is the cashier.

WANT A COLORED SOLON.

NEGRO POLITICIANS WILL DEMAND RECOGNITION IN CITY ELECTION.

They Have Not Decided to Forsake the Republicans Yet, but Will Await Developments Among White Brethern.

The colored voters of this city, who who have banded themselves together into the organization called the "Southern League," are fully organized now and are ready to take up the gauntlet this fall, and have something to say in the local election. The leaders have not decided to bolt the Republican ticket, or to ally themselves with any other particular party, but are willing to put their votes where they will be to the best interests of their race.

Privileges and their rights are what the colored men declare they want. It is estimated that there are 500 colored voters in the city. In previous elections these votes have been cast almost solidly for the Republican party, and played an important part in the victory generally won by the G. O. P.

The colored men have been after political offices for several years, and think their number and influence ought to be taken into consideration. They say that year after year they have met with promises, only to be forgotten after the election has been held. Two years ago they say a body of their representative men waited on the Republican candidates and secured promises from them that if they helped them into office the nominees in turn would do what they could to help the colored man.

Among other things the colored men say, the candidates promised to thwart all efforts made by the Sanitary Company to secure a license. Another was to appoint a few colored men as policemen. None of these promises were kept, they say, and so the complaint has been made.

The colored voters argued that according to their number at least three of the policemen should be colored men. Among the justices of the peace should be a colored man, and some of them even aspire to sit in the Council. Among the men who, they claim, are eligible to take their places with the city fathers are William Kline, William Fisher, Arthur Venable, William Douns and Spencer Conway, men, who, they say, are fitted by education and experience to have a hand in the grinding out of city affairs.

The colored element has not yet arrainged itself directly against the Republican party. They realize that through them they obtained freedom, but they do say that unless there is a sure chance of being treated as they wish to be treated, the Republican party this winter will go whistling for their votes.

AID TO SUCCESS OF COUNTY TROLLEY.

Commissioners Appointed to Condemn Lands.

J. F. HUBBARD IS ONE.

COURT WILL NOT HINDER COUNTY ROAD IMPROVEMENT.

Formal Application Made by County Attorney Codington and After Considerable Fight on the Part of the Objectors the Commissioners Were Named—Will Start Work Immediately.
(Special to The Daily Press.)

Elizabeth, Oct. 13—County Attorney Codington, of Plainfield, appeared before Judge VanSyckel in circuit court yesterday and succeeded in securing the appointment of three commissioners to condemn lands along Westfield avenue in the town of Union for the purpose of widening that thoroughfare to 100 feet in accordance with the county trolley project.

Attorney Codington presented to the court a lengthy document, which set forth the laws under which the application was made, and also copies of affidavits showing that notices had been given property owners that the application would be made. The documents also set forth that the Board of Freeholders had been unable to reach an agreement with certain property owners and described their lands.

Judge VanSyckel asked if the board had agreed with the property owners upon any gentlemen to act as commissioners. County Attorney Codington replied that they had not, but suggested these names: Joseph A. Hubbard, of Plainfield, A. B. Carlton, of Elizabeth, J. Fred MacDonald, of Plainfield, James O. Clark, of Westfield, and N. V. Compton, of Rahway.

Judge Gilhooly appeared in behalf of several of the property owners. He said that he understood the name of ex-Senator F. C. Marsh would be presented, and that the property owners would be satisfied with him for one. Lawyer Depue of the firm of Lindabury & Depue was present in behalf of the Bronson estate, and objected to the appointment of any commissioners.

Judge VanSyckel interrupted the attorney and said that he would not take the responsibility of interfering with the great improvement. If the lawyer wanted a certiorari he would have to go to the supreme court and obtain it.

Judge VanSyckel then asked for the names of several gentlemen who were entirely disinterested. Then the names of John B. Mills, of Plainfield, W. H. Hoffacker, of Elizabeth, and J. N. Meeker, of Roselle, were suggested.

Lawyer Frank Bergen said that while he did not appear in the interests of any one man, he would indorse the name of ex-Senator Marsh, and, in addition, would suggest former Judge J. Williams Crane. County Attorney Codington signified the county's acceptance of ex-Senator Marsh, and he was appointed by the court. Then Joseph A. Hubbard, of Plainfield, was named as the second commissioner, and James O. Clark, of Westfield, third.

The commission is entirely satisfactory, both to the Freeeholders and to the property owners, and, it is understood, will begin its work at an early date.

Funeral Strictly Private.

The funeral services over Laura, the eight-year-old daughter of Edward Baker, of West Front street, who died Tuesday afternoon from diphtheria, were held yesterday afternoon at 3:30 o'clock from the house. The funeral was strictly private, no one being allowed in the house except the members of the family who are in attendance about the beds of the other sick children. At the grave in Hillside a short burial service was conducted by Rev. G. Kennedy Newell.

Plainfielders in the West.

F. C. Harder, of 832 Madison avenue, has been a visitor at the Omaha Exposition, together with Borough Councilman John Valiant and City Councilman F. H. Andrews. Each one report themselves as being well pleased with the affair. The three Plainfielders were present on New York Day and witnessed a sham battle between a number of noted chiefs from various tribes. They think that the exposition compares in many respects favorably with the World's Fair.

—Donald MacColl, State Secretary of the Y. M. C. A., of New Jersey, is said to have been the best speaker in his class at Princeton University. He will speak at the Seventh-Day Baptist church Oct. 15th, at the morning service.

The marriage of Miss Amy Hyer, of East Fourth street, to John Bolsterle, son of Mr. and Mrs. Caspar Bolsterle, of Watchung avenue, took place last evening at 8 o'clock at the home of the groom's parents in the presence of the relatives and intimate friends of the contracting parties.

COL. SNYDER TO MAKE FIGHT AGAINST FOWLER

East Orange Man Named by Eighth District Democrats.

HARD WORKER FOR PARTY.

BAYONNE ALSO HAD A CANDIDATE FOR THE HONOR.

Union County Didn't Know Where They Were at for a Few Moments—Thomas Lane Chairman of Convention—Platform Denounced Congressman Fowler's Record—Col. Snyder Addressed Convention.
(Special To The Daily Press.)

Elizabeth, October 13.—Col. Edward H. Snyder, of East Orange, whose name previous to yesterday had not been talked of in connection with the Congressional fight against Congressman Fowler—at least, not to the extent that other than a few of his own neighbors knew of his aspirations—was the choice of the Democrats in the Eighth district convention yesterday afternoon. The convention was held in the Zouave Armory hall, and while typically Democratic in some respects it lacked the old time vigor that used to prevail when the Democrats of the Eighth got together to select their standard bearer in the Congressional canvass.

The delegates gathered slowly at the convention hall and it was nearly 3 o'clock before the various counties went into caucus, but the work of distributing the convention honors and deciding as to the choice of candidates was quickly done and it was 3 o'clock when the convention was called to order.

The Union county delegation met in one of the front parlors to hold their caucus. It was called to order by John Crowell, chairman of the Democratic county executive committee. Dr. Jackson, of Springfield, was made chairman of the caucus, and John Lane, of Summit, secretary. The choice of the delegates for the convention honors were as follows:

Committee on Permanent Organization—J. W. Hughes, Summit; Dr. E. G. Putnam, Elizabeth.

Committee on Rules—R. J. Mooney, Summit; H. C. Wilson, Elizabeth.

Committee on Credentials—Ira G. Hulburt, Plainfield; J. J. Potts, Elizabeth.

Committee on Rules—Dr. E. B. Silvers, Rahway; Peter Egenolf, Elizabeth.

Chairman, Hon. Thomas F. Lane, Summit; vice-presidents, Elmer D. Moffett, Plainfield; Jacob Bucklacher, Elizabeth; secretaries, M. J. McKernan, Orange; A. B. Cook, Rahway.

The convention was called to order by Mr. Crowell, and Thomas Lane, of Summit, was named for temporary chairman. One secretary from each county was chosen as follows: Joseph Stillger, of Hudson; M. J. McKernan, of Essex; and Alfred Cook, of Union.

After calling the roll of delegates by districts and the presentation of credentials, the convention took a recess to allow the various committees to transact its work. After thirty minutes the convention reconvened and the temporary organization was made permanent.

The committee on resolutions presented the platform of the convention, which, after endorsing the State candidate and the Democratic ideas in the State campaign, attacked Congressman Fowler's record. It accused him of making an appeal for votes two years ago on a non-partisan argument, and then after election going against his promises and voting for all partisan legislation. It also paid heed to the charges that Congressman Fowler had appointed postmasters in his district at the behest of politicians who were distasteful to the patrons of the offices they were selected for.

Nomin ations were then declared in order. Samuel J. Klauber, of Essex, nominated Col. Snyder, telling of his good record in his own town and his sterling Democracy. Mayor Edward Seymour, of Bayonne, read a letter from former Judge Thomas J. Noonan, in which he declined the honor for the nomination. Mayor Seymour said, however, that Bayonne had another candidate, and that if he was chosen by the convention the Democrats of that city would send him out of there with 1,000 majority on election day. He then nominated Edward A. S. Man.

Union county's choice was called for and Dr. Jackson said that Union had no candidate. As is almost always the case with Union, there was some sort of a misunderstanding and two or three delegates immediately moved that Union county be given a

TROTTING AT BRUNSWICK

SUCCESSFUL OPENING OF FACE MEET AT BRUNSWICK TRACK.

"Barney Williams," From Woodbrook Farm, Took Second Money in One Event, and May Get First—Winners.

New Brunswick, Oct. 13—There was a very auspicious opening for the race meet of the New Brunswick Driving Association on their new track yesterday afternoon. The lovers of horseflesh for miles around gathered in this city yesterday to see the races and found the day's sport very much to their taste. There were three races that were closely contested and made plenty of excitement.

In the first event, the 2:17 trot, "Bert Sheldon," a big black gelding belonging to G. O. Smith, of Orange, won in three out of four heats. "Carrie," George Richards, of Dover, was second. "Myrtle Twig," belonging to Thomas Brantingham, of Plainfield, took fourth money. "Highland Boy" James Arkell, of Westfield, went unplaced. The time averaged 2:23.

In the 2:30 trot and pace there were seven horses in line for the word. "Restaurant Boy," W. P. Lendrum, of Jersey City, won three heats easily, but he was protested as a "ringer" and will probably be ruled off. "Barney Williams," Woodbrook Farm, Plainfield, took second money and may be advanced to first.

"Stanley Martin," G. R. Pitman, of Trenton, won tha 2:35 trot and pace. There were no entries in that event from Plainfield or vicinity.

The races will be continued this afternoon with an excellent programme.

GOES BACK DISGRACED.

BOROUGH BOY RESTS UNDER ACCUSATION OF DESERTION.

Private Flynn Sent Here by Captain Wherley to Take the Offender Back to Camp—A Sad Parting With Relatives.

Private Charles J. Sprague, of Co. H, Third Regiment, a resident of the borough, who deserted from his company ten days ago, and who has been confined in the borough lockup for a few days waiting for instructions, was this morning escorted to Pompton Lakes by Private Charles Flynn, of the same company, and of this city. Flynn was sent to this city by Captain John Wherley for the purpose of bringing Sprague back to camp. At the suggestion of Captain Wherley, Chief Marshal Wilson, of the borough, accompanied the two soldiers to Pompton Lakes.

Private Ben. Scribner, who also deserted, but returned, is now confined in the guard-house, pending a trial. The two deserters will probably be tried together.

It was an affectionate farewell that was given Sprague this morning by his father and mother, and his young lady friend, and Chief Wilson carried with him word to Captain Wherley from Dr. Zeglio, the attending physician, to make the sentence as light as possible for Sprague.

A COUNTY COMBINE CHOOSES CONVERY.

Democratic Nomination in Third Congressional District.

SOMERSET MAN DEFEATED.

ANDREW LANE, OF NESHANIC, ASPIRED FOR THE NOMINATION.

Third District Convention Held at Freehold—Middlesex and Monmouth Combined and Selected a Middlesex Man for the Honor—Somerset Hoped for a Split Among Monmouth Delegates.
(Special to The Daily Press.)

Freehold, October 13—The Democrats of the Third Congressional district sent their delegates to this place yesterday to meet in convention and select their candidate for Congressman. Patrick Convery, of Perth Amboy, former sheriff and county clerk of Middlesex county, was the final choice. Besides the delegates, there were a number of prominent Democrats present from this section, all filled with enthusiasm.

In the morning the delegates of the three counties held separate caucuses. There had been a lively movement in favor of Senator Keys, of Somerset, the night before, but he refused to run, as did also E. H. Radel, of Middlesex, the well-known trolley magnate. The Somerset delegation settled on Andrew Lane, of Neshanic, as their choice, and gave him their united support. Middlesex and Monmouth combined, however, in favor of Convery.

Up to the very last, the Somerset Democrats counted on a split in the Monmouth delegation with sufficient support for Lane to carry him through.

The convention was called to order by Henry Reimer, of Somerville, chairman of the Congressional committee. Aaron F. Johnston, of Monmouth, was made temporary chairman. He made a glowing speech with a bitter arraignment of the Republican party. After the appointment of the convention committees and officers, the convention adjourned until 1:30 o'clock.

After re-assembling the reports of the committees were received. By recommendation of the proper committee, the temporary organization was made permanent. The rules of the last convention were adopted. The platform presented rejoiced in the harmony in the Democratic party throughout the State and promised to bring it into line once more. Hearty support was pledged to Crane, the candidate for Governor and the principles of the convention that nominated him endorsed.

The maladministration of the Republican party in the treatment of the soldiers was condemned. The resolutions were greeted with cheers and unanimously adopted.

Nominations were then called for. James Wight, of Perth Amboy, spoke for Middlesex county and named Patrick Convery as their choice for candidate. John Frick, of Somerville, made the nominating speech for Somerset's candidate, Andrew Lane. The voting then began. Somerset cast its 71 votes for Lane, while Middlesex cast 87 and Monmouth 78 for Convery. Before the result of the ballot was announced, the vote of the Somerset delegation was changed from Lane to Convery and the election was made unanimous at the motion of Mr. Frick. Convery was then declared the choice of the convention. After the usual closing business, the convention broke up.

THE PEACE DISCUSSIONS

Report That the Spanish Wish to Review the Protocol.

VIEWS OF A PARIS PAPER

Senor Rios Claims that Document Cannot Be Considered as Exppressing the Sovereign Will of a Free Nation. Newspapers Said to Be Mere Conjectures.

Paris, ct. 13.—The session Tuesday of the joint peace commissions of the United States and Spain were devoted, according to the Gaulois, to an examination of two questions in the protocol.

The Philippine matter was discussed incidentally, the American commissioners seeking to impose a system of compensation for claims connected with the entire group, by assuming the debt, provided Spain guarantees the Cuban debt.

The Spaniards wish the United States to assume the Cuban debt and to hand over to Spain all the war material in Cuba and Porto Rico.

The discussion, according to the Gaulois, was very animated. Judge Day, the president of the American commission, and Senor Montero Rios, the president of the Spanish commission, having received precise instructions from their respective governments, the Americans consider that they cannot discuss the principles forming the base of the protocol, to which the Spaniards reply that the protocol was signed at a critical moment and under so pressing a necessity that it cannot be considered as expressing the sovereign will of a free nation.

In this fact, they conclude, exists a sufficient reason to allow of their non-acceptance as definite the preliminary conventions relating to Cuba.

"The arrival, therefore, at an understanding," says the Gaulois, "offers grave difficulties, and one asks with anxiety how the negotiations will eventually tirminate."

The American peace commission held a session yesterday but, as usual, without disclosing the subjects under consideration.

In diplomatic circles here it is declared that the comments of newspapers on problems before the peace commissions are mere conjectures, not justified by facts. It is added that the relations between the two commissions are not so delicate as the newspapers indicate.

Painful Impression in Madrid.

Madrid, Oct. 13.—The rumors as to the attitude of the United States peace commissioners have caused a painful impression, especially the reported decision of the American commissioners not to recognize the Cuban and Porto Rican debts.

Boston Again Champions.

The Boston team is the pennant winner again this year. Although the season doesn't end until Saturday, the Beaneaters clinched their claims to the championship Tuesday by defeating the Washingtons. The Baltimores can not catch them now. This year marks the winning of the fifth pennant by the Hubites since the close of the Brotherhood league. They have carried off the championship in 1891, 1892, 1893, 1897 and 1898.

In the Deputies an effort was made to concur in this action, but on objection to immediate consideration the resolution of the bishops went to the calendar.

Fencing.

Fencing is becoming quite a favorite exercise and pastime with women, it being claimed for it that it thoroughly develops all the muscles of the body. In Germany it is extremely popular, and there, the most fashionable young women receive half-a-dozen of their friends in their fencing-rooms in the afternoon and indulge in trials of skill and strength with the foils. It is said that a few months or even a few week's fencing will put muscles of steel into the slenderest of wrists, will train the eye and give a suppleness and grace to the figure, which must be seen to be believed. The devotees of the exercise declare that it develops the strength of the muscles without enlarging them, as is the case with most gymnastics.

MANY MINERS KILLED.

Shot by Guards Because They Offered Resistance to Imported Laborers.

Springfield, Ill., Oct. 13.—Telegrams to State President Hunter of the Mine Workers of Illinois says a battle has been fought between striking miners at Virden and negroes imported from Alabama.

The president is advised that the men guarding the train bearing the negroes fired repeated volleys into a crowd of miners at the platform of the depot as the train rolled into the station, killing ten, whose names cannot be learned here.

The town is in the greatest excitement and cannot be reached from here by either telegraph or telephone connection.

The governor probably will order Battery B from Pana, as it is reported that there is yet to be an effort made to get the negroes into the stockade and the miners say that they will fight to the bitter end.

Springfield, Ill., Oct. 13.—Governor Tanner last night received a telephone message from Sheriff Davenport of Macoupin county, that the fight between the miners and those guarding the stockades is still going on, and that over one hundred men have been killed.

The governor ordered Captain Craig, in command of Battery B, and Sons of Veterans companies at Pana to proceed at once to Pana.

Governor Tanner said: "I shall give Captain Craig, who will command the troops at Virden, orders to suppress the riot, protect life and property and to not allow imported labor to be unloaded at that place, since the mine owners have carried out their threats, influenced by avarice and gain, to precipitate this riot and bloodshed.

"I do not propose that they shall further disturb the peace of the state. The mine owners and managers are responsible for and guilty of the murder brought about by this conflict and should be indicted by the grand jury for murder, as I believe that they will be."

Mrs. George Held for Trial.

Canton, O., Oct. 13.—The hearing of Mrs. George, who is charged with the murder of George D. Saxton, Mrs. McKinley's brother, was resumed yesterday before Police Justice Reigner.

The court room was again crowded to the doors with curious persons, who were eager to see the defendant and hear the testimony in the case.

There were many women in the court room. It was reported before the hearing began that Mrs. George's lawyers would offer no more testimony in defence at the preliminary hearing.

Three witnesses for the defendant were examined yesterday and eight persons testified for the state.

The state closed its testimony at 10.30 o'clock, and the defence decided to call witnesses.

Mrs. George was held for trial.

The Nicaragua Canal.

Denver, Col., Oct. 13.—Warner Miller of Herkimer, N. Y., has arrived in Denver to attend the annual meeting of the Nicaragua Canal Company, of which he is president.

"The canal is going to be built," he said in an interview. "That question was practically settled by the Spanish war and the long journey of the Oregon."

"Do you think that Congress will take hold of the matter promptly?" was asked.

"There is no doubt about it in my mind," said Mr. Miller. "Dirt will fly shortly after the end of the next session of Congress. That is my prophecy and I think I ought to know what I am talking about."

The Pennsylvania Scandal.

Philadelphia, Oct. 13.—Benjamin J. Haywood, ex-state treasurer, yesterday waived a hearing on the charge of conspiracy with United States Senator M. S. Quay, Richard R. Quay and Charles H. McKee of Pittsburg, to misuse the funds of the state on deposit in the People's Bank of Philadelphia. He gave bail in the sum of $5,000 for his appearance at the November term of court, David H. Lane, a leading Republican politician, becoming his surety.

St. Louis to Have a Holiday.

St. Louis, Oct. 13.—Mayor Zeigenheim has issued a proclamation making Friday, October 14, the day on which Mr. McKinley will visit St. Louis, a holiday.

Richard C. Kerens and a few invited guests left here for Omaha, where they will join the president and act as an advance guard for the larger citizens' committee, under the chairmanship of Colonel Fordyce, which will meet him at Alton Friday morning.

The Pana Labor Troubles.

Pana, Ill., Oct. 13.—Mayor Penwell, who is the son of a prominent coal operator, yesterday discharged the entire police force, charging them, it is said, with sympathy with the strikers.

New men were sworn in, but eight out of ten city councilmen announced that the new officers will be removed at the next council meeting.

Gen. Grant Will Be a Guest.

Toledo, . O., Oct. 13.—General F. D Grant has signified his intention of being a guest of the Army of the Tennessee at its annual reunion in this city, October 26 and 27. He will be accompanied by his mother, Mrs. U. S. Grant.

HOWARD GOULD MARRIES.

He Takes as His Wife Miss Kathrine Clemmons, an Actress.

New York, Oct. 13.—After an eventful courtship, extending over four years or more, Howard Gould, the third son of the late Jay Gould, and Miss Viola Kathrine Clemmons, an actress, were married last night at 8.30 o'clock in the Holland House by the Rev. Dr. Wilton M. Smith, pastor of the Central Presbyterian church, in Fifty-seventh street.

The ceremony, at which none of Mr. Gould's relatives was present, was very simple in its nature. There were no groomsmen or bridesmaids, and, excepting the officiating clergyman and the bride and bridegroom, only ten persons were present at the marriage, which was performed in the parlors of the hotel. They were Mr. and Mrs. John H. Kimble, Mr. and Mrs. Sells, Mr. and Mrs. G. A. Kirkpatrick, Mr. and Mrs. Leroy W. Baldwin, Mr. Bogardus and Captain Shackford of Mr. Gould's new steam yacht, the Niagara.

The bride was attired in a white satin dress, trimmed with old point lace the gown being made in plain design. Her only ornament was a small jewel [illegible]at. She carried a large bou[illegible]te roses.

[illegible] ceremony a supper was [illegible] Gilt Room of the hotel, [illegible]laborately decorated with [illegible]owers. Each guest was [illegible] with a piece of the wedding [illegible] a white satin box, with the compliments of the bride and bridegroom.

Notwithstanding the fact that Mr. Gould has been for the last few years, and particularly of late, most devoted in his attentions to Miss Clemmons, it is a fact which not even Mr. Gould's closest friends attempted to deny that the marriage came in the nature of a decided surprise to them. Indeed, it was not surely known, unless to a very few, that the young people were engaged, though it was generally believed they were.

MANZANILLO ALL OURS

Spanish Mayor and Customs Collector Protested but Were Turned Out.

Santiago, Oct. 13.—A dispatch from Manzanillo says that the mayor and collector had both received instructions not to turn over their offices to the Americans, except under protest, and in the presence of the consul and notary.

The collector found a cable message from Senor Montoro, chief of customs at Havana, notifying him that the military occupation of the Americans was not to affect the civil administration, which is still under autonomous government, and to remit regularly all funds to Havana by trusted messenger.

Colonel Ray, American military commander at Manzanillo, immediately suspended the protesting officials and temporarily appointed others. The treasury was found empty.

Colonel Ray has notified Senor Masso, president of the insurgent government, that he could make an unofficial visit to Manzanillo.

New York's War Accounts.

Washington, D. C., Oct. 13.—Adjutant General Tillinghast of New York, accompanied by several members of his staff, was at the war department yesterday for the purpose of settling the accounts of the state of New York relating to the equipment furnished by the state to volunteers enering the army.

General Tillinghast had a long list of articles, for which he wished the government to reimburse the state government.

The goods amounted to almost $500,000 in value.

General Tillinghast was referred to the auditor for the war department, and he presented his statement to that official.

The building will be a fine large brick and stone structure.

Flossie's New Costume.

(BY JAQUETTE.)

Last week Flossie announced to me that she would soon give the Jillings the Mountloves and the other girls something to talk about. "It will be a real smart tailor-made suit and I want you to go with me to buy it," she said.

In a day or two we boarded a trolley car and rode to Newark, where we visited several stores without finding anything in character and price that struck our fancy. "Just as I thought," exclaimed Flossie, "we could have saved time by going at once to Hahne & Co.'s; come on, Nell."

Just a glance at Hahne & Co.'s top garments decided the question of where to buy, with Flossie's whisper: "I told you so." A few seconds later she was declaiming the elegance of a brown camel's hair suit marked $15.98, the same that was shown us at $22 in New York. "I'll take that suit," she said to the lady in attendance. The coat is a cutaway with velvet collar, cadet sleeves and lined with black satin serge. The skirt has the popular flounce, and is lined with percaline. Every seam is tailored.

Flossie's hat came next. I quite shared her ecstasy over the beautiful millinery display, although I am usually sedate and reserved in manner, having reached the age of—well, no matter about that. A turban, trimmed with brown velvet and white satin, seemed to please Flossie immensely, and I advised her to buy it. The price was $1.25, a very reasonable one.

Before we left the store I bought for sister Kate an all-wool, fifty inch broadcloth with twill back, fine face and dainty shade of green, for $1.10 a yard. Kate is delighted with it, and says $1.25 is the price in other stores.

There was a twinkle in Flossie's eye when she remarked to me on Sunday evening: "Say, Nell, I noticed the girls in groups today, several times; do you think they could have been admiring my new costume?"

it's a death tap at your life door. If you knew it you wouldn't neglect such a cough.

Vast Crowds Attend the Peace Jubilee McKinley Listened to by an Immense Throng. The United States Will Shirk No Responsibility Which a Conflict for Humanity Has Brought.

Grand Plaza, Exposition Grounds, Omaha, Oct. 13.—Glorious weather greeted the president and his party yesterday, and it seemed as if all Omaha and the entire population of Nebraska, Iowa and other adjoining states were in the city to welcome the visitors from Washington.

The entire party assembled early at the Omaha Club, where the local committees waited. When the guests were ready to leave the club house the streets were packed with enthusiastic crowds. Carriages were taken to the exposition grounds. The president received an ovation all the way. General Miles was also recognized and had many cheers.

The party arrived at the grounds at about 11.20 o'clock and were driven at once to the grand plaza and escorted to the grand stand.

It was a wonderful sight from where the president stood to see the great mass of people jammed in the grand plaza and overflowing all over the grounds.

The day proved the record breaker of the exposition and it is estimated that there passed in at the gates fully one hundred thousand people.

The band played patriotic airs as the presidential party took their places and the president joined in the hand clapping and cheering for "Yankee Doodle" and "The Star Spangled Banner."

The speech making began at about 11.30 o'clock, and the president's reception was tremendous. Although but a small portion of the crowd could hear him, the thousands stood in the plaza until he finished.

The president's address was as follows:

Gentlemen of the Transmississippi Exposition and Fellow Citizens: It is with great pleasure that I meet once more the people of Omaha, whose wealth of welcome is not altogether unfamiliar to me and whose warm hearts have before touched and moved me. For this renewed manifestation of your regard and for the cordial reception of to-day my heart responds with profound gratitude and a deep appreciation which I cannot conceal and which the language of compliment is inadequate to convey.

My greeting is not alone to your city and the state of Nebraska, but to the people of all the states of the transmissisippi group participating here, and I cannot withhold congratulations on the evidences of their prosperity furnished by this great exposition. If testimony were needed to establish the fact that their pluck has not deserted them, and that prosperity is again with them, it is found here. This picture dispels all doubt.

National Progress.

One of the great laws of life is progress, and nowhere have the principles of this law been so strikingly illustrated as in the United States. A century and a decade of our national life have turned doubt into conviction, changed experiment into demonstration, revolutionized old methods and won new triumphs which have challenged the attention of the world.

Hitherto, in peace and in war, with additions to our territory and slight changes in our laws, we have steadily enforced the spirit of the constitution secured to us by the noble self-sacrifice and far-seeing sagacity of our ancestors. We have avoided the temptations of conquest in the spirit of gain. With an increasing love for our institutions and an abiding faith in their stability, we have made the triumphs of our system of government in the progress and prosperity of our people an inspiration to the whole human race. Confronted at this moment by new and grave problems, we must recognize that their solution will not affect ourselves alone, but others of the family of nations.

In this age of frequent interchange and mutual dependence we cannot shirk our international responsibilities if we would; they must be met with courage and wisdom, and we must follow duty even if desire opposes. No deliberation can be too mature or self-control too constant in this solemn hour of our history. We must avoid the temptation of undue aggression and aim to secure only such results as will promote our own and the general good.

It has been said by some one that the normal conditions of nations is war. That is not true of the United States. We never enter upon war until every effort for peace without it has been exhausted. Ours has never been a military government. Peace, with whose blessings we have been so singularly favored, is the national desire and the goal of every American aspiration.

On April 25, for the first time for more than a generation, the United States sounded the call to arms. The banners of war were unfurled, the best and bravest from every section responded, and a mighty army was enrolled, the North and the South vied with each other in patriotic devotion, science was invoked to furnish its most effective weapons, factories were rushed to supply equipments, the youth and the veteran joined in freely offering their services to the country, volunteers and regulars and all the people rallied to the support of the republic. There was no break in the line, no halt in the march, no fear in the heart, no resistence to the patriotic impulse at home, no successful resistence to the patriotic spirit of the troops fighting in distant waters or on a foreign shore.

What a wonderful experience it has been from the standpoint of patriotism and achievement! The storm broke so suddenly that it was here almost before we realized it. Our navy was too small though forceful with its modern equipment and most fortunate in its trained officers and sailors. Our army had years ago been reduced to a peace footing. We had only 19,000 available troops when the war was declared, but the account which officers and men gave of themselves on the battlefields has never been surpassed. The manhood was there and everywhere. American patriotism was there and its resources were limitless.

Invincible Spirit.

The courageous and invincible spirit of the people proved glorious, and those who a little more than a third of a century ago were divided and at war with each other were again united under the holy standard of liberty. Patriotism banished party feeling; fifty millions of dollars for the national defence was appropriated without debate or division, as a matter of course and as only a mere indication of our mighty reserve power.

But if this is true of the beginning of the war, what shall we say of it now, with hostilities suspended and peace near at hand, as we fervently hope? Matchless in its results. Unequalled in its completeness and the quick succession with which victory followed victory. Attained earlier than it was believed to be possible, comprehensive in its sweep, every thoughtful man feels the weight of responsibility which has been so suddenly thrust upon us. And above all and beyond all, the valor of the American army and the bravery of the American navy and the majesty of the American name stand forth in unsullied glory, while the humanity of our purposes and the magnanimity of our conduct have given to war, always horrible, touches of noble generosity, Christian sympathy and charity, and examples of human grandeur which can never be lost to mankind. Passion and bitterness formed no part of our impelling motive, and it is gratifying to feel that humanity triumphed at every step of the war's progress.

Immortal History.

The heroes of Manila and Santiago and Porto Rico have made immortal history. They are worthy successors and descendants of Washington and Greene; of Paul Jones, Decatur and Hull, and of Grant, Sherman, Sheridan and Logan; of Farragut, Porter and Cushing, and of Lee, Jackson and Longstreet. New names stand out on the roll of honor of the nation's great men, and with them, unnamed, stand the heroes of the trenches and the forecastle, invincible in battle and uncomplaining in death. The intelligent, loyal, indomitable soldier and sailor and marine, regular and volunteer, are entitled to equal praise as having done their whole duty, whether at home or under the baptism of foreign fire.

Who will dim the splendor of their achievements? Who will withhold from them their well earned distinction? Who will intrude detraction at this time to belittle the manly spirit of the American youth and impair the usefulness of the American navy? Who will embarrass the government by sowing seeds of dissatisfaction among the brave men who stand ready to serve and die if need be for their country? Who will darken the councils of the republic in this hour, requiring the united wisdom of all? Shall we deny to ourselves which the rest of the world so freely and justly accords to us? The men who endured in the short, but decisive struggle, its hardships, its privations, whether in the field or camp on ship or in the siege, and planned and achieved its victories, will never tolerate impeachment, either direct or indirect, of those who won a peace whose great gain to civilization is yet unknown and unwritten.

The faith of a Christian nation recognizes the hand of Almighty od in the ordeal through which we have passed. Divine favor seemed manifest everywhere. In fighting for humanity's sake we have been signally blessed. We did not seek war. To avoid it, if this could be done in justice and honor to the rights of our neighbors and ourselves, was our constant prayer. The war was no more invited by us than were the questions which are laid at our door by its results. Now, as then, we will do our duty. The problems will not be solved in a day. Patience will be required; patience combined with sincerity of purpose and unshakable resolution to do right, seeking only the highest good of the nation and recognizing no other path than that of duty.

Right action follows right purpose. We may not at all times be able to divine the future, the way may not always seem clear, but if our aims are high and unselfish, somehow and in some way the right ends will be reached. The genius of the nation; its freedom, its wisdom, its humanity, its courage, its justice, favored by Divine Providence, will make it equal to every task and the master of every emergency.

ostmaster General Smith followed the president with a brief speech. After the speech making the president and party had a chance to see the exposition before lunch.

During the afternoon the president held a reception in the Auditorium. At night there was an illumination and fireworks. This morning the president leaves for St. Louis.

Count Esterhazy,s Undoing.

London, Oct. 13.—A dispatch from Paris to the Exchange Telegraph Company says that Maitre Mornard, who will represent Dreyfus in the revision proceedings before the court of cassation, has applied to M. Alphonse Bard, the reporter of the original proceedings, for authorization to examine the documents in the Dreyfus case.

The dispatch also says that the council of the Legion of Honor, acting at the instigation of the minister of war, will shortly deliberate upon the case of Major Count Esterhazy, with a view of his dismissal from the army.

Major Beebe Dead.

Washington, Oct. 13.—Major General Wade cabled the war department yesterday announcing the death of Major S. S. Beebe, ordnance officer, United States volunteers, who died Tuesday of yellow fever at Havana.

He was a resident of Thompson, Ct., where his widow lives. Major Beebe was a graduate of West Point, and was made a major in the ordnance bureau early in the war.

More Soldiers for Paris.

London, Oct. 13.—A dispatch from Paris to a local news agency says that although the strike is evidently wavering, thirty more brigades of gendarmes have been ordered to Paris. The carpenters have decided not to join the strike

INDIANS WILL YIELD

Reported Success of the Peace Negotiations.

WAR WILL BE AVERTED

Reported Success of the Peace Emissaries. Conditions under Which the Bear Island Hostiles Will Come in. Indian Commissioner Jones Hopeful.

St. Paul, Oct. 13.—A telegram to the Despatch from Walker, Minn., says: "The Bear island Pillager Indians will surrender ,and war has been avoided. It only remains for the terms to be arranged before the hostiles will come in to the agency. Father Aloysius, Gus Beaulieu, the interpreter, and Chief Gay-Gwa-Che-Way-Bimung, the three peace commissioners, who left on the Flora Tuesday evening for the hostile camp, got back at four o'clock yesterday morning.

The party reached the camp at Black Duck Point at the mouth of the Boy river at nine o'clock in the evening. Indians on watch responded to signals, and the three peace commissioners went ashore in a skiff, carrying flour, bacon, sugar, rice, tobacco and canned goods. They met a large number of the Indians back in the woods and were given a cordial greeting. Hands were shaken all around, and the battle of a week ago was talked over. The Indians alluded to it as a "little fun." They asserted that none of their number was killed or wounded.

Bug-Ah-Mah-Ge-Shig was not in conference with the peace commissioners, but his greetings were shouted back and forth across the little bay between him and the commissioners. After landing, a big fire was built and a conference had for three hours. The Indians proved to have been apprised of every movement of the troops and marshals, and nothing told them was new.

A report in writing is to be made to Indian Commissioner Jones. The emissaries refused to make public their report until submitted to Commissioner Jones, further than to say that the Indians will come to the agency when a reply is sent back to their propositions.

Washington, Oct. 13.—Commissioner of Indian Affairs Jones has taken active charge of the interior department interests at the scene of the Indian trouble, and yesterday went out to the headquarters of the Bear island Indians, who are still holding out against surrender, to talk over the situation with them. He sent the following dispatch from Walker, Minn., to Acting Secretary of the Interior Ryan:

"I am going out to the hostile camp to-day to hold council. Feel confident I can settle matters peacefully.
"W. A. JONES."

Mr. Jones, who left for Minnesota hurriedly last Saturday, has been confident all along that tact and honest assurance of fair treatment by the government would win over the Indians and induce them to surrender those that are wanted by the courts.

Troops Return from Porto Rico.

Washington, Oct. 13.—Batteries C and F of the Third artillery, B of the Fourth artillery, and D of the Fifth artillery have been ordered to return to the United States from Porto Rico.

These batteries will be sent to army posts, and probably later will be ordered to duty in Cuba. Orders have also been sent for the return home of the Sixth Massachusetts, Fourth Ohio, Third Wisconsin, Sixteenth Pennsylvania and Third Illinois.

The war department is advised that the Pennsylvania regiment has already left Porto Rico with en. Ernst and staff.

Government of the Philippines.

Manila, Oct. 13.—In accordance with a general order of the military governor, all the Spanish civil courts within Philippine territory now subject to American control have resumed the exercise of their jurisdiction, subject to the supervision of the American military government, which reserves the exclusive right to exercise criminal jurisdiction.

The Spanish papers here allege that the insurgents of Iloilo have surrendered to eneral Rios; but the statement is generally discredited.

Extend Cuban Railways.

Washington, Oct. 13.—Secretary Alger will recommend to Congress that the existing railroad system in Cuba be extended to form a line running from Cape Mayai at the east end of the island, to Cape Antonio on the west.

He will recommend that this work be undertaken by the United States government and that Congress appropriate funds.

Collections in Public Schools.

Boston, Oct. 13.—The school committee has refused to permit the making of collections in the public schools for the purpose of aiding in the erection of a monument to General Lafayette, to be dedicated at the Paris exhibition on July 4, 1900. Objection was made to soliciting contributions in schools for any purpose whatever.

Cape Town Ministry Out.

Cape Town, Oct. 13.—In consequence of the adverse vote in the House of Assembly, Tuesday, when the government was defeated on a motion offered by the Afrikander Bund leader declaring want of confidence, the Sprigg ministry has resigned.

Sites for Camps in Cuba.

Havana, Oct. 13.—Sites for two American camps have been selected by the commission. The first will be outside Guanabacoa, across the bay from Havana, and the second will be at Guanaja, twenty miles from here.

The Future of Fashoda.

St. Petersburg, Oct. 13.—The newspapers here urge that the question of the possession of ashoda, on the Nile, in dispute between Great Britain and rance, be settled by arbitration.

The Council's Duty.

If the majority of the members of the Common Council believe that they are getting the best terms that they can for the franchise they propose granting to the Plainfield Street Railway Company, let them postpone final action for four weeks and advertise for bids on this valuable right. That will tell the tale of whether or not this agitation for better terms is right or wrong. The trolley capitalists have been working for three or four years to get this link, and if they have to wait a month or two longer it won't do any harm.

It is the duty of every citizen in Plainfield to see the member of the Common Council that represents their ward, and to frankly express their ideas about the worth of the trolley franchise. We are positive that the majority of the people in Plainfield are opposed to giving away any more valuable rights to the trolley promoters, and perhaps if they personally speak their true mind on the subject to the Councilmen it will have the effect of securing from the Plainfield Street Railway Company a fair return for a franchise that the future value of is inestimable.

The studied indifference that a number of the members of the Common Council are paying to the agitation for better terms in return for the franchise it is proposed to grant, is not in line with the ideas of the people who elected them to represent the city. A large number of citizens and taxpayers have taken the pains to assure The Daily Press that the position it has taken in this trolley matter is right. We know it is. And the people know it is. If those members of the Common Council, who persist in their intention to give this franchise away for a paltry sum, do not heed the voice of the people in this matter their councilmanic record will be an inglorious one.

Col. Snyder's Career.

Though Col. Edward Snyder, who was named by the Democrats yesterday to wage political battle with Congressman Fowler in the Eighth district, is not as well-known as his competitor, it is said by his friends and supporters who succeeded in securing the honor for him, that he will give a good account of his strength as a candidate on election day.

Colonel Snyder has served two terms in the State Assembly, two terms as an Alderman of the city of Orange and one term as a member-at-large and president of the Orange Common Council. He was born in Orange on September 13th, 1858, and after attending public and private schools entered Columbia College, New York, from which he was graduated in 1880.

Before the organization of the National Guard he was Lieutenant-Colonel commanding the Third Battalion. For several years he was in the furniture business in Orange, but disposed of this a few years ago to devote his time to his extensive real estate interests.

While not particularly active in the campaign of 1896, his sympathies were with Bryan. He was one of a party of Orange Democrats, who met Bryan on the occasion of his trip through this State.

Doesn't Lead a Forlorn Hope.

It is not a forlorn hope by any means that the Democratic candidate for Congress in the Third district starts his campaign with. The third was once counted reliably Democratic and careful political observers say that this year is quite likely to swing back to its old position in the Democratic column.

Middlesex county, naturally Democratic, will exert extraordinary efforts, no doubt, to roll up a big majority in favor of their favorite son who was named yesterday. Patrick Convery is his name, and Perth Amboy his home. He has held the office of Sheriff and County Clerk in Middlesex, and is well-known to the majority of the people in that bailiwick.

Full of Schemes.

Assemblyman Roger F. Murray has another new scheme. This time, it is the tally sheets of the election officers that he proposes to improve. To those whom he has explained its workings, it seems a decided improvement over the old method and promises to keep out many of the errors that were bound to creep in despite the best of care on the part of the election officers. Friday night, he is going to explain the workings of his new tally sheet to the election officers.

Councilman Hetfield admits that it will be fully ten years before the city will receive any benefits from the proposed trolley franchise other than the macadamizing of a little over a mile of streets, costing about $8,000. Doesn't he know that there is every reason in the world to believe that it will be far less than ten years when the present owners of the Plainfield Street Railway Company and the other connecting links between here and Elizabeth will sell out their rights to a syndicate at a great advance over this $8,000 that they hope to get the right of way for over the pivotal point in their plans. It is not good government for Plainfield to play into the hands of these trolley speculators.

With a Republican majority in the Senate of 7, the Democrats must, to overcome it in joint meeting, elect at least 31 Assemblymen, says a Trenton correspondent. That would give a bare Democaatic majority of 1. Should the Democrats carry Essex county it would give them the votes of 11 Assemblymen. Then with 11 from Hudson, 3 each from Middlesex and Monmouth, 2 each from Warren and Hunterdon, and 1 from Sussex, they would have 33 altogether. To get the remaining vote they must depend upon Passaic, Bergen, Somerset, Salem and Cape May. Each of these counties is a good field for the display of Democratic energy, and no doubt it will be tried.

The principal thoroughfare of Plainfield is now being ripped up and destroyed by the Plainfield Street Railway Company being obliged to put in new ties in place of cheap material used in the original construction of the road. As cheap as the company got its original foothold in Plainfield, it has virtually buncoed the taxpayers by using material that was inferior and which the taxpayers are now paying their share for in replacing by having the streets destroyed. Now is the time to make them pay for such tricks by asphalting the business streets in return for the most valuable right that they have yet asked for.

It is greatly to be regretted that Robert C. Wood and the Riverdale Field Club have given up their attempt to promote baseball and bicycle racing in Plainfield. Mr. Wood gave Plainfield what he considered a fair trial, but the hoped-for support did not come, and so he has given up the project entirely after losing money on every game this season. While Mr. Wood was not looking to make any great thing out of the games, he was too astute a business man to care to continue the sport when he was considerably out of pocket at the close of every game.

Former Senator Keys, of Somerville, has been selected as a member of the Democratic State Committee from Somerset county. The choice meets with the approval of the delegates to the State convention, and in view of his past services to the party and experience in political affairs generally Mr. Keys will prove a creditable and efficient representative for old Somerset in Democratic councils.

What The News of yesterday editorially said about the practice of local organizations taking their job work out of town and giving it to amateur printers, and then every time that they wanted to make an appeal to the public to view the newspapers as "good things," is the gospel truth. The nerve of some of the people in this respect is monumental.

For sharp, up-to-date and painstaking reportorial work, the following item from The News of yesterday takes the cake:

Last evening at the meeting of the Christian Endeavor Society of Warren chapel, it is said there was very little singing. The lack of this feature is said to have made the meeting somewhat uninteresting.

There are two wings to the Democratic party in Camden county. One of them will have to be clipped if the Democrats fly high down there in the future.

They have "respectable drunkards" in Paris. Oh, the ways of the French, how queer they are to understand.

TOD SLOANE IN ENGLAND.

He's a wee chap, but he's made a big hole in one part of England—the sporting part. English racing men have at last approved of Tod Sloane's way of riding. The illustrations show the difference between the old and new schools at the start and the finish. The new style is, of course, the Sloane way.

WHAT THE SHEARS FIND.

Editorial Comment From Other Papers of Interest in Plainfield.

The correspondent of the Plainfield Press who charged the Somerset member of the Congressional committee with calling the Democratic convention for Oct. 3d, without consultation with his colleagues, must be a lunatic One member of that committee was said to be in the White Mountains. The member from Somerset and the member from Middlesex had two conferences before fixing the date for the convention. A gentleman whose evidence will not be questioned was present at the final meeting of the majority of the committee.—Somerville Messenger.

PASSING COMMENT

Things that Are Not Exactly News but Just as Interesting.

A pitiable sight, and one happily not often seen in Plainfield, was witnessed on West Front street yesterday afternoon about 4:45 o'clock, an hour when the streets are crowded with shoppers. A young wife walked down the thoroughfare from Somerset street to beyond Madison avenue, leading by the arm a reeling, drunken husband. Sometimes the man would stagger so that both would almost fall, and again he waved his hands frantically over his head and gave voice to a feeble yell. Both were young and it was one of the saddest sights one would want to see.

* * * * *

The law and order people of New Jersey felt relieved yesterday. It was the day on which the death-knell of the Guttenberg race-track was finally sounded. J. E. Hulshizer, as receiver for the North Hudson Driving Park Association, turned over the Guttenberg race-track to the auctioneer, who sold the track and all the personal property to the highest bidder. The track was closed in 1893, after the anti-race-track wave, which resulted in the election of a Legislature that passed the anti-gambling amendment, now part of the State constitution. Mc Loughlin, Croseus, Carr, and Walbaum were the "Big Four" which controlled the track, whose winter racing made it notoricus.

One of the most enjoyable social events of the season was the afternoon tea given by the house committee of the public library, in the library rooms yesterday afternoon. The rooms had been tastefully decorated with bunting and flowers and, together with the bright faces and pretty gowns of the patronesses, formed a very pretty contrast. Mrs. F. W. During the serving of the tea, selections by the phonograph in charge of Miss Shepard, were enjoyed after which the afternoon was given up to social and library talk.

Current Dramatic Attractions That Plainfielders Can Witness.

The Great Gotham Stock Company will hold the boards at the Stillman Music Hall commencing Monday night for one week. This company is an unusually strong one and numbers some eighteen people, each and every one an artist in his or her respected role, among whom may be mentioned Gertrude Dion Magill who is an actress with much dash and finish and in appearance and magnificent wardrobe always brings from her audience a murmur of surprise. The bill for Monday night will be that well known success, "Across the Continent," with all the stage settings that have been used in all the large cities that made it so popular, and a carload of scenery and mechanical effects will be in evidence. The play is most powerful and replete with startling effects and incidents. The repertoire of plays to be produced during the week are by far the strongest that has been produced at cheap prices. They are all tried successes and include "The Plunger," "Ups and Downs of Life," "Inside Track," "A Man in a Thousand," "Ten Thousand Miles Away," "The Soggarth," etc. The whole is under that able and painstaking genius, Oliver Dowd Byron, who has always pleased the public so successfully. His method of giving the public a finished performance is in part the cause of his success. Mr. Byron intends to give the public a dollar performance for the sum of 10, 20 and 30 cents, and the success of "The Great Gotham Stock Company" is fully assured. High-class vaudeville is introduced between acts by Fred Warren, Ed Hume, Alice Magill and W. E.—The Brownings—Edith. Matinees will be given daily, commencing Tuesday. Prices for matinee, 10, 20 and 30 cents.

Orange Blossoms.

The custom of using orange blossoms in connection with the bridal robe originated in Spain, according to legendary lore. An African king presented a Spanish king with a magnificent orange tree, whose creamy, waxy blossoms and wonderful fragrance excited the admiration of the whole court. Many begged in vain for a branch of the plant, but a foreign ambassador was tormented by the desire to introduce so great a curiosity to his native land. He used every possible means, fair or foul, to accomplish his purpose, but all his efforts coming to naught, he gave up in despair. The fair daughter of the court gardener was loved by a young artisan, but lacked the "dot" which the family considered necessary in a bride. One day, chancing to break off a spray of orange blossoms, the gardener thoughtlessly gave it to his daughter. Seeing the coveted prize in the girl's hair, the wily ambassador offered her a sum sufficient for the desired dowry, provided she gave him the branch and said nothing about it. Her marriage was soon celebrated, and on her way to the altar, in grateful remembrance of the source of all her happiness, she secretly broke off another bit of the lucky tree to adorn her hair. Whether the poor court gardener lost his head in consequence of his daughter's treachery the legend does not state, but many lands now know the wonder tree, and ever since that wedding day orange blossoms have been considered a fitting adornment for a bride.

Worth Remembering.

The largest city in the world is London, which has a population equalling the combined population of Paris, Berlin, Petersburg, and Rome. Its streets, placed in a row, would reach round the world, leaving a bit over long enough to reach from London to St. Francisco.

The largest cave in the world is the Mammoth Cave of Kentucky. Its length is ten miles, though to explore its avenues, grottoes, galleries, domes, rivers, and cataracts would entail a journey of 150 miles.

The largest existing library is the National Library of Paris. It contains forty miles of shelves, holding fourteen hundred thousand books.

The largest room in the world, under one roof, and unbroken by pillars, is at Petersburg. It is 620ft. long and 150ft. wide. Its roof is a single arch of iron. This room is used for military displays, and a whole battalion can manoeuvre in it.

The longest canal in existence is the Imerial Canal of China. Its length is a thousand miles.

The largest sun-dial in the universe is Hayou Horoo, a large promontory extending 3,000ft. above the AEgean Sea. In the course of each day the sun throws the shadow of this mountain on one after another of a circle of islands, which act as hour marks as surely as the figures on an ordinary dial.

The Latest in Sleeves.

Some of the new French sleeves are absolutely plain and tight-fitting, with not even a braid motif, tiny cap, frill, or slight pouf at the top, others have flat folds, five or six in number, as a finish to the sleeves, or a portion of the slight fulness is shirred or tucked, the rest left as a very small puff. Flat epaulets, covering the tops of the sleeves, are used in lieu of any other sort of decoration for giving additional breadth to the shoulders. Crescent-shaped pieces, formed of the dress goods or velvet, or other trimming, are shirred at the edges, forming a little half-inch ruffle at the edge, and this is set upon the shoulders, the widest portion at the top, the pointed ends going under the arms. This semi-puff covers the seam which joins the sleeve to the bodice. For women who have rather large arms, or those with very thin ones—who do not look well in the very outlining, tight coat shapes—the best selection by far is the sleeve of the modified mutton-leg shape, so graceful in its present modes of adjustment, and so easily fashioned. If desired, it can be made to fit the arm very closely from elbow to wrist, but above the elbow there is ease and freedom.

A Nose Show.

We have heard of baby shows, beauty shows, and barmaid shows, but for the first time we have come across a report of a nose show. This took place at Milan a few months ago, and seems to have been at least the second of its kind. Duly appointed judges sat in a room surrounded by drawings of the principal nasal types, and with instruments of measurement of the caliper kind on the table. There were twenty-three candidates who competed for three prizes. What the standard of excellence in a nose may be we have not yet learned, but the winner on this occasion received a certificate informing him that, among other beauties, his nose was "trenchant like a knife blade."

New Round Waists.

For those who do not find the numerous new round-waisted costumes becoming, there are basque-bodice and jacket styles, also skirts of broadcloth or ladies' cloth, with long, three-quarter coats en suite, the fronts very much rounded and cut away, arching well toward the hips, and showing very much of the vest, which is elaborate or extremely plain and simple, according to the style of the costume itself. These curved fronts are features of many—indeed, most—of the fashionable capes and coats and also of some of the open-fronted Directoire overdresses.

The most magnificent tomb in the world is deemed to be the palace Temple of Karnak, occupying an area of nine acres, or twice that of St. Peter's at Rome. The temple space is a poet's dream of gigantic columns, beautiful courts, and wondrous avenues of sphinxes.

DAY WITH THE POPE.

MARVELOUS PHYSICAL AND MENTAL VIGOR OF LEO XIII.

How the World's Greatest Religious Monarch Spends His Time—Works Fifteen Hours Daily Despite His Great Age—His Frugal Habits.

Of all Christian churches that of Rome is the greatest, and over its 230,000,000 members the pope reigns supreme. He is the greatest religious power in the world, and at the present time, when his health is giving such anxiety, some account of his daily life cannot fail to be interesting.

As the great clock of St. Peter's strikes 7 the pope's valet enters his bedroom, a large square apartment, simply furnished. Throwing open the windows, Centra wishes his holiness good morning and proceeds to assist his venerable master to dress. His toliet completed, the pope performs his morning devotions and proceeds to the next room, which is fitted up as an oratory, where he celebrates mass. Occasionally highly privileged persons are permitted to be present at this service, which lasts about 45 minutes. A second mass is afterward celebrated by one of the household prelates, at which all the inhabitants of the Vatican, including the pope, are present. His holiness then breakfasts in his study, the meal consisting of a cup of strong soup and a few chocolate pastilles.

The pope then goes into the library, where he gives an audience to specially favored pilgrims. It is in these interviews that the marvelous memory and learning of the pope are best shown. German, English, French, Spanish and Italian—his native language—he speaks with fluency. His holiness addresses each pilgrim in his own language, discussing with them the leading topics of their respective countries. Leo reads many newspapers and is fully acquainted with the world and all its doings. His visitors gone, the pope commences his day's work. His first task is to revise and alter the work of the previous day, for he is a most painstaking and fastidious scholar. While engaged in these literary labors he refreshes himself with an occasional pinch of snuff. At 10 a. m. the secretary of state, Cardinal Rampolla, enters, and with him the pope goes through the political correspondence of the day.

The pope's annual income has been estimated at $2,600,000, and about $1,450,000 of this goes in maintaining the household of the Vatican. Though by no means a miser, Leo is very careful. His valet keeps all his keys, with the exception of the key of the strong box, which the pope himself retains. His holiness gives away large sums in charity every year.

At noon the pope dines. The meal consists of an omelette, a roll of bread and a little cheese, washed down by a single glass of red wine. The pope then takes his constitutional in one of the numerous halls of the Vatican, after which he is carried in a sort of sedan chair by two stalwart lackeys into the garden and placed in his carriage. He is driven down the avenues, accompanied by an officer of his guard and two gendarmes. At the Cascata dell' Aquila the pope alights, and, leaning on a stick, strolls up and down the terrace. Here is a fine vineyard, which is one of the pope's hobbies, and a profitable hobby it is, seeing that it yields an annual harvest of 1,500 gallons of wine. The cultivation of tea roses is another hobby of his holiness.

Near this place, the pope's playground, stands the huge tower of the Citta Leonia, a building which dates back to the eighth century. As evening approaches the pope proceeds to this tower alone, and until sunset he remains in its solitary dungeon. What he does there nobody knows. It has been suggested that he indulges in a nap or that he arranges his future plans. At all events, much of his literary work is done in this large, empty room. As the sun goes down the pope returns to his apartments and after telling his rosary sets to work and does not retire to rest until midnight. When seeking an inspiration, he walks to his study window and, drawing aside the curtains, gazes long and silently at the brilliant sky of an Italian night. At 12 o'clock his holiness goes to bed, to wake up at 7 o'clock, to live the same day over again.

The pope is in his eighty-ninth year, and despite his great age he is a marvel of physical and intellectual vigor. Since his election to the chair of St. Peter his death has been foretold scores of times, and the rumors of his ill health have filled numberless newspaper columns, but Leo XIII has proved the truth of the adage, "Threatened men live long." Such is the daily life of the man who is regarded as their spiritual and temporal ruler, and as infallible in all things, by more than one-half of all the Christians upon the face of the globe.—London Mail.

The holy father, who is a great admirer of modern scientific methods and keenly appreciates their advantages, has given orders for the Vatican palace to be lighted by electricity. Motive power will be furnished by the cascade known as "Cascata dell Aquilone." The present pontiff has perhaps done more in the way of improving the Vatican palace than any of his predecessors. Without mentioning the beautifully artistic restorations of many historic halls, such as the Borgia apartments, he has been the first to attempt the by no means easy task of artificially warming the Vatican by a very perfect system of caloriferes, which have rendered the temperature of the long corridors and lofty halls delightfully cozy even in the coldest days of winter when a stiff "tramontana" blows. This innovation, which is a decided improvement, was, it appears, suggested by Professor Lapponi, the pope's physician.—London Catholic Times and Opinion.

AN AMERICAN POPE.

Speculations by Europeans on Pope Leo's Successor.

The possibility that the next pope may be an American is discussed with considerable interest abroad. The well informed Catholic writer, Jean Berthelet, in his recent pamphlet, "Si le Pope doit-etre Italian?" (Must the Pope Be an Italian?) gives a decided negative answer to his question and shows how easily circumstances might call for the election of a pope from among America's ecclesiastics. After stating that since the days of Avignon it had been in the interests of the curia to elect only an Italian to this office he acknowledges that circumstances have so changed in the church in recent years, especially through the development of an independent spirit within the Catholic church of America, that this time honored custom might of necessity be changed. This development, especially from the American side, must gradually influence the management of affairs in Rome. The author says:

"Either the new world will so powerfully affect the old that the system of the papacy must be materially changed in its outward manifestations, and among these the mode of electing the pope, or the old world itself will be changed to such an extent that it will look for other means of existence. In the one case or the other the necessity may arise that the new pope shall be an American, or at least come from a non-European country. In this way circumstances may even force the election of an American pope. But have things developed so far?"

In other quarters similar sentiments are heard. In a series of articles on Pope Leo XIII found in the Christliche Welt of Leipsic the writer concludes with these words: "It seems almost a desirable thing that the next ruler in the Vatican should be a transatlantic pope. A pious priest from America or even from Australia would be like the dawn of a new morning in the Vatican and would remove the darkness of night caused by heavy local and low earthly interests that envelop the papal system as it is now, and Christianity would then possibly be able to witness the advent of a religious pope and of a religious Catholicism, and the contest between the two great communions, Protestantism and Catholicism, would be of a purely religious nature."—Literary Digest.

DIED IN THE FAITH.

A Missionary Priest Tells of an Experience in the Glacial Regions.

In a letter to Les Missions Catholiques, Father Bonnald of the Saskatchewan district relates a touching incident of his missionary career. An epidemic that had been raging in the glacial regions wherein his lot is cast had prevented him for some weeks from visiting one of the villages intrusted to his spiritual care. When he was finally enabled to harness his dogs to his sledge and visit the village in question, he found sickness and death reigning supreme. The good missionary writes:

"I found 11 bodies stretched out on the cabin mats, rigid in death, with the temperature 40 degrees below zero. I approached the remains to recite a prayer and found, to my astonishment, that in the right hand of each corpse was clasped a little package—a piece of birch bark folded in two. On the outside was written, 'Only our father (the priest) may read the inclosed lines.' It was a confession. My poor people, feeling death approach and unable to confess their sins to God's minister, had written them on slips of bark—the papyrus of these northern latitudes. At the bottom of each sheet was some such request as: 'Pray, father, say a mass for the repose of my soul. I leave to you, in gratitude for this service, a beaver skin,' etc."

Before such an evidence of the faith and the naive dispositions of his departed children we can readily believe that the good missionary was moved to tears, says The Ave Maria. His ministry had not been in vain. His people had heard him explain that, in default of a confessor, perfect contrition and a desire to receive the sacraments suffice to justify the sinner, and they desired to testify to God, their conscience and their spiritual father that they had died in these salutary dispositions.

THE BISHOP'S RING.

Its Beautiful Significance and the Reason Why One Is Worn.

The bishop is the only Catholic clergyman who wears a ring. Its significance is very beautiful. The ring is the pledge of faith with which Christ wedded the church his spouse. As the young man puts a ring on the finger of his spouse so the bishop receives a ring at his consecration to show that he is wedded to the church, his diocese, and he wears it as a pledge of his faith toward that church, that he may love it like himself.

When the prelate places the ring on his finger, he says the following prayer, "Beautify the fingers of my body and soul, O Lord, and surround me with the sevenfold holiness of the spirit." In olden times letters were always sealed with a ring, and their genuineness was known by the bishop's seal. Such was the origin of the episcopal ring and of the large stone set in it. There is an indulgence of 40 days for kissing the ring of the bishop.

Mother.

It brings my mother back to me,
Thy frail familiar form to see,
Which was her homely joy;
And strange that one so weak as thou
Should lift the veil that sunders now

Berlin. Nach dem jüngsten Verwaltungsbericht wurden für die Zeit vom 1. April 1897—98 aus den 27 Volksbibliotheken 600,853 Bände nach Hause verliehen, das ist etwa 60,000 Bände mehr als im vorhergehenden Jahre. Seit sechs Jahren zeigt die Benutzung der Bibliotheken überhaupt eine sehr erfreulich steigende Tendenz. Da die Bibliotheken einen Bücherbestand von 100,000 Bänden besitzen, so wird jeder vorhandene Band durchschnittlich sechsmal im Jahre verliehen. —Während der hiesige Pastor Roller aus seiner Wohnung abwesend war, drangen Einbrecher in dieselbe ein, verwundeten die greise Magd, Rosalie Kaiser, und raubten die Wohnung vollständig aus.—Der langjährige Kammerdiener des Fürsten Bismarck, Pinnow, der nach dem Tode des Fürsten von der Familie Bismarck entlassen wurde, ist vom Kaiser als Portier in dem nicht weit von hier gelegenen Schlosse Bellevue angestellt worden.—In der Stockfabrik der Strafanstalt Plötzensee bei Berlin brach Feuer aus, das indessen bald gelöscht wurde, da sich auch die Gefangenen eifrigst an den Löscharbeiten betheiligten.

In der Nähe des hiesigen Bahnhofes wurde das vor dem Gespann des Stellmachers Pohlmann gehende Pferd vor dem herannahenden Zuge scheu und lief querfeldein getadenwegs auf die Schienen, wo der Zug den Wagen faßte und zertrümmerte. Pohlmann wurde nur leicht verwundet, dagegen erlitt seine Frau so gefährliche Verletzungen, daß sie bald darauf starb.

Zu retten war absolut nichts, da kein Wasser da war, und die Häuser allesammt Strohdächer hatten. Die Dorfbewohner standen in der von beiden Seiten brennenden Dorfstraße und mußten zusehen, wie alle ihre Habe, Mobiliar und die bedeutenden Erntevorräthe, auch viel Vieh, ein Raub der Flammen wurden. Etwa 20 Gebäude, viele Scheunen, Stallungen u. s. w. liegen in Asche; das Dorf ist vom Erdboden verschwunden.

CHAPTER VIII.

Elizabeth, having obediently tried to eat some dinner, had sat thinking in the dusk for a long time after Gregory Latimar had left her. Then a restless feeling had seized her; she felt as if she could not live through another long, hot, sleepless night unless she had some exercise, and the invigoration of the outer air which she had denied herself for the last few days.

"When Lady Feodora comes, tell her that I have gone into the Square garden for half an hour," she said to the maids. She decided that she would be better able to meet Feo's disappointed eyes and all her pretty little pleading if, when they met, they were clear of the close, miserable depression of the old house. Indeed Elizabeth had a great dread of meeting Feo at all just now; it seemed to her so cruel to have to repulse the tender thought for herself that was surging in Feo's mind. She hoped earnestly that Gregory would have prepared the way for her; but she felt only too sure that his little wife would not accept the situation as quickly as he had done.

"I shall feel stronger out in the air," she said to herself.

It was close upon nine o'clock; Feo might arrive at any moment now. So she put on her shabby old hat, covered her face with a veil, wrapped an old cloak about her—for her unhappiness, her lack of food, sleep, and the confinement to the hous had made her both faint and cold—and walked out through the big hall-door just as Sir Antony's cab had pulled up by the curb beyond.

For an instant Elizabeth paused, and drew back with a sense of fear. The door had closed behind her. She felt that she was caught in a trap. She had hoped and intended to avoid any meeting at present with Richard Saville, if it were possible. The sight of a man alighting from a cab made her suddenly draw her breath. She felt so sure it must be he who had come. Then the fear went from her, and her heart gave a great leap of relief and of pleasure too.

As Antony Pelle came up to her she held out her hand to him. She guessed at once the reason of his visit; she knew he had come from Feo. Somehow it did not seem at all strange to her that he should be there; and the clasp of his hand, with all its expression of sympathy, seemed familiar to her, as though she were meeting an old and true friend.

"I have brought you a little note, Miss Druro," Antony said; "but, all the same, was going to ask you to see me. Feo seemed to think I could explain things better if I had an interview with you. She was afraid you would be anxious about 'Pootles.' She is not seriously ill," the young man hastened to add, as a little exclamation escaped Elizabeth.

The girl drew her hand away from his and tore open Lady Feo's note, glancing at it in the uncertain light of a lamp. Sir Antony stood aside, waiting while she read the few hurried words. She had thrown back her veil, and it pained him to see how pale and tired she looked.

"It is only some slight indisposition," he remarked, as he saw that she was really troubled; "but Feo did not care to leave the child. She sent you her love, and begs you not to worry; you shall have news in the morning—she will come herself."

"It was like Feo to think of me," Elizabeth said, as she folded the letter again; then she thanked Antony gently for coming. "You are very kind," she added; and her voice, which had been so fresh and sweet in his ears the last time they met, sounded tired and full of trouble now. "I must send Feo a few words, Sir Antony, if you will be so kind as to wait."

As Antony Pelle came up to her she held out her hand to him. She guessed at once the reason of his visit; he had come for Feo

She turned to ring the bell, but he stopped her.

"You were going out, were you not? Please do not let this prevent you. There is no hurry. I have nothing to do. Feo I am sure would much prefer that you had your walk before writing to her. I—I dare say," Antony said, half shyly, "you have not been out of the house for several days."

Elizabeth answered with a faint smile—

"Not for a week." She pulled down her veil and gave a little shiver. "It seems much longer," she added, in a low voice—"very much longer!"

Antony stretched out his hand a second time; the action was involuntary, but to the poor, tired, overwrought girl it was exceedingly pleasant.

"May I come with you?" he asked, gently yet eagerly. "It is dark and lonely in the Square now. But, perhaps"—he broke off in the same half-shy manner again—"perhaps you would rather be alone?"

Elizabeth's veiled cheeks had a tinge of warm color; he could not see it, but he was sensible of the sincerity in her voice as she answered him simply:

"I shall be very glad if you will come, Sir Antony."

They left the doorway and walked across the road; but at the gate of the Square he suddenly paused.

"Oh, I almost forgot! Feo told me I was to be sure and ask you if you had had any dinner!"

Elizabeth laughed—a faint amused little laugh. His tone was serious, it was evident that he regarded the matter with quite as much gravity as even Feo could desire.

"I have had a tremendous meal!" she said almost brightly. "If you like, I will write out the menu of my dinner, so that Feo can read for herself and rest satisfied that I am not being starved!"

He echoed her laugh; then the gate was unlocked and swung back, and they passed in through the hedge of shrubs, and were alone under the lofty old trees, which, with the patch of sooty London grass, was the only bit of "country" Elizabeth had ever known.

The girl gave a quick sigh of relief as they entered the old garden. She unfastened her veil from about her hat, and threw back her head to inhale the cool night air and enjoy the breeze that stirred the trees to a rustling whisper.

"Oh, the fresh air is welcome!" she said, half to him, half to herself. "Already I feel better."

She took another deep breath, and he watched her eagerly, feeling that he was sharing in the refreshment and pleasure which the out-of-door-atmosphere gave to her tired head and heart. He himself was conscious of a sudden tender restfulness in his own breast, of a hush, a lull, for the moment, of the clamoring trouble, the remorse, regret, despair that had never been silenced for so many months till now.

It was very quiet in this old Square garden. There was no moon, but the lamps outside gave a faint glare of light; and, though the night was gray and close, the sky was not dark.

She walked once round the inner path in silence. It was not the silence of constraint or the awkwardness which might have arisen from the presence of a stranger; it was a silence of sympathy. For to both of them came the feeling that they were not strangers to each other.

Feo's peculiar affection for them both, her confidence to each about the other, had prepared the way for a sympathy, a friendship, a mutual liking which nevertheless would have come naturally to them in any circumstances; so, though this was but the third time they had met and exchanged words, they felt already as if they were old friends, between whom the charm and the comprehension of silence were not only pardonable, but permissible.

But, as they were walking slowly on, it suddenly struck Sir Antony that the footsteps beside him were growing rather feeble. As this thought came to him, he broke the silence instantly.

"I think you ought to sit down," he said. "I am sure you are very tired, Miss Druro."

Elizabeth confessed to feeling strangely fatigued, even weak; her limbs ached, and her head swam a little.

"I suppose it is because I have stayed in the house so much. I have never been so long before without air or exercise. Grannie"—the name came softly from her lips—"was very good about that. She could not walk much herself, but she always liked me to have my daily exercise out-of-doors. I—I expect I have missed it without realizing it."

Antony sat down beside her on the wooden seat.

"I am sure you have missed it. I think there is nothing so hard to bear as being shut up in the house even for a single day."

"I think it must be very hard for a man," Elizabeth said.

She spoke dreamily—her weakness did not pass away immediately. She was leaning back in her corner watching the shifting shadows thrown upon the grass by the light of the lamp beyond the moving trees. Nothing was quite definite to her at the moment; her mind had lapsed into one of those curious spells of vagueness, when everything seems far distant and strangely small, which are common to an overworked brain, or to one who has passed through some physical illness. It was not an unpleasant sensation; after the acute thought of the past few days, with their long sleepless nights, this waking dream with a sort of relief to the girl. She made no effort to rouse herself: she felt as if she were drifting, drifting, drifting away into a land of clouds, of gentle warmth, of soft winds that floated about her, bringing her calm sleep and utter forgetfulness.

Out of this dream, this curious vision of soft delight, Elizabeth was awakened by an anxious voice, and by the consciousness that her hands were being held by another pair that trembled a little, strong though they were.

"Oh," Antony said, with a sigh of relief, as her eyes opened, "you are better? I was alarmed for a moment, Miss Druro. I was afraid that you had fainted. I did not know what to do. Please tell me. Can I get you anything? Some brandy—some water?"

Elizabeth drew herself up.

"I did not faint," she said; but her voice was strangely weak. "I was falling asleep, I believe. I am very rude, Sir Antony. I hope you will forgive me?"

Sir Antony did not loose his clasp of her hands.

"I feel very troubled about you," he said simply, and a sudden rush of tears came into the girl's eyes as she noted his tender solicitude. "I feel I oughtn't to let you stay out here. I wish Feo had been able to come to you to-night; she would have known exactly what to do for you. Don't you think you ought to go indoors again, Miss Druro? And won't you please send for the doctor?"

Elizabeth smiled at him as she slowly drew her hands away from his.

"I have never had a doctor as long as I can remember; and indeed I am not ill, Sir Antony: I am only tired. It has been so hot; and then I have not slept much lately"—and she smiled again. "But I shall sleep to-night," she said, "just to show my gratitude for your kindness. The air and—and your sympathy will do more for me than any doctor." She rose from the seat. "I want to be well to-morrow," she added. "I have so much to do before I start."

With almost the anxiety with which a mother would watch a delicate child, Antony watched her as they again began to walk.

"You must let me help you," he said, after a moment or two; and he drew her hand within his arm and held it there.

She made no protest, for she was grateful for the support. At the gate Elizabeth turned and looked back.

"It is sad to say farewell even to a poor old garden like this," she said. "I have spent so many hours of my life here, Sir Antony. I have dreamed all my dreams, read all my favorite books under these trees. I have watched the flowers come in the spring, and I have been happy in a quiet, subdued kind of way. Now I am going to see the world outside, just as I have wanted to see it so many times; and I feel as though I were afraid as well as sorry to say 'Good-bye' to my old home!"

Two big tears rolled down her cheeks, her quivering lips caused him a deep pang.

"Oh, Feo was right—doubly, trebly right!" he said to himself. It should have been all sunshine and perpetual sympathy for this poor, pale, delicate girl, not a life of struggle, of monotonous drudgery, of dependence, of suffering.

Before he could utter the words that were rushing to his lips, she was speaking hurriedly, eager to hide her momentary weakness.

"But I am going to see the country at last. Nothing small or smoky, like a town-garden, but everything wide and far-reaching, fresh, green, and beautiful! Ah, that will be some compensation! You cannot think how I have yearned to see the country and the sea! It seems as if life must be better, sweeter, easier where there is so much space. I quite long for the moment when I shall stand and look at the fields stretching away for miles around me. And this, too, is the time when the corn stands high. The country will be a new world to me. I think I am to be envied for all the wonderful impressions I am going to have."

He locked the gate in a stern way—he had to be stern and stiff with something or somebody, otherwise he must betray to her how deeply his heart was touched by her words, what a depth of anxiety for her lay beneath his sympathy!

"You make me ashamed of myself, Miss Druro!" he said almost humbly—and there was a pathetic ring of truth in his voice as he spoke. They had left the garden-gate and were walking slowly across the road. "I have known the country all my life, and yet, as you know, I had to rush to other lands to find the charm, the beauty you have realized even without seeing it. How I should like——" He broke off suddenly, then resumed. "Perhaps you will come some day with Feo and pay a visit to my old home at Speede. The country all around us is, I am sure, just what would delight you."

"I am going into Westshire," Elizabeth said, with a half-sigh, apparently ignoring his invitation, but giving it a treasured place in her memory. "I do not know whether it is a beautiful country—I hope it is."

"'You will be within a stone's throw of my home!' he cried excitedly"

"Westshire!" Antony halted suddenly in the middle of the road. "Why, my place Speede is in the heart of Westshire, Miss Druro!"

Elizabeth smiled faintly at his eagerness, and then an approaching cab made them move towards the pavement.

"That will make my new home seem less strange," she said softly. "I am going, as perhaps Feo has told you, to a school at Little Stonebury; it is only a small village, I believe; but——"

Sir Antony very nearly flung his hat into the air with pleasure.

"You will be within a stone's-throw of my home!" he cried excitedly. "Oh, this is simply splendid! Now Feo need not be anxious about you any more, for aunt Bertha will be there to look after you—my dear old 'mammy Bertha,' as I have always called her, Miss Druro—the sweetest, dearest old creature in the world! When you see her, you will fall in love with her! and she will adore you. Oh, this is one of the nicest things that could possibly have happened! It seems indeed too nice to be real!"

Elizabeth was not smiling now; her heart was beating very quickly. Such a strange discovery as this had been very far from her thoughts; it checked her suddenly—it made what had seemed an easy solution to her difficulties grow full of possible difficulties also. The alternative her grandmother had put before her in the event of her refusing to become Richard Saville's wife had held out no suggestion of pleasure; life in a country schoolhouse, under, no doubt, a cold and austere rule, was not fraught with much that promised pleasure, hope, or sympathy. Yet Elizabeth had turned to it resolutely, eagerly. It was her way to escape, she had said to herself, from all her difficulties, her shield against the tremendous temptations that would assail her if she were forced to remain and struggle hourly with Feo's plaintive affection and with her own yearnings for a bright happy life. She had told herself that she must be prepared to meet a future even harder, colder, more unsympathetic than her young past had been; but this had not checked her determination. The bitter morbid wrath and disappointed pride and love that had grown so fierce and fixed in the dead old woman's heart for many years were permitted to exercise an influence over the girl's sensitive nature now which was not to be measured by words. To combat such an influence Gregory's wisdom went farther than his wife's sympathy. Elizabeth must carry out her resolution, he had decided. Time and circumstances would help far more to throw the light of healthy common sense and reasoning upon the futile and enormous sacrifice such a determination entailed than any words of entreaty, reproach, or regret they could utter, and Gregory's wisdom was likely to be proved even sooner than he expected.

Until the present moment, when a few chance words had completely altered her position, and had brought her sharply face to face with the very difficulties which she imagined her coming departure would settle for once and forever, Elizabeth had really had no conception of the greatness of the task she had set herself to carry out, not for a day, but for all her life. For the first time since the iron of her resolve had entered into her soul she faltered. It was indeed a curious trick that Fate was playing her. There was a wild fluttering of her pulses as she realized all that this new position of affairs meant to her. At a touch all the sense of rest, of complete acquiescence—dull and sorrowful as it had been—vanished, and a thrilling excitement had taken its place. It flashed through her mind too that some higher work might justly be demanded of those gifts and faculties which had so generously been bestowed upon her than a life of self-imposed sacrifice that was so unnatural for a girl of her age and temperament.

As she moved onward, she became dimly conscious of Antony's continued expressions of pleasure, through the rush of emotions that filled her; his voice came to her ears more clearly than she had yet heard it. There was no mistake about the young man's satisfaction.

When they reached the house, Elizabeth roused herself to send a few words to Lady Feo, while Antony waited in the hall and let his eyes travel over the shabby depressing surroundings with an involuntary shudder as he realized now to the full what kind of life this girl had lived here for so many years.

"You have promised to sleep, remember," he said quite gravely, as she came back to him after a while and put her note into his hand.

Elizabeth amended her promise a little.

"I shall try to sleep all night," she answered, for she knew she had many hours of wakefulness and new and troubled thought before her. "Good-bye, Sir Antony!" she added, with the smile from her lips and eyes that made her sweet pale face so lovely to him. "I can try to sleep, but I cannot even hope to let you understand how much I appreciate your kindness!"

"I have done nothing," the young man replied; "it is you who have been kind to me, Miss Druro, for you have let me feel I am your friend, and that is something I prize very much.

He paused as he passed out of the door, and looked back almost wistfully at her pale sad face—she had followed him, and was standing close beside him.

"I hope you will always call me your friend," he said earnestly. "I—I am not of much use, but still, if you will try me——" Their hands met once again, and remained clasped for several moments. "You know all that is in my thoughts for you and your grief?" he added very softly. "I have never been eloquent of speech; but perhaps you will forgive just as you will understand?"

"Yes," Elizabeth said, with tear-filled eyes and a little break in her voice—"I understand, and I thank you from my heart!"

He turned away from her at last regretfully.

"It is only 'Au revoir!'" he said: then he ran down the steps, and had vanished into the dusk of the night as she closed the hall-door.

THE WESTERN FARMER.

It Is a Great Race That Is Peopling the Plains and Prairies

Dr. Albert Shaw says, in an article in the Century, on "The Trans-Mississippians and their Fair at Omaha: When one bears testimony to the fineness and beauty of all this array of machinery—a beauty that lies in the ever-increasing perfection of its fitness for the conditions that have to be met—one is really paying a tribute to the brains, energy and character of the Western farmer. I have been on the Hungarian plains and witnessed the costly attempts of a progressive government to teach the landowners and peasants the use of improved farm machinery imported from America or else adapted from American types. And I have also observed—what is confessed by the government and noted by all who visit those regions—the persistent fact of scores of men, women and children in the corn-fields with old-fashioned hoes, while long rows of white-tunicked men, in the hay-field or the ripe grain, are swinging sickles and short scythes. And a little later in the season it is common enough to see the oxen treading out the grain or to hear the thud of the descending flail. Meanwhile, the new-fashioned corn-plows are rusting; the rejected mowing and reaping-machines rot in their neglected corners, and the threshing-machine is viewed askance as an ill-omened monstrosity.

It is all simply a difference in men. It is a great race that has peopled our prairies and plains, and that is producing corn, wheat, and oats by the thousands of millions of bushels where only a few years ago there was the ancient matted sod of the prairies, unbroken for centuries. The men who drive the gang-plow, ride the sulky-cultivator, manipulate the twine-binder and send millions of horned cattle, hogs and sheep to the packing establishments of Omaha, Kansas City and Chicago are to be credited with a series of achievements worthy not merely of respect, but even of enthusiasm. I cannot for a moment doubt the ability of such men to rear a fine and varied fabric of civilization upon so great a material foundation.

Condensed milk is now put up in cakes; flour is pressed in the shape of bricks; we have frozen meat and codfish in the shape of balls; there is whiskey in the solid form, and air comes as a liquid—all of which seems to indicate that living is being made simpler in many respects. But where is the scientist who can reduce his rent to a size that will not be troublesome to carry?—Baltimore American.

five-minute recess to confer about delegates. This motion was defeated, but it did not deter William Emery, of Scotch Plains, from saying that since Judge Nooman had got out of the race it put a different phase on the situation. While the delegates were quibbling over this point it was shown that Col. Snyder would be nominated, and so Mayor Seymour announced that Hudson changed her vote to Snyder. Union county followed suit, and the nomination was made unanimous.

A committee was appointed to escort Col. Snyder to the hall, and upon his appearance he was greeted enthusiastically. He was introduced to the convention and then delivered a short speech, in which he expressed thanks for the honor and promised to do his best to be elected, and if elected to serve the district faithfully in Washington.

After further routine business the convention adjourned.

GAVE UP THE PLANKS.

County Property Found in a Yard on Elm Place.

Constable Rockafellow visited 64 Elm place yesterday afternoon, in company with Freeholder John H. Tier, and discovered in the yard adjoining the house several heavy bridge planks which were missed from the Elm street bridge over Green brook, recently.

The constable was armed with a search-warrant, as the result of a complaint made by Freeholders Andrew Lutkins and John H. Tier yesterday morning. The lady of the house, in order to avoid trouble, gave up the planks, and settled the matter agreeably to all parties.

No Notification Given.

Central avenue, which was macadamized only a short time ago, has been resurveyed and the grade changed, necessitating the road bed to be ploughed up and again macadamized with a drain for carrying the surplus water, leading to Cedar brook through Randolph Stelle's and Percy C. Ohl's property. Though the latter property was considerably damaged, no notification of the work being done was given to the owner.

DISCLAIMED THE STAGE.

Bernhardt Says She Was Born To Be a Painter and Nothing Else.

It seems to be given to few mortals to succeed in the line of life which they most love. Even the greatest actress of her time, Bernhardt, named of the public the divine, says: "I have never thought that I was born to be an actress. I was born to be a painter and nothing else. Of all things in this world I love painting best. Circumstances made an actress of me; first, a very poor actress, for all the critics could not have been mistaken, and there was not one who did not join in my condemnation. Then I sank into comparative obscurity, but I worked. What was before me I did not like, but I would not consent to being a failure."

The real genius is the one who is strong to conquer environment, and so, because the little, thin, red haired girl made up her young mind to do the best she could with a profession not wholly congenial, Mme. Bernhardt is such a Camille, a Theodora, Fedora, Cleopatra, Adrienne, Izeyl, Donna Sol, Marie de Neuberg and Lorenzeccio as the world never saw before. The story of Bernhardt is familiar—how she trembled before the tribunal of the Comedie Francaise, and afterward became its chief glory and la grande tragedienne. Her eccentricities, her violent outbursts of temper, her brusquerie and her fine diplomatic feeling, her moral peccadillos, her artistic achievements and her extravagances, have been the talk of the civilized world. She is upward of 50 and a grandmother, but age has not even lined her face. It has been said that great as Bernhardt is, she has only two notes—a feline caressingness, which may pass for love, and a tigerish passion, which does duty for hatred or revenge. For all that, no one disputes her place as the first of living actresses. Millions of dollars she has earned, yet she has not grown rich, and probably all she owns in the world is a summer home on the rock-bound coast of her beloved Brittany.

SOMERSET COUNTY PREPARES FOR WAR.

Lively Times In Both Political Parties This Fall.

COUNTY CONVENTIONS NEXT

REPUBLICAN LEADERS ARE RUMORED TO BE AT ODDS.

Each Side Has a Ticket Ready for the Convention—Then Will Come the Fight--Assemblyman VanDorn After Shrievalty Nomination—Cooper for Assembly Rival—Nothing Certain Yet.

(Special to The Daily Press.)

Somerville, October 14—Everything points to an exciting time in the coming campaign throughout the county of Somerset. The Republican and Democratic ships are tossing about in the sea of politics without making much headway as yet. The truth is, there are lively contentions in both parties for the party honors to be settled at the coming county conventions next week. Then both sides will probably settle down to fight each other and forget past differences.

As yet, however, they haven't settled down by any means, and both of the conventions that will be held here Wednesday and Thursday promise to be lively affairs. The interest deepens every day, and no one can predict just how it is going to turn out and who will be the ones to capture the coveted places.

There are two factions in the Republican party of the county that will battle for supremacy. Ex-Senator L. A. Thompson, now Clerk of the Supreme Court, is the recognized leader of the Republican party in Somerset county. Until a year ago, Senator Charles A. Reed, of Plainfield, was one of his ablest lieutenants. Since that time, the two leaders have not been on as good terms politically as they might have been. It has been generally known throughout the county that the fight between the two factions, headed by these two leaders, was coming to the county convention. Of course, it is within the line of possibility that an agreement may be reached whereby both leaders will be satisfied and trouble averted. At present, however, no amicable arrangement exists.

There are half a dozen men who want to be the Republican nominee for the Assembly. Among the leading ones in the race is Edward Cooper, from Springdale, Warren township. He has a strong backing from that section and is looked on as a likely candidate. What favors his chances most is the rumor that his candidacy has been favorably passed on by Ex-Senator Thompson.

George Cooper, one of the most popular Republicans in Bridgewater township, is also after the nomination. He was the man that Senator Reed supported for the nomination for surrogate against H. W. Spencer, who was finally nominated and selected. Rumor has it that Senator Reed has picked up this Cooper as his candidate.

The shrievalty nomination will also see a lively contest. Mr. Snyder, of Franklin township, was looked on as the proper man to support but he has now withdrawn in favor of Mr. Schoonmaker, of the same place, an able worker but little known through the county. Schoonmaker has been picked as Thompson's candidate.

It is common talk that Senator Reed and Assemblyman VanDoren, of East Millstone, are close friends and fellow workers. VanDoren is making a strong canvass for the shrievalty nomination and seems to have the support of the Senator in his efforts.

Gave a Turtle Supper.

Wednesday evening the fishing party that captured the turtle at Bowmantown last Sunday, namely Sam Randolph, Tom Randolph, Eugene O'Reilly, Alex. Sargeant and Gus Martin, gave a turtle supper. The number of guests besides the fishing party was limited to one, Doc. Herbert. After searching the city for some Madeira wine, without success, they were obliged to take the next best, which was sherry, to serve with the savory dish. After everything had been prepared by the chef, Ira Beumont, the party sat down to the supper of turtle soup and necessary accessories, and everybody enjoyed themselves and voted that even if the turtle was captured on Sunday it was "all right." The supper was served at the home of Veteran Fisherman Sam Randolph, who proved himself an entertaining host. The friends of the party are anxiously waiting for the capture of "nuther."

—The Republican primary in the borough will be held this evening in the public school building basement.

MR. MARTINE REGRETS TURN DOWN OF DALY.

He Calls it Poor Policy for the Democratic Leaders.

GREAT ADMIRER OF DALY.

SAYS HE IS A DEMOCRAT THAT CAN BE DEPENDED UPON.

Mr. Martine Voted for Daly in the Gubernatorial Convention Because He Thought He Would Make a Splendid Candidate—Mr. Daly Indulges in a Rather Frank Sort of an Interview Also.

James E. Martine, known throughout New Jersey as the "Farmer Orator," and one of the old school of Democrats, was seen by a Press reporter this morning and asked what he thought of the "turning down" of William D. Daly, of Hoboken, by Chairman Daly, of Hoboken, by Chairman Gourley of the State committee.

"From my standpoint as to political and fair treatment," said Mr. Martine, "I deem it unwise. I personally esteem Mr. Daly. He is fearless and able, always defending the cause of the people. He is a Democrat in sunshine and storm alike. His vote in the Gubernatorial contest attested the hold he has on the New Jersey Democrats."

"Do you believe Mr. Daly will be luke warm or apathetic," was asked of Mr. Martine.

"No, no, Mr. Daly is too loyal to be that. I would as soon doubt myself as to believe such a course of him. I voted for Mr. Daly in the convention, because I believe him to be a Democrat of Democrats and would have made a splendid candidate for us to make a fight for."

"What do you think of the outlook?" was asked.

Hoboken, October 14.—A reporter met Senator William D. Daly at Hoboken yesterday morning as he was about to take a train for Newark, and asked him if it was true that he had written a letter to William B. Gourley, chairman of the recent State Democratic convention, in regard to his (Daly's) "turndown" as a member-at-large of the State committee.

"Most certainly I wrote to Mr. Gourley," replied the Senator in a decidedly suave way, and with a bow that was nothing if not Chesterfieldian.

"It was in the nature of a protest against ignoring you, I presume," ventured the reporter.

"That was the intention, to be sure," returned the Senator, as he grasped the handrail of the car.

"Mr. Gourley says that it was a very mild letter, indeed, remarked the reporter.

"Well, the letter itself can best tell that story. At least, I hope it can," was the Senator's reply as he stepped inside the car.

"You kept a copy of that letter, of course?" hazarded the reporter.

"Indeed I did. It is an invariable rule with me to take copies of all letters, business or personal."

"Would you mind giving out that letter for publication?" was the reporter's next remark.

"I most certainly would mind and do mind," and here the Senator settled down in a seat and proceeded to become interested. "The letter was written to Mr. Gourley, addressed to Mr. Gourley and mailed to Mr. Gourley. As a matter of courtesy to Mr. Gourley I do not think I should reveal its contents. It may be a mild letter and then again it may not be. But I say to you that Mr. Gourley has my full and free permission to give that letter to the press for publication."

The train was making tracks toward the Bergen tunnel by this time and the reporter, not having any particular business in Newark, bade good day to the Senator and left the train.

Bound Brook Pastor Married.

(Special to The Daily Press.)

Bound Brook, October 14.—Miss Isabella VanSyckel, daughter of Elbridge VanSyckel, and Rev. Charles Thomas Anderson, pastor of the Reformed church, both of this place, were married at the bride's home, Wednesday afternoon. The wedding was a very pretty one and was largely attended.

Lamp Exploded.

A lamp exploded in a second floor bed room at the home of Mrs. Case, of Church street, last evening at 6:50 o'clock. A still alarm was sent in to fire department headquarters but Al Dunavan and Hiram Hume extinguished the flames with pails of water before Second Assistant Engineer arrived. The damage to the rug and carpet was slight.

TO THE COMMON COUNCIL.

To the Members of the Common Council:

GENTLEMEN:—You were elected to your offices to govern the city as the majority of citizens and taxpayers would like to have it governed.

There is now pending before you an ordinance, which it is proposed to pass, granting a franchise to the Plainfield Street Railway Company to construct, operate and, most of all, TO SELL IF THEY WANT TO, a street railway.

Unfortunately for the welfare and best interests of the city, it has only been generally known within the last week that that franchise is of inestimable value and that the proposed terms of granting it are not comensurate with its worth.

The majority of people in Plainfield do not want you to grant this franchise on the terms proposed in the ordinance as it now stands. Within the short period that the matter has been agitated a strong sentiment to the effect that better terms should and can be secured is prevalent.

It is your duty to respect this sentiment.

If any one of you or all of you think there is a doubt about this true sentiment of the people—and we are convinced that there is no doubt about it; but admitting that you have—it is your evident duty not to pass this ordinance tonight, but to adjourn action on it until you are sure of the temper of the people in respect to it.

Postpone action for a week or a reasonable time, and you will be but doing your true duty to the people you present. Stop and consider the matter a little while longer and make sure of the exact attitude of the people towards the valuable right.

Because this sentiment has not been formulated before does not affect its importance or relieve you from misrepresentation if you do not heed it now. You are but the servants of the people and no matter how passive or silent they have been in the past to the value of this franchise, you will be performing a gross wrong if you adopt this ordinance tonight in the face of the opposition that has developed against it.

The people are beginning to realize the worth of this great public right and they want a fair compensation for it.

CELEBRATED ITS OWN ANNIVERSARY.

Delightful Entertainment at Trinity Reformed Church.

'TWAS A BIRTHDAY PARTY.

THE GUESTS BROUGHT BAGS OF PENNIES FOR THE CAUSE.

Birthday Party in Honor of Trinity's Eighteenth Year—Arranged by Ladies' Christian Work Society—A Mammoth Birthday Cake—The Committee Who Had the Worthy Affair in Charge.

The eighteenth birthday of Trinity Reformed church was celebrated last evening, and incidentally the good folk who came were asked to celebrate their own by a proper donation to the treasury of the Ladies' Christian Work Society of the church. The proper observance of the affair was taken in hand by the members of that active organization and a most delightful "birthday party" was the result.

The general plan of the birthday party is too well known to need explanation. Small bags were sent out to all the congregation, while the elders and deacons received large ones. Accompanying each was the following invitation:

This Birthday Party is all your own.
Nothing like it was ever known;
Your very best friends will entertain.
And feed you well while you remain.
With this we enclose a little sack.
We hope you'll bring or send it back
With cents as many as years you're old;
You needn't be scared, it will not be told.
Best wishes we send with these greetings hearty.
And hope you will attend your own Birthday Party.

The "party" was held in the lecture room which was crowded with the guests. An entertaining programme occupied the first part of the evening. It included well-rendered readings by Miss Mary A. Luckey. The first was "The Jealous Wife" and the second a favorite portion from "David Copperfield." Councilman William N. Runyon was present and was a general favorite from the start. He sang several negro dialect selections. "The Tattooed Men," his famous little ditty about the parrot, and the ever-popular "Irish Jubillee." He was recalled again and again. The remainder of the programme consisted of various selectons on S. C. Baker's phonograph. It was unusually loud and clear and was managed by its owner.

Then the birthday bags of the elders and deacons were called up. Elder G. L. VanEmburgh had his donation all in pennies set side by side in a pasteboard case.

E. E. Anthony acted as master of ceremonies and had something funny to say on each and every occasion. He next called for the remainder of the bags according to the months on which the donors were born.

There were 307 bags in all sent in, the contents of which amounted to $92.71, which was afterwards increased by voluntary contributions to $97. The money raised was for the upholstering fund of the church.

There was an immense cake, handsomely frosted, with "1880-1898," on top of it. Around it were eighteen candles which burned most of the evening. The cake was afterwards cut and served as refreshments with coffee. The room was prettily decorated. The principal decoration was a huge motto, "Many Happy Returns," in letters of evergreen and white. It was made by Mrs. J. C. VanDyke and Miss Mary VanEps.

During the latter part of the evening the phonograph was kept going. Councilman Runyon remained until the affair closed and sang several selections more that were received with enthusiastic applause.

The affair was arranged by Mrs. E. T. VanWinkle, president of the society, and a committee, chairmaned by Mrs. E. H. Bird. The other members of the committee were Mrs. P. M. Demarest, Mrs. F. A. Church, Mrs. H. W. Marshall, Mrs. Seaman Williams, Mrs. John Krymer, Mrs. Robert Clark, Jr., and Mrs. S. C. Baker. They also looked after the serving of refreshments that followed the entertainment.

Miss May Tracy, Miss Halloway, Miss Stober, Mrs. Walter Freeman, Miss Margaret Harold, Mrs. L. H. Bigiow, Jr., Mrs. George Randall, Miss May Clawson and Miss Oakley were in charge of the affair.

It was announced that a class in stenography would be started tomorrow evening under the direction of Miss Montague, a teacher in the North Plainfield Public High School, and on Saturday evening next a class in physical culture will be organized.

RECEIVER NEWHALL WON BIG LEGAL CASE.

Bitter Controversy Ended in the Supreme Court.

C. A. MARSH HIS LAWYER.

MR. NEWHALL'S HONESTY AND VERACITY HAD BEEN IMPUGNED.

National Bolt and Rivet Company Sued for a Bill of $1,100, But Mr. Newhall Filed a Counter Claim of $1,282—Lawyers Took a Long Time to Sum up in, and Jury Decided in Favor of Defendant.

Henry B. Newhall, as receiver of the Henry B. Newhall Company, appointed by the Chancellor, as defendant, and a Pennsylvania Corporation, as plaintiff, have been the principals in an exciting trial in the Supreme Court which ended yesterday with a verdict in favor of Mr. Newhall. The controversy was a bitter one and the two New York counsel for the Pennsylvania corporation, the National Bolt & Rivet Works, did not hesitate to impugn the honesty and varacity of the defendant. Craig A. Marsh, who represented Mr. Newhall, told the court and jury that he was glad to be able to meet that issue in a court room and present it for the decision of a competent court and jury, because as he would prove, there could be only one just answer.

The National Company brought the suit for a bill of goods amounting to someting over $1,100. Mr. Newhall admitted the bill to be correct but filed a counterclaim for hardware which he claimed to have sold to the National Company amounting to $1,282. The National Company denied having ordered the goods or having received them and insisted that the transaction was not all with their company, but with a Mr. Heyden. For nearly two years the company, Heyden and Newhall kept up a voluminous and acrimonious correspondence, all of which was produced in court. The court made no restriction as to the time the counsel on either side should take in addressing the jury and the respective counsel took full advantage of this privilege. Judge VanSyckel delivered an impartial charge, reviewing at considerable length the various questions involved and at its conclusion told the jury that the questions had been discussed with great ability by counsel on both sides and he was confident that the jury would reach a just verdict. The jury retired shortly after 1 o'clock and upon reassembling after the midday recess they rendered their verdict in favor of Mr. Newhall for the balance which he claimed due him. The result is that the National Company which brought

BRIDE AND GROOM FOOLED SERENADERS

A Wild Goose Chase After a Married Couple.

CHASED THE WRONG HACK.

THEN MR. AND MRS. CASE TOOK A TRAIN QUIETLY.

Wedding of Bessie Blair to Samuel Pyatt Case at the Home of the Bride's Parents—A Simple Ceremony—Two Pastors Officiated—Young Friends Planned Much Fun, But They Got Disappointed.

The marriage of Miss Bessie Elizabeth Blair, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ramsey Blair, of 306 East Second street, to Samuel Pyatt Case, son of Mrs. Susan P. Case, of Westervelt avenue, took place last evening at 7 o'clock at the home of the bride's parents in the presence of the relatives and very intimate friends of the bride and groom.

The marriage ceremony was performed by Rev. Charles E. Herring, of the First Presbyterian church, pastor of the bride, assisted by Rev. Dr. D. J. Yerkes, of the First Baptist church, pastor of the groom. The couple were married in a music room just off from the parlor, and the decorations were unique and pretty. Palms, ferns, white roses and carnations were arranged so as to form one large bank almost reaching to the ceiling. In this room, surrounded by admiring relatives and friends, the happy event was consummated. As the couple, unattended, entered the room, the wedding march was played on the piano by Howard M. Case, brother of the groom.

After the ceremony a reception was held, during which hearty congratulations were offered and a wedding supper was served. During the evening Mr. and Mrs. Case left the scene of festivities for a wedding tour through the south. They will spend a short time at Richmond, Va., after which they will visit friends on a plantation further south. On their return they will reside at 309 East Second street, where a home has been completely furnished and now awaits them.

The bride wore a brown cloth traveling gown with hat to match. She was not attended by a bridemaid, neither did the groom have a best man. The affair throughout was one of perfect simplicity and greatly admired.

The house decorations were very pretty. In the parlor clematis, carnations and smilax were used to good effect, while in the dining room the prevailing color was pink and the table presented a scene of beauty.

The groom is an employe of J. B. Stout & Co., commission merchants of 61 Warren street, and this firm remembered Mr. Case and his wife in a substantial manner by presenting them with a complete set of imported china, while the employes of the same house presented a gift of a solid set of silver. Other gifts of use and ornament were showered upon the happy couple.

The bride is one of Plainfield's most estimable young women. She has always been actively engaged in church work, and at present is a member of the choir of the First Baptist church. They start on life's journey with all the signs of prosperity and happiness, and this is wished for them by their many friends.

Among the guests present last evening was Rev. Dr. K. P. Ketcham, of Freeport, L. I., who was a former pastor of the bride. There were about sixty guests present in all.

The friends of the bride and groom had planned to give the newly-married couple a great send off, but they were fooled at the last moment after all their trouble. A coach was stationed on Washington street, and as a couple supposed to be Mr. and Mrs. Case got into it for the purpose of driving to Bound Brook to take a train for Philadelphia, the serenaders commenced their demonstration. Down Second street to Central avenue the coach went, and following closely behind were a precession of bicycles containing guests who were well provided with tin horns. Streamers bearing inscriptions "We've Just Been Married" and "We Are Off For Niagara Falls," could be seen floating in the breeze. When Central avenue was reaceed the coach returned to its starting place, and then out walked Dr. Anderson and Miss Agnes Blair. In the meantime Mr. and Mrs. Case had taken a carriage for the North Avenue station, and were on their way to Philadelphia when the guests returned disappointed.

T. A. Armstrong is detained at home today with cold in the head.

FIRE OVERPOWERS FOUR GOOD HORSES.

OTHER BUILDINGS SAVED.

MR. POWERS DECLARES IT THE WORK OF AN INCENDIARY.

Alleged Traces of Oil Found About Burning Structure—One Horse Almost Reached Freedom, But was Overcome—Heavy Loss and But Little Insurance—Reward Offered for Information.

A bright light in the eastern sky and an alarm from box 63, corner of Berckmag street and South avenue, last evening at 7:05 o'clock, led to a general belief that the enemies of the Hygeia Ice Company had been at work again. Instead, it proved to be the large barn belonging to Michael Powers & Co., near their office on South avenue, above Berckman street. When the fire was first discovered it was too far under way to be extinguished, and the structure was utterly destroyed.

Mr. Powers and one of his employes were in the office addressing some envelopes. Mr. Powers had returned from downtown and unhitched his horse by daylight. There had been no lamp or lantern in the barn that day. As they sat in the office, it was suddenly lighted up. Looking out, they saw the flames bursting out of the barn. The employe hurried to the corner to send in an alarm, but Charles Smith, of No. 2 Engine Company, who lives nearby, had already sent in one.

Mr. Powers and his neighbors rushed to the barn to save as much as possible. When the door was opened, the flames burst out so that it was almost impossible to enter. A portion of the harness stored there was saved. Those who were there at first claim that they saw burning oil about the door and could plainly distinguish its odor. They also declare that it would have been impossible for the fire to have gained such headway unless it was started in several parts of the barn at once, using inflamable materials.

The fire department arrived but the barn was then nearly destroyed and their efforts were mainly directed toward saving the adjacent buildings. The carriage shed was ablaze when they arrived but was soon extinguished.

There were four horses in the barn and all were burned to death. Three broke loose. One kicked down the side door and attempted to rush forth but fell dead on the threshold within a few feet of freedom.

The loss on the barn will amount to $800. It was insured to the amount of $300. The horses, harness, a sleigh and other contents of the barn are valued at $500, on which there was no insurance.

Outside of the testimony of Mr. Powers and those who were first on the scene, there is no other cause apparent for the origin of the fire. Mr. Powers is very sure that the conflagration was the work of an incendiary and has offered $500 reward for apprehension and conviction of those setting fire to his barn.

BICYCLE THIEF AGAIN.

Mrs. Henry VanName Had a New Spalding Wheel Stolen.

The cycle thief is around again at his dastardly work. Last evening between 6 and 6:15 o'clock some unknown person deliberately stole a Spalding wheel owned by Mrs. Henry VanName, of Elmwood place. Mrs. VanName had ridden to 921 Watchung avenue, where she stopped for a few minutes on an errand. When she came out for her wheel it was missing. A search was made about the yard and vicinity for the wheel, but it could not be found. Mrs. VanName came up to town at once and notified Chief of Police Grant of the theft and gave him the number of the stolen wheel. The chief is making every effort to find the wheel and it is thought that he will be successful.

Bicyclists Collided.

Early last evening David Anguerbauer, who is a bar-tender for John Rafferty, of Park avenue, met with a mishap while turning from Watchung avenue into North avenue, on his wheel. Another cyclist was going in the opposite direction and the two riders came together. Mr. Anguerbauer's hand was badly lacerated, and his wheel was a complete wreck. Mr. Anguerbauer did not know his opponent, but after a few apologies on both sides the two riders went on their way each feeling very sorry that the bad accident happened.

GET FLESH.

Get Strength, Vigor, Clear Complexion and Good Digestion, Not by Patent Medicine, But in Nature's Own Way.

Any honest physician will tell you that there is but one way to get increased flesh; all the patent medicines and cod liver oils to the contrary notwithstanding.

Nature has but one way to increase flesh, strength and vigor, mind and body, and that is through the stomach, by wholesome food, well digested. There is no reason or common sense in other method whatever.

People are thin, run down, nervous, pale, and shaky in their nerves simply because their stomachs are weak.

They may not think they have dyspepsia, but the fact remains that they do not eat enough food, or what they eat is not quickly and properly digested, as it should be.

Dr. Harlandson says the reason is because the stomach lacks certain digestive acids and peptones, and deficient secretion of gastric juice.

Nature's remedy in such cases is to supply what the weak stomach lacks. There are several good preparations which will do this, but none so readily as Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets, which are designed especially for all stomach troubles, and which cure all digestive weakness on the common sense plan of furnishing the digestive principles which the stomach lacks.

Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets give perfect digestion First effect is to increase the appetite and increased vigor, added flesh, pure blood and strength of nerve and muscle is the perfectly natural result.

Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets is the safest tonic known and will cure any form of stomach trouble except cancer of the stomach. May be found at druggists at 50 cents for full sized package, or direct by mail from Stuart Co., Marshall, Mich. 10-10-12-14

THE TROUBLES IN JAMAICA.

Four Hundred White Troops Sent to the Disturbed District

Kingston, Jamaica, Oct. 14.—Several more families from Anotto Bay and the adjacent districts of St. Mary and Portland have arrived at Kingston and Port Antonio, owing to the growing apprehension of serious negro disturbances.

In response to the urgent appeals of the resident landed proprietors, storekeepers and others, who express doubt of the power of the civil authorities to maintain order by means of the native, black police, the government has dispatched four hundred white troops, with Maxim guns, to the disturbed district.

The colonial secretary, in an interview yesterday expressed the opinion that no trouble need be expectetd from the maroons, all the apprehensions pointing, he added, to the native Jamaica negroes.

But, he continued, the latter will surely not attempt rioting in the face of the display of force now made.

Public opinion is not so confident, and the excitement is spreading all through the eastern parishes, and this feeling is not allayed by the fact that the maroons claim to be ready to support the government, according to the treaty conditions, for it is felt that the loyalty of the maroons largely depends on the result of yesterday's trial of their claims.

Up to the time this dispatch was filed no disturbances of any description were reported.

THE PRESIDENT AT ST. LOUIS.

Mr. McKinley Left Omaha Amid Scenes of Great Euthusiasm.

Omaha, Oct. 14.—The presidential party left Omaha yesterday at 9.30 for St. Louis over the Chicago, Burlington & Quincy route and made a daylight run across Iowa. The special reached Burlington, Ia., last night, where a stop of three hours was made, the trip being then resumed to St. Louis without stops, except such as were necessary.

The president received hundreds of telegrams from towns along thte route of the presidential train begging him to stop long enough to make a minute speech.

The enthusias mover the departure of the presidential party was extraordinary. The crowd at the depot was very large, and as the presidential special started a farewell cheer was given with a roar that could have been heard for a mile.

St. Louis, Oct. 14.—The presidential train arrived in this city at an early hour this morning. President McKinley was given a most enthusiastic welcome. To-day will be observed as a special holiday throughout the city and the formal reception to the president will be upon a magnificent scale.

Mataafa Back to Samoa.

Auckland, Oct. 14.—Advices just received here from Samoa say that the German warship Bussard has brought Chief Mataafa and other exiles to Apia. Mataafa, it is added, promised to be loyal to the government and to observe the Berlin convention.

The death of Malietoa Laupepa, king of Samoa, who was restored to the throne of those islands in 1889, was recently announced, and it is to be presumed that the return of Chief Mataafa to Apia, after having been in exile at Kafafo island, since his rebellion in 1893, is due to the fact that the representatives of the United States, Great Britain and the chief justice of Samoa, and the president of the municipal council of Apia, forming a board of control which has been governing the islands since the death of Malietoa, have agreed that Mataafa is to be permitted to succeed the late king.

TROOPS AWE STRIKERS

Battery B. Illinois Artillery Is Encamped at Virden.

MANAGER LUKENS TALKS

Intense Excitement Prevails in the Town in Spite of the Presence of the Militia. Gen. Reece Will Preserve Order. Thirteen Killed and Thirtyfive Wounded.

Virden, Ill., Oct. 14.—The intense excitement occasioned by the battle of Wednesday afternoon between striking miners on the on side and detectives and guards employed by the Chicago-Virden Coal Company on the other, is still at fever heat and the presence of the state militia does not cool it in the least.

Adjutant General Reece, who is in command of the soldiers, says he is there under unmistakable orders from Governor Tanner to prevent further trouble, to protect lives and property and to prevent operators from bringing imported labor into the town.

The arrival of Battery B from Pana at midnight was the signal for a truce. The tumult in the streets had not subsided before that time, and threats of blowing up the stockade with dynamite were freely made by the more hot headed of the miners.

A movement is on foot among the leaders of the strikers to have the guards of the Chicago-Virden Company arrested for murder. It is a fact that many were not sworn in either as deputy sheriffs or special policemen. The guards acknowledged that Wednesday evening before the significance of the confession was known to them.

Eyster, the manager of the coal company's Climax store, who was shot in the stomach and afterwards assaulted by the strikers, has been taken to a hiding place for treatment and still lingers with a fighting chance for his life.

Battery B has pitched camp in the Park in the center of the town, and has sent a detachment of men to disarm the guards at the stockade.

The list of the killed and wounded in the battle with the strikers, according to the latest information, is as follows:

The Dead.

Thomas Prescott, former lieutenant of police, Chicago; shot by detail of militia shortly before midnight.
Ellis Smith, Mount Olive.
W. W. Carroll, a guard, Chicago.
Frank Billyeu, Springfield.
Joseph Kitterly, Mount Olive.
Edward Welch, Springfield.
A. H. Breneman, Girard.
D. H. Kiley, a railroad detective, Chicago.
Al Morgan, Chicago.
Edward Green, Mount Olive.
Ernest Lang, miner, Mount Olive.
William Harmon, Girard.
Ernest Kemmerner, miner, Mount Olive.

Wounded Probably Fatally.

J. Franklin Eyster, manager Chicago Virden Coal Company's store.
Joe Rouk, miner, Girard.
O. J. Snyder, guard, Kansas City, shot in breast.

In addition to these there are about forty who have sustained wounds less serious.

Chicago, Oct. 14.—In response to a telegraphic order from Governor Tanner, Colonel Young of the First cavalry hastily gathered together all the members of the First cavalry that could be found and started for Virden at 11 o'clock yesterday morning over the Chicago & Alton road prepared for riot duty.

Troop B is in Bloomington and Troop D is in Springfield. Both have been notified to be on hand at Virden.

The First cavalry having been mustered out of the government service, there were not over forty or fifty men to the troop. Colonel Young enlisted the troops yesterday morning up to the war footing of one hundred and six men each. To do this he asked those who formerly belonged to the four troops or any other troops of the First cavalry who wanted to enlist to call at the First regiment armory at eight o'clock in the morning, with blankets and uniforms, prepared to leave at 11 o'clock. The requisite number of men were obtained without difficulty.

Washington, Oct. 14.—Adjutant General Corbin has sent the following telegram to Governor Tanner in reply to his request for authority to use the Fifth Illinois volunteers in quelling the disturbance at Virden:

"The secretary authorizes the use of the regiment as set forth in your telegram."

Manager Lukens Talks

St. Louis, Oct. 14.—A special to the Post-Dispatch from Virden, Ill., says: Captain Charles A. Fervier, commanding Company B, Sons of Veterans, of Elgin, Ill., is in charge of the stockade built by the Chicago-Virden Coal Company.

With part of his men he entered the stockade yesterday and disarmed the Thiel detectives from St. Louis and the local deputies employed by the operators. The men within the stockade offered no objection:

Mr. Lukens said in an interview:

"The trouble was not of our making. The strikers simply surrounded the stockade. On the east and south sides there must have been at least one thousand miners. They were in an orchard and miners. They were in an orchard fire. Considering the fact that we had only one man killed and six slightly wounded, I regard it a miracle. There were thousands upon thousands of shots fired. The strikers began the firing when the train bearing the miners arrived. In a short time their shots were directed at the train. After it pulled out the strikers turned on us and we returned the shots. I deplore the matter as much as anyone. I never supposed such a thing would result when we brought the negroes to this place."

"In view of the result, Mr. Lukens," he was asked, "do you expect to import other negroes when the negroes leave?"

"I do not feel disposed to answer that question."

CONDUCT OF THE WAR

Lax Conditions at Camp Thomas Revealed.

WHO WAS RESPONSIBLE?

Lack of Sufficient Tentage and Medical Supplies. The Flies and the Absence of Nurses. Charges Concerning the Tereatment of Arkansas Troops

Washington, Oct. 14.—Dr. Hoff, who had charge of one of the division hospitals at Chickamauga, was the only witness before the war inquiry commission yesterday.

He took, in general, a middle view of conditions there, about as far removed from the testimony of some of the earlier witnesses, on the one hand, as from the most sensational charges on the other.

The commission had been told that the water from Chickamauga creek was absolutely good, but the witness said that, although analysis made early in the encampment showed it to be pure, the only safe view to take, considering all the circumstances, was that this water supply was infectious.

The intake was about forty feet above the mouth of the cave-spring branch, which received a good deal of the wash of Camp Thomas. Whether any of the infection would work back that distance by means of side eddies, the witness said, had been a much-disputed point among critics, and it was safest to use some other water for drinking purposes. For that reason he had spring water hauled several miles for his hospital.

Witness declared that there was a shortage of tentage for some time after the establishment of the hospital, a delay of several weeks in getting the necessary lumber, some delay in medical supplies and not enough bed linen at the time the hospitals were most heavily crowded. It had not been anticipated that there would be so much occasion for the use of these things.

Witness had heard of the case of a typhoid patient so ill, and without necessary attention, that his mouth was wide open and filled with flies. He did not see this case, but it was reported to have occurred, and he believed that such a thing was possible.

The attention of the attending surgeon was called to it and orders issued to prevent a recurrence.

The supply of nurses and attendants for the sick was for a long time inadequate, but they all did the best they could in most trying circumstances. Dr. Samuel P. Hubbard, surgeon of the Ninth New York, on duty at the Second division hospital, had made some criticisms which were alluded to by Dr. Connor, who first asked if Dr. Hubbard was a reliable man.

The witness said he always so regarded him, and Hubbard's criticisms were thus sustained, and on a detailed examination of them, witness did not materially dissent from what Hubbard had written.

England's Preparations.

Halifax, Oct. 14.—Very unusual efforts are being made here to recruit in a limited time the First Battalion, Leinster regiment, Royal Canadians.

A military man yesterday said the regiment had orders to hold itself in readiness to go abroad within four weeks. Over two hundred men have already been secured.

It was learned that the enlistment was being carried on here by direct orders from the war department.

The fact that twenty pounds is offered as a bonus for good reserve men willing to don again the queen's uniform is an indication that there is something important in view.

"The inducements offered were extraordinary," said the army officer referred to, "and those who enlist have the privilege of resuming their reserve pay at the end of two years."

The officer said there was a feeling among the men that the present troubles in Egypt, Crete and China have much to do with the desire to have the battalion strengthened before sending it away. It is expected that four hundred men at least will be secured in this province.

George D. Saxton's Will

Canton, Oct. 14.—The will of George D. Saxton has been filed in the probate court. His sister, Mrs. M. C. Barber, is made sole executrix, to serve without bond and without an inventory or schedule of assets in court.

The Saxton block, the largest single piece of property in the estate, is bequeathed to the children of Mrs. Barber during their life, and at their death to their heirs. The residue is to be held in trust for Mrs. Barber's children. The will was made on April 11, 1898.

Italy Welcomes the Kaiser

Rome, Oct. 14.—The newspapers generally publish articles extending a cordial welcome to Emperor William. The king and queen arrived at Venice at 8.30 o'clock yesterday morning to meet the German emperor and empress.

Venice, Oct. 14.—The German emperor and empress have arrived here. They were met by the king and queen of Italy and proceeded to the royal palace.

Mrs. McKinley in Chicago.

Chicago, Oct. 14.—Mrs. William McKinley, wife of the president, and her party, arrived in Chicago shortly before nine o'clock yesterday morning in a private car attached to a Pennsylvania train. Mrs. McKinley went in a carriage to the home of her cousin, Lafayette McWilliams, 3,961 Lake avenue, where she will remain until the arrival of the president next week.

The Paris Peace Conference

Paris, Oct. 14.—The American peace commissioners held their usual session of three hours' duration yesterday morning. They assembled again at five o'clock in the afternoon.

Zola to Return to Paris

London, Oct. 14.—A Paris dispatch to local news agency says it is announced there that M. Emile Zola will return to Paris on Saturday.

Flossie's New Costume.

Last week Flossie announced to me that she would soon give the Jillings the Mountloves and the other girls something to talk about. "It will be a real smart tailor-made suit and I want you to go with me to buy it," she said.

In a day or two we boarded a trolley car and rode to Newark, where we visited several stores without finding anything in character and price that struck our fancy. "Just as I thought," exclaimed Flossie, "we could have saved time by going at once to Hahne & Co.'s; come on, Nell."

Just a glance at Hahne & Co.'s top garments decided the question of where to buy, with Flossie's whisper: "I told you so." A few seconds later she was declaiming the elegance of a brown camel's hair suit marked $15.98, the same that was shown us at $22 in New York. "I'll take that suit," she said to the lady in attendance. The coat is a cutaway with velvet collar, cadet sleeves and lined with black satin serge. The skirt has the popular flounce, and is lined with percaline. Every seam is tailored.

Flossie's hat came next. I quite shared her ecstasy over the beautiful millinery display, although I am usually sedate and reserved in manner, having reached the age of—well, no matter about that. A turban, trimmed with brown velvet and white satin, seemed to please Flossie immensely, and I advised her to buy it. The price was $7.25, a very reasonable one.

Before we left the store I bought for sister Kate an all-wool, fifty inch broadcloth with twill back, fine face and dainty shade of green, for $1.10 a yard. Kate is delighted with it, and says $1.25 is the price in other stores.

There was a twinkle in Flossie's eye when she remarked to me on Sunday evening: "Say, Nell, I noticed the girls in groups today, several times; do you think they could have been admiring my new costume?"

OUR CONTROL OF PORTO RICO.

Spanish Evacuation Will be Complete on or Before Oct 18.

Washington, D. C., Oct. 14.—The following cablegram has been received at the war department:

San Juan de Porto Rico, Oct. 14.
Secretary of War, Washington:

The United States commission has informed the Spanish commission that the United States expect to have complete possession of Porto Rico on October 18.

The Spanish commission assents to this and says that it is expected the evacuation will be complete on or before that day. If not, they will concede possession.

The nited States commission has practically completed the details of the evacuation and the joint commission has held its last session and adjourned without delay. The United States troops will be placed in San Juan and the flag hoisted at noon, October 18.

BROOKE,
Major General.

This dispatch is very gratifying to the war department officials, as it ends all contention regarding the possession of Porto Rico.

The details of the agreements reached by the commissioners have not been received at the war department, but as the negotiations seem to have progressed smoothly, it is supposed that the instructions of the administration to the commission have been carried out.

INDIANS CHARGE ROBBERY.

Walker, Minn., Oct. 14.—Complaints by Chippewa and Pillager Indians of alleged injustice were heard here yesterday.

Chief Guy-Ne-Won-Aush denounces the alleged robbing of Indians of Minnesota and Dakota by lumbermen. The principal cause of the recent trouble, he declared at a council with Beaulieu and other peacemakers, was neither whiskey nor the arrests, but the manner in which the Indian pine lands were stolen.

They had vainly appealed to Washington for several years and had finally taken matters into their own hands.

May-Dwa-Me-Mind named a deputy marshal whom he charged with arresting Indians on trivial charges for the sake of the fees, and with being one of the principal men concerned in the timber depredations, although it was his duty to prevent them.

He named also mixed bloods, who, he said, were in league with white men, at Brainard to steal pine off the reservations, and asked a thorough investigation.

The Judge Douglas Case.

Trenton, N. J., Oct. 14.—Light is believed to be thrown on the mysterious disappearance of former Police Justice William P. Douglass, who vanished from a Hudson river steamer bound for Albany, last Saturday night, by his report as receiver af the insolvent Bergen Land Improvement Association, on file in the chancery court here.

The report shows a balance in his hands of $6,380, and asks for an accounting. The report was referred to a master in chancery, who is said to have fixed times for the appearance of Douglass.

The latter never[illegible]wever, and was about to be [illegible]d for contempt of court.

Douglass is [illegible]drawn $2,200 of the [illegible] from a Jersey City [illegible] town last Saturday.

It is asserted that the receivership accounts are much tangled, and it is believed the balance reported in his hands is much below the real amount. As Receiver Douglas gave $10,000 bonds and his bondsmen are liable to that extent.

Citizens' Union Nominations.

Albany, N. Y., Oct. 14.—At 14 o'clock yesterday morning the Citizens' Union filed its certificate of nomination of an independent state ticket, with seven thousand signers' names attached. It was filed by Secretary of State Palmer, and at the same time he filed a declaration of Theodore Roosevelt, in these words:

"Please take notice that I decline the nomination for the office of governor, tendered me by the votes of the Citizens' Union party, filed in your office.

Yours,
THEODORE ROOSEVELT,
Dated Oct. 12, 1898.

New Railroad for Mexico

Mexico City Oct. 14.—The government has granted a concession for a standard guage railroad, 150 kilometres maximum length, with six thousand square kilometres subsidy, to the Inguaran Copper Mining Company in which the Paris Rothschilds are heavily interested.

The railroad will connect the mines with the Bay of Zituataneza on the Pacific coast.

Mrs John Sherman Paralyzed

Washington, Oct. 14.—Mrs. Sherman, wife of John Sherman of Ohio, was stricken with paralysis yesterday at the Sherman residence in this city. The stroke came to Mrs. Sherman without the usual premonitory symptoms and she is now lying helpless, but entirely conscious, in the hands of the ablest medical skill obtainable at the national capital.

Stock Exchange Seats Up

New York, Oct. 14.—The ruling price for Stock Exchange seats now is $25,000, which is the highest price in more than five years. The low price was $14,500, about two years ago. The advance recently is ascribed to the improvement that has taken place in Wall street business.

M'INTYRE FOUND GUILTY

Sentenced to Dismissal From the Naval Service.

HE SLANDERED SAMPSON

Courtmartial Convicts the Oregon's Chaplain on All the Charges on Which He Was Tried. Sentence Approved by Secretary Long and Sent to President for Review

Washington, Oct. 14.—Chaplain Joseph S. McIntyre, United States navy, who criticised Admiral Sampson and Captain Robley D. Evans, and was subsequently tried at Denver, Col., on charges growing out of that criticism, has been found guilty of all the charges on which he was tried, and sentenced to be dismissed from the naval service.

The records and findings of the court martial have reached Washington in charge of Captain Lauchheimer, judge advocate of the court, and were laid before tthe judge advocate general of the navy for review and recommendation.

Secretary Long yesterday afternoon approved the findings and sentence of the court martial and the papers in the case were sent to the White House for action of the president.

Chaplain McIntyre was attached to the Oregon when that battleship made her magnificent fight against Cervera's fleet. He had also been aboard the vessel on her record breaking voyage from San Francisco to the West Indies.

After the naval engagement at Santiago he obtained leave of absence and returned to the United States, proceeding immediately to his home in Denver. On August 10 he delivered a lecture at the Methodist church in Denver, in which he referred at length to the American victory over Cervera.

A newspaper report of the interview, in which it was stated Chaplain McIntyre accused Admiral Sampson of reporting his flagship, the New ork, to be nearer the battle than she really was in order that Sampson might get his share of bounty money, came to the attention of the officials of the navy department.

The newspaper report quoted the chaplain as reflecting on the courage of Captain Evans, and as saying that all the eastern built war vessels in the fight had been built under contract secured by political pulls and were therefore inferior to the Oregon.

Chaplain McIntyre was asked to explain. He sent a non-committal answer to the department, holding that he had been misquoted.

Then the department ascertained the names of a number of persons who were present at the lecture and obtained statements from them which caused the order for Chaplain McIntyre's trial by court martial to be issued.

At the trial the accused made the defence that he was nervous and unstrung and temporarily insane when the lecture was delivered and that he did not know what he said.

The specifications to the charges alleged that he had spoken contemptuously of Captain Evans as Fighting Bob, had reflected on the integrity of Admiral Sampson, and had caused scandal by his charges that contracts for building battleships were secured by political pulls.

To Fight Telephone Trust.

Albany, N. Y., Oct. 14.—Telephone subscribers in New York city will be interested in the fact that a new company has been incorporated here to do business in the Greater New York territory and elsewhere in and out of the state.

It is called the People's Telephone Corporation of New York, and is capitalized at $5,000,000, of which $2,000,000 is preferred stock.

The incorporators are Darwin R. James, E. S. A. De Lima, Silas B. Butcher, S. Christy Mead, E. A. McAlpin, Lee Kohns, Ludwig Nissen, Frank Brainerd, J. E. Nichols, William H. Wiley, James G. Johnson, Washington Winsor, Edward L. Mollineaux, E. A. Cruikshank, B. Fischer, Milton Knapp, Francis C. Travers, Charles J. Gillis, J. Fred Ackerman, Eugene H. Conklin, Martin Schrenkeisen, Jere. Pangburn, Jr., Frederick Porter, George Thompson and Adrian Paradise.

The directors are Silas B. Dutcher, J. E. Nichols, E. S. A. De Lima, Francis C. Travers, Frank Brainard, J. Fred Ackerman and Darwin R. James.

One of the directors said yesterday in regard to it:

"This movement is the outcome of fourteen years of determined but unsuccessful opposition to the telephone monopoly which has had New York in its grasp.

"Costly experience has proved that legislation would never result in giving New York adequate telephone service at reasonable rates. The only way to achieve the desired end is to give the monopoly battle on its own ground. This the People's Telephone Corporation of New York will do."

A Monument to Washington.

London, Oct. 14.—In response to a suggestion of Mr. David Christie Murray, the novelist and playwright, that a statue to Washington should be erected in London by public subscription, Dr. Arthur Conan Doyle, the novelist, offers the first subscription—the sum of ten guineas.

The Duke of Sutherland presided at a meeting held in Edinburgh last evening, at which it was decided to found an Anglo-American Association.

The Old Debt Wiped Out

New York, Oct. 14.—The American Missionary Society has closed its fiscal year with all its obligations of the year paid, the old debt of $55,000 wiped out and a balance of $700 in the treasury for the new year.

The annual meeting will be held in Concord, N. H., on October 25-27.

Chance for Picquart

Paris, Oct. 14.—The Matin says it now seems certain that the charge of forgery against Colonel Picquart will be dropped, and he will be charged only with having used a forged document. He is entitled to defend himself against this accusation.

PLATT'S BANK ROBBED.

Trusted Employe Had Been Stealing for Twenty Years.

Oswego, N. Y., Oc. 14.—All Tioga couny is shocked and amazed at the death bed confession of Eli W. Stone, assistant cashier of the Tioga National Bank, which was closed yesterday afternoon by order of the controller of the currency.

Just before his death, which was unquestionably hastened by the disgrace which had overtaken him, Stone confessed that he had misappropriated the bank funds to the extent of over $42,000.

There was a rumor about, and it still finds some believers, that the aged and trusted official had ended his own life, but this could not be verified last evening.

Senator Platt, who is president of the bank, arrived in Oswego at 4 o'clock yesterday afternoon in response to an urgent dispatch. That he deemed his presence of vital importance was shown by the haste with which he came, dropping all political engagements and flying to Oswego as fast as steam could carry him. Just how much Senator Platt has locked up in the embarrassed bank and how much he is likely to lose are matters of conjecture.

Eli Stone's confession was such a blow to the people of Tioga that it almost eclipsed the importance of the suspension that followed. The people can scarcely realize that honest old Eli Stone, the church pillar, the steady going conservative citizen, the model held up for young men to follow, could be guilty of dishonesty. He was from one of Oswego's oldest and most respected families and was a graduate of Madison, now oCigate College.

For several years he was professor of rhetoric and literature in that institution. It was because of sterling honesty and rigid principles that he was made county treasurer. He was active in Republican politics in Tioga county and had served for years on the county committee.

For twenty years Eli Stone was a thief. For what purpose he took that which did not belong to him no one knows.

MARCHAND MAY WITHDRAW.

French Troops to Leave Fashoda Pending Settlement.

London, Oct. 14.—A dispatch from Paris to the Exchange Telegraph Company says that little credence is given in official circles to the report that M. Delcasse, minister of foreign affairs, is about to resign.

The dispatch also says it is considered that the English government has tacitly consented to suspend negotiations in regard to Fashoda until Major Marchand's report arrives.

It is, however, recognized at the Quai d'Orsay that ,apart from the question of principle, Major Marchand's perilous position will not permit any protracted negotiations. Consequently, in all probability, upon the receipt of Marchand's report the government will consent to his withdrawal from Fashoda, with the understanding, however, that France does not renounce her claims in the Nile valley, and diplomatic correspondence will immediately follow.

Paris, Oct. 14.—Yesterday's cabinet council was occupied with general business. M. Delcasse spoke of the gravity of the situation at Fashoda, and M. Trouillot, minister of the colonies, confirmed the report of the capture of Chief Samory and the armed chiefs of the Sofa band.

The reports of Lord Rosebery's speech, published in yesterday morning's papers, attracted universal attention and caused a considerable sensation in political circles, as it is regarded as confirmatory of Lord Salisbury's determination to uphold the rights of England as presented in the official correspondence published on October 10th.

The general opinion of Frenchmen is that the speech does not improve the situation from their point of view.

Rome, Oct. 14.—L'Italie says the belief is general in government circles that France and England will reach an agreement in regard to Fashoda. The paper points out that there is no need of precipitate action in the matter.

A Noted Hostelry Closed.

New York, Oct. 14.—The once famous Clarendon hotel, at the southeast corner of Eighteenth street and Fourth avenue closed its doors to the public yesterday and is now on the market.

It was at the Clarendon hotel that the Prince of Wales went when he came here on a visit in 1860. The Grand Duke Alexis of Russia stopped there when he came to New York, and from that day the house was for years the headquarters of Russian diplomats in this country and of wealthy Russians who came here.

That seven ministers of foreign governments slept one night in the hotel was one old boast of its manager.

Adelaide Ristori stopped there on her visit to this country, and so did Brignoli, Carlotta, Patti and Etelka Gerster. Adelaide Nilson, the actress, and Christine Nilsson, the singer, were regular guests of the hotel, and when Helen Modjeska first came from San Francisco to try her fortunes here it was at the Clarendon that she lived.

Stolen Gold Ore Found

Leadville, Col., Oct. 14.—While kicking about some dirt at the city dump, Frank Burkhart unearthed a cave in which he found some very rich ore exposed.

Officers were notified and found a cache from which they extracted fifty sacks of gold and silver ore, evidently stolen from different mines. From samples assayed the ore will probably prove to be worth $110,000.

Pittsburg Shoe Dealers Assign

Pittsburg, Oct. 14.—J. McD. Scott & Co., wholesale shoe dealers in this city, have made a voluntary assignment for the benefit of their creditors.

The liabilities are stated to be $200,000. The creditors are all eastern concerns.

October 16—Thirty-first anniversary exercises of the Y. M. C. A. in churches at the evening service.

Mr. Ivins' Arguments.

In a communication in today's Press Mr. D. C. Ivins indulges in some fine sarcasm and glittering and uncertain generalities about trolley matters, in which he aims to convince The Daily Press and those of a like mind that the proposition of securing better benefits from the Plainfield Street Railway Company for a franchise to the eastern limits of the city, are unreasonable.

Without reference to his attempt at irony in commenting on the attitude of The Daily Press in this trolley matter, it is well enough to look into his claims about the county trolley project as bearing on the value of the franchise which the private promoters back of the Plainfield Street Railway Company are striving to secure. So far as determining the relative value of the two franchises to the men who aim to secure them, the cost of the county project has nothing to do with it. Mr. Kean has bid for the franchise what he thinks it is worth to him in the amount of business it will bring to his railway line if constructed. If the county road was never widened and the trolley road was built on it, the franchise would be worth $250,000 to Mr. Kean just the same.

The intrinsic worth of the franchise for a street railway line between this city and Elizabeth is not less than $250,000. Mr. Kean, as shrewd a business man as there is in New Jersey, says so and backs up his statement with a bona fide offer of such a sum. The trolley manipulators who hope to get rich out of an enterprise in opposition to the county project have never had the audacity to say that it is not worth that much, but instead they aim to throw dust into the face of the people by quoting estimated sums that an improvement of the county road is to cost, when that matter does not have one whit to do with the worth of the right to build the line through the section that county road runs over. If Plainfield secures from the Plainfield Street Railway Company benefits amounting to $35,000 immediately—the highest that is asked—the capitalists in that corporation will be securing for $85,000 identically the same franchise that Mr. Kean is to pay $250,000 for, estimating that it will cost them $50,000 to get through Scotch Plains, Westfield, Cranford and Roselle.

And yet they are kicking at the proposition of securing the franchise $165,000 cheaper than Mr. Kean will pay the county for the same thing.

Now as to the benefits that it is said the city will will secure in years to come by operation of the franchise proposed. In dealing with the capitalists back of the local company this matter should not be actually considered in getting better terms. It is a well-known fact that the promoters want this franchise to speculate with. As soon as they get the connecting links in operation together they will sell out to a syndicate at a bonus that will be a fortune. It is against the interests of the city to play into the hands of these speculators. The majority of citizens do not want the Council to do this, and they should heed popular sentiment.

So far as Mr. Ivins' claims of political support is concerned, it is the veriest bosh. The county project plan is supported by the majority of people in Union county. The only ones who oppose it in Plainfield are trolley promoters such as L. W. Serrell, Jr., John B Dumont, D C. Ivins, etc.

And the people are opposed to their ideas.

The Same Old Democrat.

An Elizabeth correspondent to the New York Tribune says:

Much surprise is felt in Democratic circles here over the failure of Farmer Jas. E. Martine, of Plainfield, to attend the Democratic Congressional convention held here yesterday. In thirty years Farmer Martine has never been known, it is said, to miss a Democratic county, State or Congressional convention. Sick or well, he has always been on deck, and if he could only speak in a whisper he was sure to make his presence known.

Now the braves are speculating as to whether Farmer Martine is disgruntled over the action of the State convention in sitting down on the silver men, among whom he was one of the most ardent. He was also a warm friend of Senator Daly, and wanted to see him nominated for Governor.

Farmer James was to have called yesterday's convention to order, but no explanation was given for his absence.

The Democrats of Union and the VIIIth district will greatly miss his clarion voice and picturesque platform antics in the campaign now on, and, in fact, a Democratic campaign without Farmer Martine will be like playing "Hamlet" with the melancholy Dane left out of the cast.

The Congressional convention, Mr. Martine informs us, was the first political convention of the Democrats in Union county in twenty-five years that he has missed. Mr. Martine expected to be present as of yore, but late in the morning important private matters arose and prevented his attendance. The fact is, as stated in The Daily Press some time ago, Mr. Martine is paying particular attention to his business affairs now—something that in past years he has neglected to a great extent to dabble in politics.

There is no need, however, for the braves to speculate as to his position in the present campaign. Mr. Martine is the same old Democrat, and everyone knows what sort of a party man he has been in the past. He will not be found wanting if his services in the campaign are needed.

Profits of the Street Railway.

For those citizens who think that the Plainfield Street Railway Company is being run on a sort of a charitable concern for the good and welfare of the city, a few lessons in Poor's Manual of Railroads for 1898 would be instructive. Poor's Manual is a recognized authority on railway statistics, and in this manual appears the report of the Plainfield Street Railway Company.

The earnings of the Plainfield Street Railway Company for 1897 were $50,491 for passengers and $112 from other sources, a total of $50 604. The expenditures were $4,174 for repairs and $36,090 for operation, etc., a total of $40,264. This leaves a net income of $10,340.

The capital stock issued amounts to $86,208. With a net income of $10,340 there is over ten per cent. interest on the investment.

Do the people of Plainfield think that they have done a wise thing in giving away the trolley franchises in this city to a lot of capitalists who made ten per cent on their investment last year, and the business scarcely started? If the trolley company made ten per cent. on its stock last year, what will it make ten years from today?

If they want any more franchises they should be made to pay a reasonable price for them.

It is argued that the Plainfield Street Railway Company, which is virtually the same as the Elizabeth and Westfield Street Railway Company, has already secured franchises through Scotch Plains, Westfield, Cranford and Roselle, at a total cost of not more than $50,000, and that the highest terms Plainfield proposes means an expenditure of about $35,000, which would make a total of $85,000 for the franchise between Elizabeth and Plainfield. When it is considered that John Kean is willing to pay $250,000 for a trolley franchise directly through this same territory, it is urged that the private capitalists would be getting their franchise very cheap.—Evening Post.

Even if Plainfield gets for the trolley franchise what The Daily Press and the News, and all other good citizens advocate, the trolley capitalists will be getting a fine bargain. The above from the Evening Post is quite right.

The Republicans of Somerset county are planning for one of the most enthusiastic county conventions ever held next Tuesday, for on that date they will be honored with a visit from Governor Voorhees and Congressman Fowler, who will expound good old campaign arguments to put Somerset on their side of the fence. We believe that Candidate Crane also plans a visit to Somerset county, so both parties will be right in for campaign arguments from headquarters

MILLIONAIRES FOR CONGRESS.

New York's rich men are taking considerable interest in the game of politics this year. Here is a group of millionaires who aspire to represent their districts in congress. Some are Democrats and some are Republicans, but each one is rich enough to stand a campaign even if defeated.

The Daily Press is in receipt of a long communication from Lemuel Wm. Serrell in reference to the county trolley project. We regret to say that Mr. Serrell has delayed sending this communication until now. Mr. Ivins' letter was received first and naturally secured preference over Mr. Serrel's in filling the space that we can devote to such matters.

Experience is just beginning to teach people the value of public franchises—especially in the matter of trolley roads.

WHAT THE SHEARS FIND.

Editorial Comment From Other Papers of Interest in Plainfield.

The disgruntled colored politicians who have supported the G. O. P. for several years, are now decked out in Democratic war paint, and are preparing to carry devastation into the colored camp of their old political friends. They are to be known as the "Colored State Democracy," with headquarters at Asbury Park. The redoubtable Col. Morrell is at the head of the organization. Plainfield is a Klondike for these gentlemen.—Plainfield Press.

Sure 'tis a Klondike they're looking for. As that noble patriot "Colonel" Morrell declared, they want something better than $2 for peddling tickets election day. Maybe the Democratic State committee has raised the figure to $3—New York Tribune.

DON'T LIKE THE NEW STAMPS.

Percy C. Ohl Says That It Requires too Much Saliva in the Process.

To the Editor of The Daily Press:—Why is it that we are compelled to lick about an inch of paper on our new postage stamps, which is unnecessary, and also the same of poison-infected mucilage, simply to advertise the western industries? The public is sufficiently educated on these matters without compelling every user of of a postage stamp—either north, east, south or west—to utilize his saliva and wear out his tongue for advertising purposes Why not illustrate cotton picking, or some patent medicine? Come off gentlemen, your game is too gauzy, or in the language of the Duke Alexis, "there's an election coming and it's toodamnthinawitch."

Byron's Great Gotham Stock Company will be at Music Hall for one week commencing Monday night, October 17th, and will give matinees daily except Monday. The company numbers eighteen people, and carry a carload of special scenery, by L. W. Seevey, of New York city. No expense has been spared by Mr. Byron for the success of the Great Gotham Stock. The plays have all met with successes in New York city, Boston, and in fact all the large cities. The opening bill for Monday night will be that well known attraction "Across the Continent" with all its magnificent scenery, and will be produced just the same as it would be if in New York City at high prices. During the week the following strong plays will be produced: "The Inside Track," "Turn of the Tide," "The Plunger," "The Soggarth," "Ups and Downs of Life," "Ten Thousand Miles Away," etc. The company is strong in every way, each one having been selected by Mr. Byron for their special parts, among whom may be mentioned Miss Gertrude Dion Magill, whose grace of action and wardrobe has always met with much approval.

The Pleasure Palace in New York for the week of October 17th offers a bill which is especially remarkable for introducing to vaudeville patrons that great tragedienne, Madame Janauschek—so long sought of vaudeville managers. Madame Janauschek makes her debut in Augustin Daly's one act play, "Come Here," assisted by that competent actor, Charles Kent. No other vaudeville debut has been fraught with so much interest, and it is safe to hazard the prophecy that none will be more successful. Two other dramatic stars of note, though not knew to vaudeville, are in the bill, to wit Milton and Dolly Nobles, whose lively farce is recognized as one of the most attractive offerings in vaudeville. The other features of the continuous bill are purely vaudevillian, and include that clever monologuist and impersonator, John W. Ransone, who now appears as David B. Hill.

Things that Are Not Exactly News but Just as Interesting.

Bill Spencer came in the editorial sanctum of The Daily Press yesterday with a great yellow thing slung over his shoulder. Closer investigation showed it to be a mammoth cheese pumpkin that Bill had raised himself. It grew in the garden of Robert Fountain, of Jackson avenue, where Bill has tended it with great care. Now the huge vegetable is ripe and Bill is as proud of it as of a brand new baby. The pumpkin weighs 38 pounds. It was weighed by a disinterested party who will vouce for the correctness of the weight. It is one of the largest, if not the largest of the cheese pumpkins ever grown in this neighborhood.

Sunday evening the services in the various churches will be devoted to the cause of the Y. M. C. A. On that day the local branch will celebrate its thirty-first anniversary. Interesting speakers will be provided by the association, the annual report will be read and a brief address will be given in each of the churches. The Y. M. C. A. was organized at the home of former Mayor Alexander Gilbert, October 28, 1867. As it will not be convenient to hold the anniversary services on that date, they will be held nearly two weeks prior. The men who issued the call for this first meeting were A. Wiley, Jr., Charles H. Horton, M. D., Henry Smith, James W. Jackson, Frank E. Marsh, William Humbolt, Alexander Gilbert and H. O. Newman. A constitution and by-laws were adopted November 4th of the same year and later, November 18th, the officers were elected as follows: President, Alexander Gilbert; vice-president, James W. Jackson; corresponding secretary, H. O. Newman; recording secretary, Nelson Runyon; treasurer, S. T. Bainbridge. Mr. Gilbert lived at that time on the corner of Sixth and Mechanic streets. Some rooms were secured and the association placed upon a firm basis.

—There will be a dance in Washington Hall tomorrow night. Eugene O'Reilly will have charge.

—A tailor from Westfield will soon open up an establishment in the store on North avenue, formerly occupied by E E. Marshall.

THE SUNDAY LESSON.

INTERNANIONAL SERIES, WITH COMMENTARY BY DR. STEARNS.

Golden Text.—And the men did the work faithfully.—2 Chron. xxxiv: 12. Oct. 16, 1898.

4. "And it came to pass after this that Joash was minded to repair the house of the Lord." After the death of Jehoshaphat, who did right in the sight of the Lord (II Chron. xx, 32), the story is a sad one of unbelief and rebellion until Joash at the age of 7, and under the guidance of Jehoiadah, the priest, began to do right in the sight of the Lord (verses 1-3). It may have been twenty years or more after the death of Jehoshaphat that the temple, so long neglected, began again to be honored. The neglect of the temple meant the neglect of God.

5. "Gather of all Israel money to repair the house of your God from year to year, and see that ye hasten the matter." It is interesting to note that the neglected house of the Lord was a safe hiding place for the child Joash for six years (II Kings, xi, 3). What a comment upon the disuse of God's dwelling place in the midst of Israel and their utter forgetfulness of God. This compulsory attempt to raise the money for repairs is very much the way most Christians act now, but it is not the Lord's way. The Levites probably understood this, and therefore were slow to obey the king's command.

6. "The collection of Moses, the servant of the Lord, and of the congregation of Israel for the tabernacle of witness." The king called for Jehoiada and asked why the Levites had not been required to bring this in. The answer of Jehoiada is not given. Prayer is more powerful than argument, and possibly priests and Levites gave themselves to prayer. In Ex. xxx 11-16, there is the record of the ransom or atonement money which every man gave when enrolled in the army of Israel, but this money was used to build the tabernacle (Ex. xxxviii, 25-28). In Deut. xvi, 16, 17, there is a record of an offering freely given when the people came to Jerusalem to worship the Lord, and this, I think, would be the proper offering for the repairs. Notice that this was brought to the temple.

7. "The sons of Athaliah, that wicked woman, had broken up the house of God, and also all the dedicated things of the house of the Lord did they bestow upon Baalim." Is there any danger of our taking things that belong to God, and, like that wicked woman and her sons, giving them to Baal? Let Baal stand for all other lords except the Lord Jesus Christ; then, if honest, would we not have to say, "O Lord, our God, other lords beside thee have had dominion over us" (Isa. xxvi, 13). Whatever is given to self or the world of that which belongs to the Lord is like taking from the Lord to give to Baal.

8. "They made a chest and set it without at the gate of the house of the Lord." In II Kings, xii, 9, it is said to have been placed beside the altar on the right side as one cometh into the house of the Lord. By compairing the two verses we see that it was done by Jehoiada, the priest, at the king's commandment. The alter suggests the sacrifice, God's love to us, the cost of our redemption, the love of Christ which constraineth us to yield all we are and have cheerfully to him. Giving is easy when we consider him who so loved us that he gave himself for us. What can we give compared with his gift?

9. "And they made a proclamation through Judah and Jerusalem, to bring in to the Lord the collection." This is wholly different from sending out the priests to gather it (verse 5). This is the Lord's way, the other is man's way. When the tabernacle was to be built proclamation was made that all who were willing might bring their offerings, and the result was that so much came in that Moses had to command the people to stop bringing. (Ex. xxv, 29; xxxvi, 6, 7.) It was the same willing spirit that provided for the temple (I Chron. xxix, 9). I believe that if people were taught the privilege of giving because of God's great gift to them they would to-day give as freely as in the days of Moses and David. I have seen it and know it, and have heard of the same spirit in other parishes, where the efforts to raise money were set aside and the people permitted to give willingly.

10. "And all the princes and all the people rejoiced and brought in and cast into the chest until they had made an end." David prepared for the temple with all his might because he had set his affection to the house of his God, and when the people gave he said, "Who am I and what is my people that we should be able to offer so willingly after this sort, for all things come of thee and of thine own have we given thee" (I Chron. xxix, 2, 3, 14). There is that scattereth and yet increaseth. Every man, according as he purposeth in his heart, so let him give—not grudgingly or of necessity, for God loveth a cheerful giver (a hilarious giver). (Prov. xi, 24; II Cor. ix, 7.)

11. "Thus they did day by day and gathered money in abundance." When the chest was full, they counted it and put it up in bags and put the chest in it place again. Compare II Kings xii, 10. It was so easy to thus gather it. No one was asked to give. All gave as they were led, and none knew but the Lord who gave much or little.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR.

Topic For the Week Beginning Oct. 16. Comment by Rev. S. H. Doyle.

TOPIC.—"Our society work and how to better it."—Judg. vii, 1-8, 19-22. (A meeting to consider all branches of society work, to be led by the president.)

The principle of better work in our societies is aptly illustrated in the topical reference. It is the story of Gideon and his band of 300 men and their glorious victory over the Midianites. The one great lesson of that interesting story is that success in work for God depends primarily upon God Himself and not upon men. God reduced Gideon's army from thousands to hundreds to illustrate this truth. This story is an actual demonstration of the principle that success in Christian life and enterprise is "not by might, nor by power, but by My spirit," saith the Lord of Hosts.

Realizing this dependency upon God, as Endeavorers we must consecrate ourselves anew to God. Perhaps we have been depending too much upon our glorious membership for success in Endeavor work. If so, let us henceforth depend more upon God. But there is work for us to do. We are "colaborers with God." It was "the sword of the Lord and Gideon" that defeated the Midianites. We need God, and although God does not need us, yet He wants us, and if we work, depending upon Him for success, we cannot but succeed.

Realizing our dependence upon God and reconsecrating ourselves to Him, let us aim in the year before us to better our work by having

1. Better prayer meetings. The prayer meeting is the inspiration of the society. It inspires us to better work along all lines. Let leaders prepare themselves more prayerfully and carefully than ever before. Let us have more variety than ever before. Let no member fail to take some part in the meeting. Let prayers be more definite. Let us have more faith in our prayers. Let us have a more intelligent and Scriptural discussion of the P. M. topic.

2. A better membership. The work of the society depends entirely upon the character of the individual membership. Raise the standard of membership. God teaches us by the story of Gideon's band to drop the names of those who are disloyal and insincere from the roll of membership.

3. Better committee work. Have the monthly meetings of committees been abandoned? Begin them at once. Have written reports declined into a verbal report of "progress?" If so, change them at once. If you have done nothing, write out that fact, and it will insure a report of a different character for the next business meeting.

4. Better socials. Begin and close all social gatherings with prayer. Then do nothing between times that would make the prayers a mockery. Make the socials entertaining, educational and sociable.

Bible Readings.—II Chron. xxxi, 20, 21; xxxiv, 1-12; Ps. xc, 17; Prov. xvi, 3; Eccl. iii, 17; ix, 10; Zech. iv, 6; Isa. xlix, 1-6; Math. xxv, 14-30; John ix, 4; I Cor. x, 31; xv, 58; Eph. iv, 11-16; Col. iii, 17; I Pet. iv, 11.

Out of Prospective.

Events in themselves of little importance we often esteem of the greatest moment, because in some surface way they minister to our natural affections or our worldly interests. Opportunities of life we generally value in strange disproportion. Opportunities placed within easy reach, by which the blessings of spiritual life are made possible to us, we often accept as a matter of course without any special thought about it, while the chance for a little gain of a worldly kind, a little advantage over our fellow man, we value in our thoughts as a remarkable piece of good fortune. And do we not congratulate our friends upon all the good earthly fortune that comes to them, but how little do we have to say to them on account of the kingdom of God in their lives. Even our good will for our friends is out of perspective.—Helper.

Exalting Christ.

The battle that began in Eden between selfishness, whose other name is sin, and obedience to divine dictates of incarnate love has raged through all the ages since. Shall the serpent or the Creator be obeyed? Shall men do as they please or shall they please God? It is a contest for kingship, and whenever the alluring temptations of sin are spurned and the loving words of the wise Lord are obeyed, in that moment Jesus Christ is exalted afresh. Our victories, our achievements, our spiritual advancements, all are means of lifting higher the conquering Christ.—William T. Ellis.

Approved of God.

The ruling desire of every member of the church should be to show himself "approved of God, a workman that needeth not be ashamed." To be approved of men, that is to be popular in the world, is the most dangerous thing that can befall a Christian. "Woe unto you when all men speak well of you," said the Master Himself. "The friendship of the world is enmity with God." To have the approval of the world, then, is to have the disapproval of God. No Christian can afford that.—Christian Instructor.

Painful, but Wholesome.

Strive daily and hourly to be calm, to stop yourself forcibly and recall your mind to a sense of what you are, where you are going and whither you ought to be tending. This is most painful discipline, but most wholesome.—Reformed Church Messenger.

To Be Miserable.

Think about yourself, about what you want, what respect people ought to pay to you and what people think of you—in other words, center all your thoughts on self—and you will have abundance of misery.—Charles Kingsley.

EPWORTH LEAGUE.

Lesson For the Week Beginning Oct. 16. Comment by Rev. W. J. Yates, A. M. Topic, The Choice of Moses.

SCRIPTURE READING.—Ex. ii, 11; Heb. xi, 24-27.—"Refused to be called the son of Pharaoh's daughter. Esteeming the reproach of Christ greater riches than the treasures of Egypt."

The adoption of Moses by the daughter of Pharaoh and his education as her son, "in all the wisdom of the Egyptians," gave him advantages which few people ever possess. Whether we do or do not credit all the stories Josephus builds up around this greatest of the Hebrews it remains a fact beyond question that he is one of the mightiest intellects the world ever saw. But he was far more than that. He is for all time one of the world's great seers and prophets, if not the greatest of all.

The culture, learning, wealth and influence of Egypt at that time were unrivaled among the nations. Temples whose ruins have been the wonder of the ages, obelisks which even now adorn the great capitals of western nations, were fresh from the hands of their builders. The conquests of Rameses II had placed his name among the great world conquerors. In the midst of intensest activity—social, military, industrial, political and religious—Moses grew to manhood. No period of history has more dramatic interest for the student than this one. Old systems were effete and passing. Of deepest concern to all men was the question of what should survive the great upheaval.

The man for the times was found in the Hebrew Moses. Great in many particulars, he was pre-eminently great in his grasp of the deep fundamentals of truth which underlie human character. The falsities of the religious systems of the times grew more and more clear to him. The instability of all governments and social order based upon them, the iniquity of all distinctions of rank growing from them, became increasingly plain. Temporary ease, luxury, power and preferment gained at the price of integrity allured him as it did all others of his time and as it has the thoughtful ones of all times. But he saw a better way and overcame the temptation. Fidelity to convictions of right at the cost of all things, even life itself, was the one distinguishing feature of the life of Jesus of Nazareth. To the mass of men such a course is foolish. Whoever adopts it is scorned and reproached and cast out as a dreamer and visionary fanatic. Vision seer he truly is and will become the leader into a new land of plenty and peace. The reproach of the Christ does ever yield greater treasure than all that wealth of Egypt can confer if one cares for truth and righteousness, for manhood and Godlikeness.

At the present day every one has like choosing presented to him. Success lies in making and maintaining wise choice.

Plan For the Season.

Plans count much for success. It is easier and far better to form a scheme of work to cover the next six months than to let the various departments go about their work in a haphazard way and be perplexed and crowded all the time. The devotional meetings are usually arranged for at least three months in advance. The literary and social work should also have a regular system.

Decide what is desirable to do and then find out what it is possible to accomplish. If the reading course can be used, decide how to do it. The same plan can scarcely be used in two places. Several persons can read different chapters and each give brief review of the one read. Two or more can read the same section and all give their ideas of it at the public meeting or the books can be read in sections at the meeting and discussions had on the topics involved.

Short Bible studies should be used often. Peculiar doctrines of Methodism, salient points in Methodist history, the different denominations of Methodism, our various kinds of conferences, our missionary interests and a score of other subjects are all worthy of treatment. Arrange services in advance.

In Touch With the Times.

Good citizenship is receiving in many quarters careful study and free discussion. The League should aid in giving information and in forming sentiment in this field. These are stirring times. History is made rapidly. The young people are also being developed by the progress of events more rapidly by far than is ever possible in the uneventful years of peaceful life. Patriotism or fanaticism may be awakened. We must see to it that we know the events transpiring and also discern the undercurrents of principle which resistlessly set them forward. We must also acquire character to aid in the formation of public opinion and in shaping events rightly.

Some chapters have a monthly summary of current events and a short explanation and discussion of prominent points. This can be made of great value. Debates on issues and questions of the day will develop powers of thinking and expression. Keep abreast of the times.

Not as the World.

Not as the world giveth,
Giveth our King;
Earth's best possessions
Quickly take wing,
Vanishing bubbles,
Perishing clay,
Morning's bright dewdrops
Passing away.

Not as the world giveth,
Giveth our King;
Joy's sparkling fountains
Endlessly spring,
Grace more abounding,
When billows roll,
Hope like an anchor
Holding the soul.

Not as the world giveth,
Giveth our King;
As our thank offering
What shall we bring?
Warmest affections
Freely outpour,
Life and its service
His evermore.

—Mrs. E. E. Hewitt.

Lokal-Nachrichten aus der alten Heimath.

Provinz Ostpreußen.

Memel. Neulich Nachmittags waren zahlreiche Fischerboote aus dem Vorort Bommelsvitte und den benachbarten Fischerdörfern zum Strömlingsfang ausgegangen. Nachts 2 Uhr kam plötzlich ein heftiger Sturm auf. Die Fischer versuchten, eiligst den Hafen zu erreichen. Acht Booten gelang dies, drei gingen unter, dabei ertranken acht Fischer und eine Frau. Noch schlimmer wurde der benachbarte russische Badeort Polangen betroffen. Von dort gingen in der furchtbaren Brandung sieben Boote mit 20 Mann unter, nur ein Mann konnte nach zweistündigem Kampf mit den Wellen gerettet werden.

Tilsit. Der Gutsbesitzer Kislat und dessen Dienstmädchen wurden unter dem Verdacht eines vollendeten und zweier versuchten Giftmorde verhaftet. Die Schwiegermutter, die Frau und eine Schwägerin des Kislat erkrankten nach dem Genuß von Kaffee unter Vergiftungserscheinungen. Die Schwiegermutter starb, die anderen beiden Personen sind noch schwer krank. Wahrscheinlich war in den Kaffee Arsenik gemischt worden.

Provinz Westpreußen.

Danzig. Ein für Danzig außerordentliches Projekt, nämlich die Herstellung einer direkten Wasserstraße von der kaiserlichen Werft aus nach der See unter theilweiser Benutzung der Schuitenlake, soll zur Ausführung kommen. Diese neue Wasserstraße wird so breit und tief angelegt werden, daß auf ihr auch unsere schweren Kriegsschiffe direkt bis zur kaiserlichen Werft fahren können.

Rheinprovinz.

Köln. Das Resultat der diesjährigen Einjährig-Freiwilligen Prüfung ist ein sehr klägliches; von 24 Personen erhielten hier nur 7 das Zeugniß der Reife; in Düsseldorf von 23 gar nur 3.

Brevell. Der Gemeinderath hat den den Erben Kommerzienrath Niedick in Lobberich gehörigen Gartzhof, in dem seit zehn Jahren die Gemüsebauschule betrieben wurde, angekauft und beschlossen, ihn für weitere 15 Jahre für die Schule herzugeben. Die Schule erhält sowohl von der Regierung als auch von der Provinzialverwaltung Unterstützung.

Mülheim. Hier erschoß der Elektrotechniker K. Schneider nach kurzem Wortwechsel, anscheinend in der Nothwehr, seinen Schwager E. Künzel, der längere Zeit bei ihm in Dienst gestanden hatte, vor Kurzem aber entlassen werden mußte und Schneider seit dieser Zeit mit Drohungen verfolgte. Schneider stellte sich selbst dem Gericht.

Provinz Schlesien.

Schreiberhau. Das hiesige Deutsche Lehrerheim hat das erste Jahr seines Bestehens vollendet. Die Mitgliederbeiträge des Vereins Deutsches Lehrerheim sind alljährlich gestiegen, sie betrugen für 1897 5309 Mark. Es sind jetzt 430 Pflegschaften mit einem Gesammtbeitrag von 3975 Mark vorhanden. Der Kassenbestand betrug laut Rechnungsabschluß Ende 1896 247 Mark, die Einnahmen beliefen sich 1897 auf 10,030 Mark.

Provinz Schleswig-Holstein.

Altona. Gröblich unrichtig ist eine jüngst durch die meisten Zeitungen gegangene Meldung, wonach fünf hiesige angesehene Bürger verhaftet worden seien, welche im Hamburger Freihafengebiet und auf dem ganzen Elbestrom seit Jahren nach Millionen zählende Tabaksschwindeleien verübt haben sollen. Es liegt eine Verwechselung vor mit der vor Kurzem vorgenommenen Verhaftung von fünf Einbrechern in der Ottensener Tabakfabrik.

CHAPTER IX.

Sir Antony decided to walk from Bloomsbury to Mayfair after he had parted from Elizabeth; it was therefore rather late when he reached Lady Feo's house, so he contented himself with handing Elizabeth's note to the servant, and then went on his way without seeing his cousin. Late as it was, he could not retire till he had made an effort to see Richard Saville.

"Dick will expect me, I am sure," he said to himself confidently.

On his arrival at the "Albany" however, he found that Gregory Latimar was still deep in business with Mr. Saville, so, with tactful thought, the young man refused to disturb them, and forthwith sought his own rooms.

On reaching them, he sat down immediately and wrote a few affectionate words to Saville.

"I may not see you to-morrow," he put at the end of the letter, "as I find I must run down to Speede again, and shall probably remain for the night. If you want me, however, please wire to me, and I will come up at once."

It did not occur to Antony to mention in this hurried note the purpose of his visit to his home on the morrow, or to speak of his interview with Elizabeth. He had no desire or intention to suppress those two facts—they simply never came into his mind—at least, in connection with Mr. Saville. Of course, when they met, both matters would be sure to be broached between them! He had confined himself to just touching in the most delicate way upon the subject of Mrs. Latimar's will and Richard Saville's inheritance. The deep sympathy that mingled with every thought of his "big brother" was revealed in the few well-chosen words he put into this letter. It was the perfection of delicate tenderness. Not for all the world would Antony Peile have breathed a suggestion of the regret which his own simple honesty imagined must have come even more forcibly to the elder man than to himself through this will business; but he hoped that Mr. Saville would read between the lines, and recognize the true sincere spirit in which they had been written. He found it impossible to go to bed. Sleepless nights were no novelty to him now; but the cause of his wakefulness and thoughtfulness was different on this occasion. It was of Elizabeth he was thinking, not of himself—of her saddened youth, of the still sadder future she had, according to what Feo had told him, resolved to make her own. She haunted him. Her sorrowful face, so lovely, though so wan and thin, seemed to confront him wherever his eyes rested. With an extraordinary sensation of gladness the thought came to him that she had appeared to find pleasure—comfort, indeed—in his presence, and that a compact of friendship had been made between them.

"Elizabeth is so strong-minded—her will is stubborn and unyielding! She means to stand alone, and she will do it!" Lady Feo had said to him plaintively, when she had given him earlier in the evening her brief account of all that had happened.

"She is bound to go a little to extremes," he said to himself as he smoked another cigarette thoughtfully and the clock on his mantleshelf chimed the hour of one. "She is ready for almost any kind of sacrifice, poor child; she thinks obedience to her grandmother's wishes will constitute her mother's atonement. Now that I have seen her I can foretell exactly what her actions will be. Until the influence of this strange old woman has had time to fade away, and until some stronger and more wholesome influence comes into her life, Elizabeth will proceed in the path she has chosen. She will consider herself wrong even to contemplate a different future. How the very suggestion of this marriage with Dick must have jarred on her, poor child!"

"'Yes,' Elizabeth said, with tear-filled eyes and a little break in her voice—'I understand, and I thank you from my heart!'"

Evidently the remembrance jarred upon Sir Antony too, for he pushed back his chair and rose hurriedly to his feet.

"And it must have been a bit of a shock to Dick also," he went on musing, his brows knitted unconsciously. Lady Feo's angry words about his beloved friend again rose to his mind with objectionable clearness. "It is an awfully delicate business! I am afraid she will prove difficult—she is so proud; and yet, in some fashion or other, Dick must make over this money to her. In ordinary circumstances a marriage would perhaps have been the happiest solution of the difficulty; yet —"

For some extraordinary reason the young man did not seem able to contemplate with any degree of pleasure or comfort even the suggestion of such a marriage. Possibly Feo's strong-uttered protest against Elizabeth's becoming his guardian's wife unconsciously influenced him. Whether this was so or not, the fact remained that Antony turned away almost eagerly from the thought of it. He began moving restlessly about the room.

"I wish I had seen Dick to-night!" he said to himself regretfully. "I feel somehow that he would have liked to talk things over with me. It seems odd to imagine Dick with a trouble of his own; hitherto he has had none except what I have brought to him." He returned to the window, and stood and looked out of it for a few moments, the soft cool night air stealing in upon him. "Perhaps I ought to postpone my visit to Speede—at least, for a day. Dick may want me," he mused, pausing irresolutely; then he turned round briskly. He would carry his letter to the post himself—his servant had gone to bed hours before—and he particularly desired that Mr. Saville should receive the communication by the first post in the morning. "No," he said to himself, without any hesitation in his manner now—"no! She is going down early to that school to-morrow, and I want my dear old 'mammy' to be there on the spot, to give her a welcome, and to let her feel, poor child, that, after all, she is not entering a world of utter strangers! I am sure Feo has not the very least idea that Little Stonebury is my property. I should just like to see her dear little face when she finds this out to-morrow and realizes all that it will mean for her Elizabeth!"

Antony Peile smiled brightly to himself at the thought of the delight he anticipated for his cousin. He picked up his hat, drew on his light overcoat again, and was almost out of the doorway, when his eyes caught sight of a letter lying on the mantelshelf, which his servant had evidently forgotten to place with his other correspondence. In an instant Sir Antony had picked it up.

"From Dick!" he exclaimed. "And I never saw it! Where were my eyes? I ought to have known that the dear old chap would be sure to write and tell me all about it!"

He eagerly tore open the note; but the light of gladness faded instantly from his face as he glanced at the few words it contained. Mr. Saville's communication was brief and business-like, almost curt.

"Dear Tony," he wrote—"I have failed; our terms are absolutely refused. It must be the old compact, or we are to be prepared for the consequences. You know what that means. There is nothing for you to do therefore but to meet the demands, preposterous as they are. You had better remit me a cheque by return of post, and I will have it despatched immediately, unless, of course, you prefer to attend to the matter yourself. I am sorry to have failed, and I wish to Heaven I could see some way for you out of this tangle of disgrace and difficulty; but I cannot discover one. If we can only succeed in keeping the disgrace at the other side of the world no matter at what cost, we may count ourselves as being particularly lucky! In haste. Let me hear from you at once.

"Yours ever. "DICK."

It was some moments before Sir Antony Peile moved after he had read this communication. His color had changed to a dull gray-white that touched even his lips; only on his brow was there a hot flush, the outward sign of great mental disturbance, a moment of acute terrible trouble. He pressed his hand to his brow and gave a sharp deep sigh; then he went back mechanically to his writing-table and sat down at it. He opened the letter he had just written to Richard Saville, and unlocking a drawer, drew out his cheque-book.

After he had written his signature at the bottom of a cheque, he sat for some time gazing steadily at it and at the figures he had placed in the other corner. The sum to be paid was a very large one—to many indeed it would have signified a small fortune. Antony Peile was not calculating the amount of money this cheque would draw from his banking-account—it would take many such sums to make any real difference to him with his large rent-roll. He was looking rather at the ghost of his bright, happy, careless self, as he had been only a short year and a half before, and he found himself wishing passionately, bitterly, heartily, that it were possible for him to sacrifice both the wealth and the position which brought him such a harvest of envy from the less fortunate ones of the world, in order to win back the happy freedom of heart and brain that he once had possessed so absolutely.

It is no new thought that came to him now—it had seized him many and many a time during the past year—but at this moment it struck him with double force. Never had his self-humiliation been so bitter, never had the bonds that hampered him been so terrible in their tension and their miserable significance. He was conscious too, of having a fresh pain at his heart; it was as though he had been flung violently back upon himself, and that the hand that thrust him back bereaved him at the same time of a comfort that had been with him all his life—a comfort born of faith and sympathy.

He shivered slightly as his eyes rested upon Richard Saville's writing. The cold curt words had seared his very soul. He could never recall a moment when he had felt as he felt now. In all that had happened, in the darkest hour of his remorse and regret, there had always remained to Antony one bright certainty—the joy of knowing that he would never be judged or condemned by the man he had loved so well. When he would have heaped condemnation upon himself, when the full misery of his folly would develop suddenly into passion and for the moment get the better of his self-control, Dick had always been at hand to calm him, to utter some soft comforting words, to win him back from a state of unrest to one of resignation. Never before, in all the years of their close companionship, had Richard Saville failed in his wise ministrations or pained the quick sensitive nature that made Antony Peile the sweet-hearted man he was! Never before had he written such a letter as the one which now lay beneath the young man's burning miserable eyes! It came so unexpectedly—at such a strange moment. He had anticipated something so different when he had taken up the letter. With his heart full of affectionate thought for his "big brother," Tony had for the time being almost forgotten his own trouble. To have it brought back to him so coldly, so curtly, was to make it seem a thousand times worse than it had ever been; and that it should have been Dick who had written those words was something he could not grasp all at once in its full meaning. It was as though he were suddenly separated from his friend and "brother" by a wide abyss—an abyss of disgrace and difficulty, which nothing could ever bridge or ever make less deep and black and horrible.

Antony Peile suddenly roused himself from his musings; a slight sense of resentment crept into his mind with respect to Dick—it was a feeling that had never come to him before. Taking up his pen, he wrote, at the bottom of his former letter, a brief acknowledgment of Mr. Saville's note, then, folding the cheque, he placed it within his own letter, closed it once again, and immediately rose to his feet.

A sudden desire seized him to destroy the short curt message that bore the impress of Dick's hand, and yet was so utterly uncharacteristic of Dick himself; but he checked himself. He could not have defined the motive that made him pause as he was about to destroy the letter; it was evidently due to the new emotions that Saville's curious coldness had suddenly called into existence. Instead of burning the note, Tony locked it away in one of his secret drawers; then, taking up his hat, he went down the stairs and out into the street, which had a silent look in the gray light of the early dawn.

For how long a time he walked after he had posted his letter Antony could never have told. He was wholly unconscious of his movements; he recognized only the fact that walking brought with it a sensation of relief. He traversed street after street in an odd mechanical fashion; the silence of sleep lay over the city, the throb and rush of its life were hushed into a great calm. Sir Antony passed few living beings—a policeman here and there, now and then a stray pedestrian. Occasionally a cab would dash by him, and sometimes a cat would cross swiftly in front of him and vanish suddenly in the gloom. Once he met a string of market-carts laden with vegetables, that rattled through the streets with a noise that almost unnerved him. Antony was roused from his waking dream as the thunder of the wagons rolled away in the distance. He turned involuntarily down an opening that stretched before him, and walked across a roadway to where some trees swayed gently in the faint breeze of the early morning that was close at hand.

All at once he realized where he was, and came to a sudden stop. He had walked back, as in a dream, to Elizabeth's old square garden—the garden she had loved so well.

He stood and looked over the old iron gate, and longed to pass through once again, and shut himself away from the world for an hour or so with the trees and grass and flowers, that had been the only participators in Elizabeth's dreams, that had brightened the one holiday-place in her bleak, cold life. It looked so peaceful within—even from where he stood the peace seemed to come to him; the influence of a pure, sweet, noble girlhood crept to him on the morning air and stole into his thoughts, exorcising the burning ache of past remembrances, and bringing a sense of rest to his troubled heart.

With a sigh he turned away at last from Elizabeth's garden; the weariness he had fought against so long took possession of his limbs and brain; it was with difficulty he started to retrace his steps. He went reluctantly, for he would have been happy, in a strange dreamy way, if he could have remained by that little iron gate till the day had fully broken. He seemed to feel that Elizabeth would have been glad if she could have known how sweet a sense of rest and comfort and sympathy came to him from the remembrance of her gentle resignation, of her helpful calm. It was, however, impossible for him to remain there; already the morning sky had grown red above the gray; in another hour the sun would break over the city. He went slowly out of the square, and, as he walked away, he looked backwards now and then, as though he were bidding farewell to a living sympathetic presence. It was not likely that Elizabeth would ever know he had been there; yet the accidental visit seemed to bind them even more closely together, and henceforth the thought of her would have a lasting place amid the sacred things of his life and heart.

A Verdict by a Georgia Jury.

The Atlanta Constitution tells of a curious verdict rendered by a Georgia jury in a case where the guilt of the prisoner was clearly established

It was not thought the jury would be ten minutes in recommending him for the penitentiary, but twelve hours elapsed before the twelve men filed into court again, when a verdict of "Not Guilty" was read, to the astonishment of all.

"How could you bring in such a verdict after the evidence?" asked the judge.

"Well, jedge," replied the foreman, "he's a man of large family, and lost one leg and two sons in the war."

A Severe Test.

After many ineffectual attemps, he finally succeeded in awakening his wife, who thrust her head out of the window and asked:

"Is that you, Sam?"

"Yesh, m'dear."

"You've been drinking, and I shan't let you in."

"Nome, I'm puffectly shober."

"Then pronounce Cienfuegos for me."

"Sh-she-shen-few-shenfew"—

"That will do, Samuel Higgins. You are drunk, and I won't let you in."

"But, m'dear, dass the way the Spanish pronounce it."

Experimenting in Banana Flour.

The next dietetic fad is going to be banana flour. Manufacturers are experimenting in this direction, and promise soon a meal that will keep as long as wheat flour and make a much more nutritious bread. As already the craze for whole-wheat flour is passing, this new albumen will undoubtedly meet a quick welcome when it comes. The use of the banana has developed its great value as an article of food, and the great army of banana consumers are prepared to accept eagerly its further development.—New York Evening Post.

Teeth Made of Paper.

The paper teeth made in Germany—that is, artificial teeth for human use, manufactured from paper pulp instead of porcelain and other materials that are usually selected for making our imitation masticators—are said to be very satisfactory. It is distinctly durable, and not being brittle, does not chip off. The moisture of the mouth has no effect upon it, it retains its color perfectly, and is lighter in weight than porcelain, and cheaper, of course, to make.

HOLMES AS A PUNSTER.

A Good Thing Caught by a Chance Listener.

It was said of Oliver Wendell Holmes that some of his best jokes were made at times when there was nobody to appreciate them save a chance listener.

One such fortunate listener tells of a reply which she, sitting in a street car, heard Doctor Holmes make to a complaining writer of little wit and less talent.

"I've worked with all my heart on that book," said the young man, who had been treating the doctor to a long account of a recent collection of poetry which he had edited. "I've used my best taste and judgment and research, and I feel confident that nobody could have done the thing better or more thoroughly than I have. And what reward do I get? Harsh criticisms for my omission of a few popular poets, and a paltry hundred dollars!"

"A hundred dollars!" echoed the Autocrat of the Breakfast Table, wearily "Why, I wouldn't have written that book for a thousand dollars, I'm sure!"

The collector of poetry smiled with gratification, but the listener turned to regard a passing dray, lest her face should betray her.—Youth's Companion.

Extraordinary Drinks.

Of the many extraordinary drinks regularly consumed, the blood of live horses may perhaps be considered the most so. Marco Polo and Carpini were the first to tell the world of the practice of the Tartars and Mongols opening the vein in their horses' necks, taking a drink, and closing the wound again. As far as can be seen, this had been the practice from time immemorial.

There is a wine habitually consumed in China which is made from the flesh of lambs reduced to paste with milk, or bruised into pulp with rice, and then fermented. It is extremely strong and nutritious, and powerfully stimulating to the physical organism.

MR. ACKERMAN'S AVAILIBILITY.

Isaac L. Miller Discusses His Temperance Views and the Senatorship.

To the Editor of The Daily Press:—I confess to a feeling of considerable astonishment on perusing the article on the first page of your issue of Tuesday entitled "Saloon Element May Oppose Him." The suggestion therein contained is that as Mr. Ackerman voted against license when in the Council some years ago, he thereby antagonized the brewers and liquor-dealers and consequently should be set aside in favor of some one holding, as it is claimed, more liberal views.

I have no desire to institute a comparison between Judge Cross and Mr. Ackerman. My acquaintance with the first named gentleman is very slight. I have known Mr. Ackerman for many years. I believe that either of these gentlemen would worthily fill the office of Senator and think that the district is to be congratulated on having such candidates. But the point I wish to make is whether the liquor traffic is sufficiently strong to say that a gentleman every way competent is to be ignored because he, having convictions, lived up to them, or to state the proposition differently, whether the nomination is to be dictated by the liquor dealers. If such is the case, it seems, to me high time that an appropriate remedy be found.

Of course, we will be told that this is the year in which Congressmen are to be elected, that we are in the middle of a presidential term, that the hands of the President should be upheld and that defeat at this juncture would be very unfortunate. We are all familiar with these stock arguments; they are old friends always ready to be used for party purposes. But if principle is more than a name, if it really stands for anything, I think that all self-respecting men should gladly welcome defeat rather than achieve victory by a surrender thereof.

MR. IVINS ON TROLLEY.

HE THINKS THE PEOPLE HAVE WRONG IDEAS ABOUT IT.

Quotes a Lot of Figures and Predicts Big Tax Bills as Bearing Against the Value of Franchise in This City.

To the Editor of The Daily Press:—Judging from the articles published in your paper recently, touching upon the Bergen Kean trolley scheme," it would seem that additions to your editorial staff had been made in the trolley department. It is not quite clear to me how or why the papers of our city should have gone over to this "Bergen Trolley scheme" so completely—boots, spurs and saddle. Kean's $250,000 lump for a franchise is evidently all you seem to see, and your effort to mould public opinion in its favor will be a failure, unless you can show this scheme to be a benefit to the whole county, without being an additional burden to tax payers. From the standpoint of Plainfield in this Bergen scheme, will you please have your trolley editor give our citizens a little light on the advantages we are to receive, the miles of streets to be macadamized and kept in repair by the trolley company, the amount of license the city is to receive on each car running through our streets, the percentage of gross receipts, etc—whether we are to have forty tickets for a dollar at certain times of the morning and evening, and are the streets to be sprinkled? In other words, do we get anything but increased tax bill? Have the promotors of the Bergen scheme agreed to any of these conditions? You insist upon such conditions from our Plainfield trolley company, and they must paddle their own canoe—they don't ask the tax-payers of Elizabeth, Rahway, Springfield, Summit, New Providence, and all of the farmers of the county, to widen the streets forty feet, and under the Bergen law take private property at a low price, and then have Commissioners come along and say to parties that were compelled to give up their property,—"Here we think (no matter what property owners think) this Bergen trolley scheme is of great value to your property, in that it will largely increase its value, and as we said before, 'we think' your assessment for benefits should be about double the price you get for your land." The abutting property-owner then begins to get his eye open; but later on he gets a county tax bill larger than ever before. He asks for an explanation, and he is told then (but to late to kick) that the additional tax is to cover principal and interest on a debt created by the Board of Freeholders, over and above Kean's $250,000, to widen 12 miles of our County road 40 feet, grading and paving same, the total cost of the improvement being not less than $500,000 left us short $250,000, and the Board of Freeholders have issued bonds, and the tax-payer must pay this debt with interest."

The whole scheme, started by Bergen and supported by politicians principally from Elizabeth, should be delayed until the "Nigger in the wood-pile" shows his head. Every Senator and Assemblyman that voted for Bergen's bill last winter, if they ever seek the suffrage of the people again, the tax-payers should show their disapproval by defeating them at the polls. And last, but not least, our present Governor should meet the same fate for signing the bill. Plainfield has always been at the mercy of the Elizabeth politicians, and it is about time that our citizens called a halt, and that our newspapers should stand by their own people first, last and all time.

Yours truly
D. C. Ivins.

"Mr. President: Please send my papa home. I have not seen him since he went with Uncle Sam to kill the Spanish men. He has done what you wanted and I am crying for him to come home. I love him and will send you a kiss for sending him to me and mamma.

A FAIR FOR BENEFIT OF ST. MARY'S MISSION.

Opened Auspiciously in Catholic Club Last Night.

FAIR SEX TAKE THE LEAD.

ENTIRE LOWER FLOOR GIVEN UP TO PRETTY BOOTHS.

The Clubhouse Handsomely Decorated for the Occasion—A Musical Programme in the Early Part of the Evening, Followed by Dancing—A Voting Contest for the Most Popular Curate in Town.

The first real effort made by the members of St. Mary's Catholic church to raise a fund for the building of a chapel at Netherwood was made last night, when a fair and bazaar was opened in the Catholic Club under the auspices of the various societies of the church. The fair opened under auspicious circumstances, and judging from the attendance last night and the interest taken in it, it will be a success both socially and financially. The fair will close a week from tomorrow night.

The entire lower floor of the clubhouse is given over to booths. In the hall were the fancy booths, two of them, one in charge of the A. O. H. and the Ladies' Auxiliary. This booth was in green and white, and in the centre was an electric light, which gave a pretty effect. The ladies in charge of this were Miss Margaret Reville and Miss Lillie Tyrell, assisted by all the members of the Hibernians and the auxiliary.

The other fancy booth was in charge of the Children of Mary, and was arranged in blue and white. This was presided over by Miss Margaret Carney, Miss Mary Curren, Miss Mary Mercier and Miss Bridget Colbert, assisted by the members of the T. A. B. Society.

In the main room of the clubhouse were the refreshment tables where ice cream, cake, fruit and soda were dispensed. St. Mary's Sewing Circle had charge of these tables, and the ladies who presided over them were Mrs. J L. Sleven, Miss Sleven, Mrs. DeVere, Mrs. Elizabeth Conway, Miss Butscher, Mrs. Knowlton, Mrs. McCarthy, Mrs. McIlroy and Miss Phillips. Mrs. McIlroy and Mrs. Hillman had charge of the lemonade table in another corner. The waitresses last night were the Misses Madge Skinner, Mamie Brady, Emily Corrigan, Ella Guinee, Anne Galbraith, Mamie Birmingham and Margaret Harding. All the booths and tables were decorated with flowers and looked very pretty.

Down stairs the head pin tournament was held. In this Clinton Shannon made a score of 47, and John Moran came out next with 45 points. The one who makes the best score will receive $10 in gold when the fair is over, the second $5. Fred Hillman had charge of the canes and rings, and the interest was increased by a dollar bill placed on one of them. John Conway looked after the soft drinks.

During the early part of the evening the Misses Quinn gave selections on the violin and piano and Michaal Burk, of Avon Park, gave an exhibition on the slack wire. Rev. Father Westman had an oversight of the whole affair, and it is due to his persistent efforts that the first night was the success it was.

There were lots of young ladies with subscription books, collecting for wheels, etc. A silver set is offered for the most popular curate, Rev. Fathers Murphy, Westman and Stafford only being in the contest. Tonight and every night next week the fair will be continued, with an entire change of programme. The floor is cleared for dancing early in the evening, for which Professor O'Reilly furnishes the music.

—A lively runaway was witnessed this afternoon near Powers' drug store at the corner of Craig place and Somerset street, when a horse became entangled with the shafts and was frightened. The shafts were broken and the wagon partially wrecked. The horse did not run far. The owner of the rig could not be learned.

THE COUNCIL HEEDED POPULAR SENTIMENT.

Did Not Pass Trolley Franchise Last Night.

TO HAVE FURTHER HEARING

FRANCHISE WILL PROBABLY NOT BE GRANTED ON PRESENT TERMS.

F. H. Kinsman Appeared and Protested Against the Granting of a Franchise Till Better and More Exacting Terms Were Received by the City—Council Decided to Have Another Hearing Oct. 24th.

The trolley was the chief topic of the adjourned meeting of the City Council held last evening and a hearing was given to the subject by the Council. The result was that the members decided after a recess of fifteen minutes to adjourn further hearing until Monday evening, October 24th, at 8 o'clock.

There was a good-sized crowd in the lobby when President Baker called the meeting to order, and after the regular order of business was suspended, Mr. Barrows moved that all present be given an opportunity to be heard for or against the extension of the trolley. F. E. Kinsman, of the Third ward, was present and he made remarks on the subject. In part he spoke as follows:

"It is only of late that I have learned anything regarding the trolley extension ordinance now under advisement, and noted the several important points. The public is gradually being educated at the present time as to the value of trolley franchises. I am not here tonight to oppose the extenion asked for by the Plainfield Street Railway Company, only so far as the city is to grant the same for a small consideration. I don't blame the trolley company for striving to get all it can for as little as possible. I would probably do the same, but that is no reason why the Council should grant such a valuable franchise for a number of years for nothing. Such action would be an outrage.

"During the next few years I expect to see a great reduction in the cost of electricity and this factor has to be considered. In view of this are you, the Councilmen of this city, going to grant a valuable franchise and ask so little in return? You, gentlemen, represent this entire city and it is your duty to do the very best for the interest of the city.

"I don't believe that when the trolley company's office is moved from this city to Jersey City, it will be possible for the Council of this city to learn the amount of business done by the Plainfield Street Railway Company in this city and borough and receiving 5 per cent. of the earnings when they reach the figure of $80,000.

"I have no axe to grind, but have only the interest of the city at heart. I know that John Kean, who has offered $250,000 for a county trolley franchise, is not noted from his philanthrophy, especially in this city, but gentlemen I ask you not to pass this ordinance tonight. Don't take the statement of the trolley company that unless they can go certain ways or do certain things that they will not do anything. If you stand by the city and its interests the trolley company will soon be coming to you with tears in their eyes asking for the right of way."

At the conclusion of Mr. Kinsman's remarks, Mr. Barrows stated that he was surprised to see so few people present at the meeting to take advantage of the opportunity to speak for or against the extension. He then thanked Mr. Kinsman for his interest and for his remarks.

Mr. Buckle made a few remarks in which he stated that he was sorry that the citizens had not appeared before the Council before and discussed the subject. He said that the ordidance was practically passed, and that personally he could not honestly change his vote. He said the same rule that he would apply in his business he would have to apply in this matter, that if he made an agreement to do a certain thing he would live up to that agreement, and that whether the public approves of it or not he would vote for the ordinance as it now stands.

Mr. Kinsman took exception to Mr. Buckle's remarks and stated that it was carrying honor too far when a person will not change their mind even after they have been enlightened.

Mr. Buckle replied by saying that he spoke as he felt, and that by comparison he knew that the city would receive far more benefit under the present ordinance than other Councils had received, and that he could not go

CANDIDATES IN UNION.

SEVEN ASPIRANTS FOR REPUBLICAN NOMINATION OF SENATOR.

Latest Tip on Probable Democratic Candidate for Senator is That Senator Smith Wants Assessor Sayre, of Union.

(Special to The Daily Press.)

Elizabeth, Oct. 15—From the present outlook the Republican party will have candidates in plenty for the Senatorial nomination in Union county. There are already seven well-groomed candidates in the field, with a strong possibility of more being added to the list between now and the holding of the convention.

The aspirants are former Judge and Speaker Cross and ex-Mayor Rankin, of this city; Ernest R Ackerman, of Plainfield; former Assemblyman Codding, chairman of the Republican county executive committee; former Assemblyman J. Martin Roll, of Springfield, and Colonel James Fergusen, of Cranford.

Mayor William T. West, of the borough of Roselle, was being strongly urged for the nomination, but he had sent word to the leaders that his business engagements in New York will prevent him from being a candidate.

It is said the absence of so many of the big leaders from the Republican clambake at Avon last month was intended to throw cold water on the Codding boom, as he engineered the affair. There is every prospect of a hot struggle being waged in the convention between the rival candidates, unless some of them are in the interim called off.

The latest tip as to the probable Democratic candidate is that Senator Smith wants Assessor D. Hobart Sayre, of Union township, to receive the nomination. Mr. Sayre kept quiet during the Bryan campaign.

DEATH OF A HERO.

Col. Wycoff Was a Cousin of Mrs. T. Logan Murphy.

Mrs. T. Logan Murphy, of Washington avenue, left Plainfield this morning to attend the funeral of her cousin, Col. Wycoff, which will take place at Easton, Pa., Monday. Col. Wycoff was in command of a regiment of infantry in the United States Regular Army and fell at the battle of Santiago. He was the highest officer, in rank, to fall in the war with Spain. Camp Wycoff was named after him.

His funeral in Easton is being made the occasion for a great demonstration. The Mayor of that city has issued a proclamation asking all the stores there to close during the time of the funeral. A regiment of the Regular Army stationed at Governor's Island and the military band from that place will be present. Various companies in the volunteer service and representatives of the Grand Army posts will participate.

Bridge Foundation Weakened.

The heavy rain a few nights ago came very near causing serious damage to the foundations of the bridge on Giraud avenue. The water rushed through the twenty-four inch storm sewer pipes and threatened to carry away the foundations of the bridge. Street Commissioner Gavett discovered the trouble and at once had a load of large stones placed in position in the brook and thus further trouble will be prevented. When the water rushed out of the pipe it struck the bed of the brook with such force that great damage was likely to result.

Hopes to Release Champion.

William G. DeMeza, attorney for Alfred Champion, who was committed to the Elizabeth jail last week for nearly five months, on a charge of disorderly conduct, is doing what he can for his client, and hopes to succeed in securing his release in a few days on habeas corpus proceedings. Champion was sentenced to pay a fine of $100 and be confined in the county jail for 59 days. Champion's attorney thinks that the sentence was too heavy and has the papers in the case all ready to sign.

Says Soldiers Are Not Suffering.

Chief Wilson, of the borough, returned from Pompton Lakes Thursday evening, where he went to assist in taking Private Sprague back to camp. He was well pleased with what he saw at the camp and says that the soldiers are all doing well and are not suffering for want of anything. Private Sprague was placed in the guard house together with Private Scribner. They will be tried in a short time.

A Meeting for the Workers

The programme mapped out for tomorrow at the Y. M. C. A. includes a meeting of the workers at 9:30 o'clock which will be addressed by F. B. Hoagland, of Paterson. At 4 o'clock J. R. Mount, of New York will speak to the boys and give them an illustrated talk on "Lie." At 4:15 the afternoon rally will be held. At this service too, Mr. Hoagland will speak.

VICTORY FOR REED IN BOROUGH CAUCUS.

His Delegations Selected to Both Conventions.

A VERY LARGE PRIMARY.

SURROGATE SPENCER'S FRIENDS IN THE MINORITY.

They Expected That the Rain Would Keep the Washington Parkites at Home But It Didn't—R. M. Clark Was on Both Tickets—Reed Delegation to Choose County Committeeman.

The war in Somerset county is on. Rumors of it have spread abroad, and it has been said that there was plenty of quiet work going on. Last night saw the first of the G. O. P. primaries in Somerset county to elect delegates to the county and Congressional conventions. The two factions that seem destined to struggle for mastery in the Republican party in Somerset county, met for the first time. The result was an unusually large primary and a contest in which the faction which looks to Senator Charles A. Reed as a leader succeeded in electing its delegates to both conventions.

The primary was held in the basement of the North Plainfield Public school. Over 150 voters from the borough turned out despite the rain, making it one of the largest caucuses held there for a long time. Both factions had been active and had rallied their friends and followers.

The big contest was on the election of the delegates to the county convention, whose importance was increased by the fact that the delegation has the selection of the member of the county executive committee from North Plainfield. Surrogate H. N. Spencer has acted in that capacity, but his three years' term expires this fall and a new member will be elected.

Since the split in the Somerset Republicans last year in which the nomination of Mr. Spencer was made an issue, the two factions have been more clearly defined. The faction favoring Mr. Spencer has been looking toward Supreme Court Clerk L. A. Thompson as the county leader. The other side rallied round Senator Reed.

Both factions are, in reality, parts of the greater factions that are fighting for control of the county. Each has its own candidates in the race for the nominations to be made at the county convention. So each side was anxious to elect as many delegates as possible. Then, in North Plainfield, the choice of the new county committeeman had its effect. A Thompson and Spencer delegation meant a re-election of Mr. Spencer to the county committee for a term of three years.

The meeting was called to order by Former Mayor B. A. Hegeman, Jr., Senator Charles A. Reed was made chairman and W. W. Rowley secretary. Senator Reed appointed P. A. Emmons and J. K. Arnold as tellers of the election.

Two tickets were nominated. The Reed faction placed the names of B. A. Hegeman, Jr., J. G. MacLaughlin, N. B. Smalley, J. P. Emmons and Robert M. Clark in nomination. The other ticket consisted of Wm. C. Smith, Albert Runyon, Thomas Doud, Firman A. Long and Charles P. Sebring. Mr. Sebring withdrew in favor of Robert M. Clark.

The balloting then began. The friends of Mr. Spencer had been quite confident early in the evening that they would be victorious. They counted on the rain to keep the Washington Parkites and the rest of Senator Reed's forces at home, but they reckoned without their host, for that faction came under protection of umbrellas and mackintoshes and carried the day.

After the balloting closed the votes were counted and the result was announced as follows: Robert M. Clark, 106; J. G. MacLaughlin, 96; J. P. Emmons, 96; N. B. Smalley, 95; B. A. Hegeman, Jr., 93; Albert Runyon, 60; Thomas Doud, 60; Firman A. Long, 60; William C. Smith, 58; William Day, 3. The first five were declared elected as delegates. The delegation was empowered to fill all vacancies in its own ranks and then the primary adjourned.

The caucus to elect delegates to the Congressional convention was called immediately and the same officers continued. Six delegates were to be chosen and eight were nominated. Four were satisfactory to both factions, but on the others there was a contest. The result was an overwhelming victory for the candidates of the Reed party. The votes was as follows: Charles Place, 98; George Fair-

TO ASK FOR BETTER TERMS FOR TROLLEY.

City Fathers Will Not Bow to the Railway Capitalists.

MAY BE A WAITING GAME.

FRANCHISE MAY NOT BE MADE FOR PERPETUITY.

L. W. Serrell, Jr., for the Trolley Company, Says That They Will Abandon the Field, but That Threat Remains to be Carried Out—That is a Game the City Can Play Successfully, Too.

The Daily Press understands on good authority today that the Councilmen who have had the details and terms of the proposed trolley ordinance in charge, have decided to demand more concessions from the Plainfield Street Railway Company for the right of way over the proposed route to Scotch Plains.

Their change of attitude has been brought about by the knowledge that the franchise is valued at more by people of the city than the ordinance determines it. In other words they are not disposed to accede to the propositions of the street railway capitalists in the face of the people they are accountable to.

Just what different stipulations will be asked for have not yet been settled upon. One thing, however, that is probable, is that the franchise will not be granted in perpetuity, but will be framed with the idea that in future years when the operation of street railways become reduced in cost and other conditions warrant better terms, the franchise will then be adjusted relative to its worth.

L. W. Serrell, Jr., who represents the stockholders of the company, and who has conducted the negotiations up to this point, told a Press representative this morning that the company would retire from the field if any different terms were demanded.

Such action, however, remains to be seen. It is the general opinion that the street railway company will carry a "bluff" as far as they can and that eventually they will accept whatever stipulations of a reasonable character that are demanded.

At any rate, Plainfield is in a position to play a waiting game. Everything is in favor of the city. There are other trolley capitalists besides those interested in the Plainfield Street Railway Company.

DEATH OF LEWIS DUNN.

Had Been Sick for a Long Time—Died at the Hospital.

The death of Lewis Dunn, aged fifty years, of the borough, occurred last evening at Muhlenberg Hospital, after a long illness. During the past six weeks he was confined to the hospital and death was due to inflammation of the colon. Mr. Dunn was a well-known resident of this city, where he was born. He was the son of Mr. and Mrs. Aaron Dunn. His father has been dead a number of years, but his mother still lives and resides on West Front street. He also leaves three sisters and one brother. The latter resides in Philadelphia. The deceased was by trade a druggist. He was first employed by a man named Brown, who kept a drug store on Front street, where L. W. Randolph now is. Later Mr. Brown moved to Rahway and Mr. Dunn continued with him as manager. Later Mr. Dunn was in the drug business at Babylon, L. I., for a number of years.

During the past few years Mr. Dunn has been in bad health and he gradually failed. In addition to those already named he leaves two daughters, one of whom is married.

The funeral services will be held from his mother's residence, 116 West Front street, tomorrow afternoon at 4 o'clock.

Found Helplessly Drunk.

John Kinney, of Grove street, was found helplessly drunk in the borough last evening by Marshal Winn. He was arrested and locked up. This morning Mayor Wilson imposed a fine of $5 or ten days. The fine was paid by the offenders wife.

Ettinger in a Precarious Condition.

Michael Ettinger, of Cottage place, who attempted to kill himself a few days ago by shooting, is reported today as being worse. He has gradually been failing and hopes for his recovery are now slight.

ROGER F. MURRAY'S NEW TALLY SHEET.

Its Workings and Advantages Explained in Detail.

SAVES MUCH ELECTION TIME

IT WILL ELIMINATE MANY MISTAKES AS WELL.

It Also Gives the Results of the Election Showing the Party Vote and Gain or Loss of Each Candidate—Explained to Election Officers Last Night by Assemblyman Murray.

There was a gathering of local election officers in the Republican headquarters last evening to listen to the explanation of Assemblyman Roger F. Murray's new tally sheet for elections. The rain kept a number away but those who were present were greatly pleased with the new scheme.

Its advantages were very evident from the start. It will prevent a great many errors that are bound to creep in and it will also reduce the time and labor required of the election officers. Instead of continuing the counting of the ballots until two o'clock in the morning as has frequently been the case in the past, the work will all be completed and the returns en route to the city clerk's office by eleven o'clock.

By the old method it was necessary to call off the names of each office and each candidate on every ticket and then to have each candidate tallied on the sheet. As there will be eight candidates to be voted for this year, it would be necessary under the old method for the election officers to call out sixteen words, the names of each office and the candidate voted for, besides the usual tally for the ticket and the party. This all takes time.

In the new way the ticket will first be tallied as usual. Then the election officer holding it will announce whether it is a straight ticket or scratched. If "straight" the party will be tallied on the sheet which will end with that ticket. If "scratch" the losses and gains will be credited in the proper columns. At the completion of the count the party vote will be obtained by adding the straight and scratch tickets voted. Then the gains and losses of each candidate will be added and it will be learned whether the candidate ran ahead or behind his ticket and how much. Then by adding or subtracting, as the case may be, the exact vote of the candidate can be ascertained.

Everyone has always been anxious to know how the party vote runs and how the candidates run in comparison to the ticket. This scheme will make that easy, besides giving the total vote of the candidate, and does it in such a way that much time is gained and the chances of many mistakes eliminated.

PART OF STOLEN BICYCLE FOUND.

Frame of Mrs. VanName's Wheel Was Lying in a Dooryard.

The Spalding bicycle owned by Mrs. Henry VanName, of Elmwood place, which was stolen last Thursday evening on Watchung avenue, was found yesterday afternoon—that is, all that was left of it—in the yard of Stephen Cahoone, on Watchung avenue. There was nothing left of the wheel but the frame. The wheels, tool bag, handle bars, etc., were removed and taken away. Mr. Cahoone found the frame and reported it to Chief Grant, who in turn reported the matter to Mrs. VanName. The frame was secured and is now in possession of the owner. There seems to be litttle chance of securing the remainder of the wheel. This makes the third or fourth occurrence of the kind that has happened on Watchung avenue and it is about time the practice was stopped.

Bowden's Case Laid Over.

(Special to The Daily Press.)

New Market, Oct. 15—Fred Bowden, of Plainfield, appeared before Justice Storms this morning to answer to a charge of cruelty to a horse preferred by the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals. Owing to an important engagement of W. A. Coddington, counsel for the society, the case was laid over until Thursday, at 1:30 o'clock.

SIGNED AWAY HER LAND

MRS. SARAH ANN HART SAYS THAT SHE WAS UNDULY INFLUENCED.

Suit Brought in Supreme Court for Recovery of Property From Westfield Residents Who, It is Said, Got it Wrongly.

(Special to The Daily Press.)

Scotch Plains, Oct. 15.—Several Scotch Plains people were subpœnæd to appear before Vice Chancellor Reed at Trenton yesterday to give evidence in the case of Sarah Ann Hart as complainant and Levi and Carrie Hart as defendants. The complainant was formerly a resident of the villiage and was possessed of considerable property. Her nephew, who lives in Westfield, prevailed upon her to break up keeping house, as she was getting along in years, and come and make her home with him and his wife in Westfield. She finally consented and about two years ago took up her residence with them, taking with her a son who was demented. The son shortly afterwards died and was buried in the family plot in the cemetery in this place. Then Mrs. Hart claims her trouble began, for Mr. and Mrs Hart wanted her to sign over to them certain properties she owned. At first she refused but this did not seem to discourage her nephew and his wife, and finally they were able to prevail upon her to turn the property over to them, telling her she would have the use of the property and its income the same as she had when she owned it. Mrs. Hart shortly afterward signed, but soon realized what she had done, and left the house of her nephew and took up her residence with her brother, Wm. Smock who lives near Bound Brook.

She has now started suit in the Court of Chancery to compel the defendants to give up the property which is worth several thousand dollors. The case will be watched with interest by the residents of the villiage, who sympathize with Mrs. Hart.

DEMOCRATIC PRIMARIES.

Borough Delegates Elected to Somerset County Democratic Convention.

The Democratic primaries in North Plainfield were held last night and were well attended. The primary for the first district was held in Boyce's Hotel and came to order at 8 o'clock. J. A. Blatz was made chairman and David Kenney secretary. Half a dozen delegates were nominated, so the vote was by ballot. John Emmons and Charles Lyman were the tellers and the election resulted in the choice of Richaad McCullough and Andrew Love as the two delegates, the former receiving 13 votes and the latter 8.

D. D. Smalley was made chairman of the primary in the second district and Walter L. Linbarger, secretary. Lewis R. Bird and Lambert Bodine were the delegates selected, Bodine receiving 18 votes and Bird 11. Harry M. Cooke was the teller.

TO ENFORCE A CONTRACT.

Scotch Plains and Netherwood People in the Supreme Court.

A case in which Netherwood and Scotch Plains people were interested, was tried yesterday in the Supreme Court of New York. It was brought by one Nathan Hirschbein against Mrs. John Johnston, of Netherwood, and Mrs. John Marsh, of Scotch Plains, to enforce a contract claimed to have been made on their behalf by Thomas M. Paff, Sr., a real estate agent. The defendants claimed that the alleged contract was unauthorized by them, and the same view was taken by Judge Cohen, who dismissed the complaint. David Prescott Hall, of Plainfield and New York, tried the case for the defendants. The property in dispute is situated in New York city.

The beats of the borough marshals will be changed tomorrow evening. Marshal Campbell will look after the upper part of the borough, while Marshal Wise will be stationed in Washington Park. SOMERSET ACCUSES DOUBLE DEALING.

Middlesex Freeholders Met With a Sharp Rebuke.

SOMERSET MEN WITHDREW.

THEY DECLINED TO GO INTO A JOINT SESSION OF BOARDS.

Somerset Freeholders Went to New Brunswick to Take Action on the Construction of a Line Bridge, But When a Road Improvement Proposition Was Sprung, They Declined.

(Special to The Daily Press.)

New Brunswick, October 15.—The long-deferred connection of the New Brunswick-Bound Brook extension of the Brunswick Traction Company's line with the Bound Brook-Dunellen system met with another setback in this city yesterday. An effort to hold a joint meeting of the Somerset and Middlesex County Boards of Freeholders to take action over the construction of a new line bridge over Green brook at Union avenue, Bound Brook, the link needed by the trolley, failed, the Somerset County Board leaving the meeting in a body, declaring that the Middlesex County Freeholders had been guilty of double dealing. The Somerset men claimed that the Middlesex Freeholders had invited them to a joint meeting to consider one question and then had sprung another on them.

Freeholder Canse, of New Brunswick, presented a resolution providing that the line road between New Brunswick and Six-Mile Run, the dividing line between Somerset and Middlesex counties, be made a county road and improved under the terms of a recent State act providing for the expense of the macadamizing to be borne equally by the two counties. The Somerset men voted against it solidly and the Middleesx men solidly for it. The vote was 19 to 9 in favor of the resolution.

Director Logan, of the Somerset County Board, said his county could build no more roads without overstepping its appropriation. He said he had understood that the meeting was for the purpose of settling the bridge matter, and that the road question was to be secondary. In bringing up the road matter first, he declared, it was evident that "there was something in the fence."

Counsel Freck, of Somerset, raised the point that as no chairman and secretary had been elected by joint ballot, it was not a joint meeting. Thereupon the Somerset men marched out of the room. "We mean no disrespect to Middlesex, but we will not go into joint session," said Director Logan.

The Somerset county men sent a message to the Middlesex Board to the effect that a joint committee of five members from each Board should be appointed to advertise for bids for the bridge on the plans already adopted. This will be done and save the traction companies further delay.

LINER FOUNDERED OFF FALMOUTH.

Only 31 Saved Out of 200 so far as Known.

London, Oct. 15.—The Atlantic Transport Company's steamer Mohegan, formerly the Cleopatra of the Wilson and Furness-Leyland line, which left London for New York Thursday, with fifty passengers and a crew of 150, is ashore off the Lizard, between the Manacles and the Lowlands.

A coast guard message reports that the passengers are "drowning like rats."

Another account says: "Bodies are washing ashore, one being of a lady with both legs severed, lashed to a plank."

Particulars as to the disaster are difficult to obtain, but it appears that when the Mohegan struck a gale was blowing and the sea was running very high.

Another dispatch from Falmouth says the Mohegan foundered and was probably blown ashore by the heavy east wind after her machinery was disabled.

All the Falmouth tugs went out, but none were able to approach the vessel.

Later.—A lifeboat has landed thirty of the Mohegan's passengers and returned for more. One woman died after she was brought ashore.

It is reported that the position of the Mohegan is serious and that assistance is urgently needed.

According to a dispatch received from Falmouth, out of the 200 persons constituting the passengers and crew of the Mohegan only 31 have been saved.

Plot Checked to Kill Kaiser.

Alexandria, Egypt, Oct. 15.—The Alexandria police have arrested nine Italian Anarchists and have thereby frustrated a plot against Emperor William, now on his way to the Holy Land, to be present at the consecration of the Church of the Saviour at Jerusalem.

The first Anarchist to be arrested was a cafe keeper, a well known Anarchist, in whose house the police discovered two wire-wound bombs of great strength, full of bullets.

The police investigation showed that the arrested cafe keeper had bribed the steward of a steamer sailing yesterday from Alexandria to Port Said and Syria to take on board a box of bombs.

Apparently the Anarchists originally intended to use the bombs at the Palais Abidin at Cairo, while Emperor William and the Khedive were there.

The greatest satisfaction is felt over the captures, and the German consulate has expressed its most earnest thanks.

The two Cairo Anarchists who left for Port Said have not yet been arrested.

News from Alaska.

Seattle, Wash., Oct. 15.—Dr. R. E. Franklin and D. H. Griffith of Richmond Va., N. Livermore of Port Townsend, John Mason, Charles Gay and William Rhodes of Seattle, O. Payne of New York city, and Jack Beach have returned here after going up the Noatak river in Alaska.

In two rowboats they went up two hundred and fifty miles, the trip requiring twenty seven days of hard work. The return trip was made in only 30 hours, owing to the swiftness of the current.

The members of the party claim to be the first white men to explore the river.

They did not find traces of gold worth mentioning, but discovered a country in which wild berries, especially currants, thrive; also all kinds of water fowl.

On their return from Kotzebue sound Franklin and Griffith located claims at Galoving Bay, where they took out $2.50 to the pan at bedrock.

Peace Commission.

Paris, Oct. 15.—Commander Bradford, U. S. N., who has arrived here from Washington, was examined yesterday by the American peace commissioners relative to the Philippines, with which he is well acquainted.

The first joint session of the two commissions was convened at two o'clock. It may be said that at the first, second and third meetings the protocol was merely touched upon. Last Tuesday, however, marked the Spanish presentment regarding the Cuban debt, which has, during recess, brought the Americans to serious preparation, adjustment of their diplomatic forces and to the formulation of a plan upon which they may ultimately stand in relation to Cuban affairs. It is not unlikely that the Americans have reduced to writing their position on the debt question for presentation to the Spaniards.

End of Camp Wikoff.

Camp Wikoff, Oct. 15.—The Seventh regular infantry left camp yesterday for forts in the department of the lakes, in all about 565 men. They went on trains of the Long Island Railroad. When they reached Long Island City they were transported to Erie Railroad ferry boats and taken to Jersey City to continue their journey west over the Erie Railroad.

The Seventh regiment was the last in camp, and its departure practically brings Camp Wikoff to an end, after an existence of ten weeks.

WAR ON NEGRO MINERS

Gov. Tanner's Orders to Keep Them Out of Pana.

SITUATION STILL CRITICAL

Excitement Following a Report That the Train Load Which Caused the Virden Riot Was Coming. State Troops on Duty There and at Virden.

Pana, Ill., Oct. 15.—A telegram has been received from Virden saying that in all probability Manager Lukens of the Chicago-Virden Coal Company would attempt to land at Pana the imported negroes who, after a bloody riot, were shut out of Virden.

A conference was immediately held by telephone between Captain Harris of Company G, Aurora, Ill., commanding the militia here, and Adjutant General Reese and Governor Tanner at Springfield.

The conference resulted in the governor ordering Captain Harris immediately to put on a guard at each of the coal mines and at the approaches of each railroad in Pana, and under no circumstances to permit any imported negroes to land in Pana.

Captain Harris has only fifty-seven men under his command and he was ordered to call on citizens to assist him if necessary.

The union miners, through their president, G. G. Cravins, immediately volunteered their services. Other citizens also volunteered their aid.

Captain Harris told them to be in readiness where he could find them. Thereupon the miners assembled in waiting for a call to arms, while Captain Harris immediately followed the governor's instructions and placed a guard at each mine and railroad crossing. In an interview Captain Harris said:

"The governor's orders shall be strictly obeyed, and if any negroes are brought into Pana while I am in charge and they refuse to retreat when ordered to do so, I will order my men to fire. All armed guards will be similarly dealt with. The governor's orders will be strictly obeyed. If I lose every man under my command, no negroes shall land in Pana."

The reported coming of negroes caused the most intense excitement and miners and other citizens generally at once got ready to aid Captain Harris.

Virden, Ill., Oct. 15.—Colonel Young's Illinois cavalry yesterday relieved Battery B of guard duty in the city. Colonel Young is ranking officer and will be in command of all the troops here, but will not assume his duties until he has looked the ground over and held a consultation with the mine officials and Captain Craig and Fevier, who have been in command since troops first ordered here.

All trains with freight or passengers stopping here are carefully searched for negroes. Two hundred members of the First cavalry and Third infantry under command of Colonel Young, arrived yesterday, and 175 more are expected. These, with the 128 men in the Galesburg battery, and Elgin company of the Sons of eterans, will give Colonel Young a force of more than five hundred men.

The arrival of Colonel Young's command has caused a feeling among the strikers in this place that the negroes will be kept out.

Some of the militiamen have been on duty nearly twelve hours without anything to eat. The rations of Colonel Young's command had been left behind at Springfield and they will have to depend on the local baker for bread until the remainder of the command arrives with supplies.

There are only two small bakeries in the town and they have been badly rushed during the last two days on account oflarg e numbers of outsiders, who have arrived here.

The engineer on a freight train going north yesterday was badly frightened. Apparently the freight had orders not to stop at Virden and ran at high speed inside the yards. Suddenly there was a loud report from a torpedo on the tracks, a signal used by the militia to bring the trains to a standstill.

The engineer either did not hear the report, or decided to go ahead and pay no attention to it, for the train gathered speed.

There came other reports, this time from a couple of rifles in the hands of the soldiers on the station platform.

The engineer, with a very white face, quickly applied the brakes. After the cars had been searched the train was allowed to continue on its journey to the north.

201st N. Y. Men Complain.

Camp Meade, Middletown, Pa., Oct. 15.—The men in the 201st New York regiment are in a state of semi-mutiny and threaten trouble if they are not given better treatment.

They complain that they are not properly fed and that they were given nothing for dinner yesterday but meat and coffee.

The men have had no bread for 24 hours because there is nobody in the regiment who knows how to use the field ovens and the chief commissary officers insist that each regiment must bake the bread for its own men.

The New Yorkers have not been paid since they reached here, the officers being afraid that they will take French leave and go home to visit their friends.

Bicyclist Robbed by Footpads.

Hackensack, N. J., Oct. 15.—Albert Wortendyke, son of John J. Wortendyke, proprietor of the Oradell hotel, was attacked by three highwaymen while riding home on his bicycle from here last night.

The highwaymen robbed their victim of $8 in money.

San Francisco, Oct. 15.—Commodore Kautz, appointed to command the Pacific station in place of Admiral Miller, retired, has arrived here.

DUN'S WEEKLY REVIEW.

Business in All Lines is Active and Prices Are Fairly Good.

New York, Oct. 15.—It has never been possible to make a more satisfactory quarterly report of failures during the five years which are covered by the returns made exclusively by this paper than can be made for the past quarter.

While a very few heavy failures still swell the aggregate for the last quarter, those in real estate brokerage or speculation alone counting for more than 11 per cent., of the aggregate, with as much more in operations not at all reflecting the general state of business, the aggregate was nevertheless smaller than in any other month covered by our returns for many branches of business.

In some branches the failures in September or in August were the smallest in any month, and also in many others failures for the quarter were the smallest in any quarter.

The wheat business is more active, with prices about two cents higher for spot and nearly three cents for the December option. Very heavy purchases have been made within the past few days, not as yet reflected in the official record of shipments, but the exports from both coasts, flour included, have been 4,101,770 bushels, against 4,886,015 for the same week last year.

The price of corn has advanced about two cents though the receipts are just now larger than they were a year ago.

The price of spot cotton is a sixteenth lower than a week ago, and the January option has also lost a few points, while there is a weaker tone in the market for goods. This is partly due to the official admission that the price of print cloths, now a sixteenth below two cents, cannot be sustained without a selling agency, which is now proposed.

While some woolen mills have started operations during the week quite as many have stopped. Although wool is about ten per cent. lower than it was on February 1st, the manufacturers are not buying, and the market is remarkably dull, with sales during the past two weeks of only 6,179,700 pounds, at the three chief markets, against 24,321,600 last year, and 14,536,300 in 1896, and 13,703,800 in 1892.

The iron manufacture again reports a small increase in weekly output, 215,635 tons against 213,043 a month ago, and with the decrease in quantity of unsold stocks on hand outside the great steel companies, the apparent consumption for the month of September was 983,804 tons, against 980,503 in August.

In minor metals tin has advanced but little on account of the marked speculation in London, which lifted the price to 17 cents. It is noted that freights to London are higher than to New York.

In boots and shoes the output for the year to date has been 136,310 cases larger than ever before, and 245,289 cases larger than in 1897, or about eight per cent. Yet the demand is much restricted, the dealers holding off in the expectation of lower prices.

There has been no marked change in the money market, continued shipments of gold preventing any stringency.

Failures for the week were 205 in the United States against 223 last year, and 25 in the Dominion of Canada against 36 last year.

OBDAM'S TRIP FROM PORTO RICO.

Lieut. Briand Contradicts Sensational Statements as to the Transport.

Washington, Oct. 15.—The war department has authorized the publication of a letter to Colonel Charles Bird, assistant quartermaster general, from Lieutenant Briand, quartermaster of the Fifth United States volunteer infantry, who was on the Obdam, which has just arrived at New York from Porto Rico. Referring to sensational statements concerning the trip, Lieutenant Briand says:

"The ship was handled well, both by the captain and crew, and the comfort of the passengers was looked after in an able manner by Captain Allen. In regard to the sick on board I wish to say that we had two surgeons, one assistant surgeon and the ship's surgeon. I know that the sick were looked after in a proper manner and had all the comforts there possibly could be had on a steamship.

The convalescents were under the orders of Lieutenant Johnson of the Nineteenth regulars. I saw him issuing out ginger ale, malted milk and condensed milk, jams, etc. In fact, he looked to their welfare as well as any captain would to his own command, and I never heard a single complaint except in regard to the delay, which was unavoidable and for the safety of the passengers.

Train Robber Confesses.

Kansas City, Mo., Oct. 15.—Lowe, the self-confessed Missouri Pacific train robber, has added to his confession the statement that he also had a hand in the hold up of the Chicago & Alton passenger and mail train at Blue Cut on the night of December 23, 1896, and alleges that the notorious John Kennedy led the raid.

It is said that he will again be arrested and will have to stand trial on the charge of stopping the United States mails.

At the time of Kennedy's acquittal it was openly charged that the jury had been approached.

Gold Imports.

New York, Oct. 15.—The steamship Germanic, which arrived from Europe yesterday, brought these gold consignments:

Lazard Freres, 53,000 pounds; National City ank, 19,500 pounds; Heidelberg, Ickelheimer & Co., 14,500 pounds.

During the last fortnight the local branch of the Bank of Montreal has imported $1,000,000 in gold from Montreal.

Lazard Freres announced yesterday that they would import $500,000 more gold.

Big Election Bet.

New York, Oct. 15.—A wager of $10,000 was made yesterday at the uptown office of Bell & Co., at the Hoffman house, on Roosevelt against Van Wyck. The bet was made at even money.

THE PRESIDENT'S TRIP

Reception and Review of War Veterans at St. Louis.

BUSY DAYS YET TO COME

Immense Throngs Greet President McKinley. The Presidential Party Escorted Through St. Louis' Principal Streets by Heroes of Santiago.

St. Louis, Oct. 15.—The presidential train came into St. Louis soon after nine o'clock yesterday morning. About an hour before, just as the train was speeding across the Missouri river, the president arose and breakfasted. The weather was excellent.

At Spanish lake, a station about fifteen miles from here, a reception committee of thirty citizens of St. Louis boarded the train to welcome the president. Among them were Governor Stevens, ex-Governor Francis and Mayor Zeigenhein.

Mr. McKinley walked through the car where the members of the committee were seated and gave to each one a warm personal greeting.

The president looks very tired after the trying ordeal of the last few days. He had said to General Shafter at Galesburg, when the general inquired about his health. "Well, general, I am wearing myself out by this continuous out-door speaking, but I am standing it very well under the circumstances, I think."

At the Union station, when the president's train backed in, at 9.20 a. m., there was a great jam, every available space in the immense midway being filled with an enthusiastic crowd anxious to see the chief executive.

The members of the general reception committee, who had preceded the train on a Burlington special, lined up, and when President McKinley stepped from his car he was immediately escorted by them to the Twentieth street entrance of the Union station and placed in a carriage.

The Twelfth United States infantry was drawn up on the north side of Market street, facing the station and extending along its entire length.

When the president's carriage came into Market street, these men, who had seen service in Santiago, presented arms, and the immense throng that lined both sides of that thoroughfare broke into cheers. Hats and handkerchiefs were waved, and the president was kept busy responding to the noisy welcome.

Carriages containing other members of the presidential party and the reception committee, fell in behind that of Mr. McKinley.

The procession moved east on Market street, passing over the principal streets of the city to the Southern hotel. Arriving there, Mr. McKinley proceeded to a balcony overlooking Walnut street. From this vantage point he viewed thousands of persons who lined the streets and windsw and the house tops. He was much impressed with the appearance of the Twelfth infantry and Battery E, First United States artillery, two organizations that took active part in the campaign before Santiago and stormed the heights of Caney.

After the review the president met members of the various committees in the hotel parlors. This over, the doors were thrown open and the general public was given an opportunity to shake hands with him.

The party left St. Louis last evening on the andalia line for Terre Haute, Ind., and reached there this morning. Saturday will be spent in Indiana and Illinois, en route from Terre Haute to Chicago, which will be reached in the evening.

The president will spend Sunday quietly as the guest of his cousin, Mr. McWilliams. The party will remain in Chicago for the peace jubilee until Thursday, when the homeward journey through Indiana and Ohio will begin, the train being due in Washington on Saturday, October 22.

The president's speech at Omaha and his short talks at the stations on the way to and from that city have been up to his best standard. The sincere, convincing, pithy, little expressions of his pleasure at the overflowing enthusiasm and patriotism have not been without an occasional reference to public policy that carries significance.

Rebellion Against Aguinaldo.

Manila, Oct. 15.—A rumor here says that Macabulos, chief of the five northern provinces of the Philippine islands, has rebelled against Aguinaldo, and that hard fighting has already taken place between the two opposing factions.

It is also reported here that General Rios, the Spanish commander at Iliilo, has sent emissaries from that place to undermine Aguinaldo's influence and induce the natives to demand that Spain retain control of the Philippine islands.

Big Tunnel Caves In.

Chattanooga, Oct. 15.—Tunne lNo. 27, one mile south of Harriman, the largest on the Cincinnati Southern road, caved in at nine o'clock last night, completely blocking traffic.

Trains have to run via Knoxville and the Southern railway coming from Cincinnati.

A large furniture car struck the roof of the tunnel, knocking down timbers and caused the cave in.

The Niagara at Old Point.

Norfolk, Oct. 15.—Mr. Howard Gould's steam yacht, the Niagara, arrived at Old Point Comfort yesterday morning.

As she was not reported by the observer at Cape Henry at her passing in the capes she probably passed the station before daybreak.

The impression prevails that the Niagara will remain in the harbor for some time.

To End Indian Trouble.

Walker, Minn., Oct. 15.—Conferences between the hostile and friendly Indians, preliminary to yesterday's council with Indian Commissioner Jones indicated that the hostiles would lay down their arms and that a settlement would be reached.

THE OCCUPATION OF CUBA.

Aspects of Gen. Green's Assignment to the Command of the Division.

Washington, Oct. 15.—The order issued yesterday to General Francis V. Greene to report to General Lee at Jacksonville is corroborative evidence of the intention of the administration to send General Lee back to Cuba as the dramatic climax of the war.

When General Greene was called to Washington by the president last spring, he was told that it was desired to send him to Manila. He told the president frankly that he preferred not to go there, as his great hope was to see active service in Cuba. Rear Admiral Dewey, he argued, had done substantially all the work at Manila already.

"You shall have service in Cuba," was the president's response.

"But it is a long way to Manila, Mr. President," persisted General Greene, "and by the time I get there, perform the duty required of me, and return, the siege of Havana may be over."

"I will see to it that you lose none of that campaign," the president again assured him.

With this understanding, General Greene accepted the assignment to duty at Manila. It was this fact which gave the strong tone to predictions then made that the campaign against Havana would not be begun before the fall.

The president is now carrying out his promise. General Lee is destined to go back to Havana under conditions more imposing than those amid which he quitted the city last spring, and General Greene will go with him.

No one expects the duty of either officer to include a siege of the city, but General Greene will have his share in all the siege there is.

The secretary of the treasury has written a letter to the secretary of war recommending that a request of the Cuban general Sanchez be granted, that one hundred thousand pounds of tobacco captured by the Cuban troops from the Spaniards as a spoil of war, be permitted entry free of duty in Santiago, to be sold there for the benefit of the Cubans concerned in its capture.

This would mean the remission of $100,000 in duties, but the secretary of the treasury considers that the circumstances, including the poverty of the Cubans, warrant the suspension of duties as a matter of charity.

GEN. GARCIA'S ATTITUDE.

Denial That He Has Accepted a Post from Gen. Lawton

Havana, Oct. 15.—The aide-de-camp and secretary of General Calixto Garcia, Cosme de la Torriente, is quoted in an interview as saying that the general has not accepted any post from General Lawton or the other American officials, that it is not true that he is making a tour of the eastern part of Cuba advising the disbanding of the Cuban army, and that there is no truth in the statement that Garcia is going to the United States for the purpose of endeavoring to raise a loan, which he has no auhority to do.

The aide further asserted that Garcia has not denied the legality of the actual revolutionary government of Cuba nor has he accepted the supremacy of the United States. But, it appears, Garcia has unofficially expressed the opinion that the present Cuban government, owing to lack of members and personnel, could not be considered legal, as a quorum was impossible, and therefore its actions are unconstitutional.

General Garcia in all questions of authority at the present moment only recognizes the general-in-chief of the Cuban army, though he recognizes the "transitory government of the United States as a consequence of intervention," and being commanded by the revolutionary government to accept it and to co-operate with the American army at Santiago, he obeyed orders.

Further, General Garcia is alleged to advocate the "closest union between the Spaniards and Cubans on the island, forgetting the past and uniting in every effort looking to the establishment of independence."

These statements are considered among the Spaniards here as indicating Garcia's real attitude towards the United States and the future of Cuba.

A Messenger from Major Marchand.

Cairo, Oct. 15.—A steamer having on board an officer belonging to the French force, under the command of Major Marchand, now at Fashoda, on the Nile, has arrived at Khartoum.

This officer is the bearer of the report sent for by the French minister for foreign affairs, M. Delcasse, by courtesy of the British government, over the Anglo-Egyptian lines of communication.

The officer will probably proceed to Cairo in order to be able to use the official cipher of the French consulate here for transmitting the report to Paris.

Quiet in Jamaica.

Kingston, Jamaica, Oct. 15.—The criminal charges against the maroons have been withdrawn, thus reducing the case against them to one of simple trespass under the civil code.

The presence of troops in the disturbed district has created an excellent impression and has stopped all riotous demonstrations.

Perfect tranquility now prevails, but the government recognizes the necessity for vigilance until the present disturbed conditions have changed for the better.

To Sail Under Our Flag.

Tacoma, Oct. 15.—It is stated on good authority that the Northern Pacific Steamship Company is arranging to put under the American flag six British steamers, which it is operating to China and Japan from this city.

These steamers include the transport Arizona, the Tacoma, Olympia, Columbia and Argyle.

It is believed that the Arizona will be transferred back to the Northern Pacific at Hong Kong when the government no longer needs her services.

New Diamond Mines.

Perth, Western Australia, Oct. 15.—It is reported that a wild rush is being made to the new diamond mines discovered at Nullagine, in the northwest part of western Australia.

CONSPIRACY IN PARIS

Object Was to Replace Certain Government Officials.

THE SITUATION IS SERIOUS

Plot Was Discovered by a General and Action Was to Have Been Taken Tomorrow During Minister of War's Absence. Prince Louis Bonaparte Alleged to Be Involved.

Paris, Oct. 15.—It was announced here yesterday morning that a military plot against the government had been discovered. The Rappel, Aurore and Petit Republique Francaise publish almost identical stories on the subject.

It appears that the plot was discovered by a general holding an important position. The plotters were to have taken action on Saturday, during the absence of the minister of war, General Chanoine.

It further appears that when the government was warned of the plot the ministers were not surprised, having already obtained information regarding the conspiracy.

The Matin says the conspiracy was not in favor of one of the pretenders to the throne of France who has been talked about for some time, but was only for the purpose of changing certain officials of the government without touching the president.

The premier, M. Brisson, was among those who were not surprised when notified of the plot. He promised to take action in the matter.

The government officials here refuse to furnish any information regarding the plot, but it is rumored that the conspiracy involved Prince Louis Bonaparte, who is a colonel of Russian lanciers, and in whose favor his elder brother, Prince Victor Bonaparte, recently resigned his leadership of the Imperialist party.

It is added that certain political personages handed to the premier important documents, including a cipher dispatch, compromising certain military men. The minister of war has cancelled his intended absence from Paris.

The Liberte asserts that the military men alleged to have been concerned in the conspiracy are Generals Boisdeffre and Pellieux. Attempts, it is added, were also made to compromise General Zurlinden, the military governor of Paris, who, for a short time, was minister of war, but it appears, the present minister of war, General Chanoine, refused to countenance it.

According to the Jour, the rumor of the plot arose from a forged letter purporting to have been sent by General Boisdeffre to General Zurlinden, containing the words:

"Let us be ready for Saturday."

The semi-official Temps, minimizes the affair and says the officials of the ministry of war formally deny that a plot existed. The Temps suggests that ministerpretation was placed on some of the numerous dispatches now being exchanged between the different garrisons, in connection with the present movements of troops, which led to the strange reports of plots.

London, Oct. 15.—The situation in Paris is regarded in well informed quarters here as being more serious than at any time since the commune.

The St. James Gazette says: "A military revolution, however peaceful, which replaces the Brisson cabinet with the nominees of the generals, would imperil the relations between England and rance almost to the breaking point. The semi-official and the partly inspired Paris papers are still pretending that negotiations are proceeding between the two governments, and France believes it, although everybody in England knows the statement to be ridiculous. Even supposing Major Marchand is unconditionally withdrawn from Fashoda, the difficulties with France will in no way end.

"Behind it lies the whole question of the Bahr El Ghazal, the richest prize in the Soudan."

The Railroad Workers' Union has posted placards ordering a strike urging the strikers to resfrain from violence and informing the public that if danger threatens the country the strikers will immediately return to their posts. This strike includes the Algerian provinces.

In spite of the placarding, the threatened general strike did not take place. The workmen stopped to read the placards announcing the strike, but there was no disorder. Nearly all the laborers are at work, and the railroad service is uninterrupted. The railroad men have apparently ignored the decision of the committee representing them.

The Situation in China.

Pekin, Oct. 15.—The new Italian minister, Signor Martino, has arrived here and demanded the customary audience of the emperor.

Much interest is aroused as to the part the dowager empress will take in the ceremony.

The French minister, M. Gerard, has strongly urged the immediate necessity of obtaining the release of a Frenchman who is now in the hands of the Se-Chuen rebels, and has threatened to take strong measures, which will include French troops crossing over the frontier.

The emperor is practically imprisoned in the island palace, which is very strongly guarded.

Not a boat is allowed to land there except with the express consent of the dowager empress. All the decrees are now issud by the dowager empress, the last pretence of the emperor's power having been abolished.

The Strike in Paris.

Paris, Oct. 15.—The Railroad Workers' Union have posted placards ordering a strike, urging the strikers to refrain from violence and informing the public that if danger threatens the country the strikers will immediately return to their posts. The strike ordered included the Algerian provinces.

Admiral Sampson Not Ill.

Washington, Oct. 15.—Admiral Sampson, in response to an inquiry from Secretary Long, has cabled that there is no truth in the reports of his sickness.

Popular Sentiment Respected.

Having heeded the popular sentiment in reference to the granting of a franchise to the Plainfield Street Railway Company for the extension of its lines to the eastern limits of the city, the Common Council has well appreciated its relation and duty to the people whom it represents.

It was been unfortunate for the interests of all concerned that a proper understanding of the value of public franchises has not been reached before, but regardless of the embarrassments that may arise from a new line of action to be followed in granting further inestimable privileges to the street railway company it is well to be "better late than never."

Without desire to laud our own efforts in aiding to formulate popular sentiment in reference to this important matter, it is gratifying to The Daily Press to know that the Council at last decided to follow the advice ventured in these columns yesterday, and has postponed action until a clearer understanding can be arrived at as between the people and the Council.

This will be done through the ad journed hearing that has been set for Monday, October 24th. The appearance and argument of Mr. F. E. Kinsman before the Council last night had a very salutary effect upon the matter, and, while we are convinced that the powers that be had decided to delay the matter even before the Council had met, it was just what was needed. Mr. Kinsman is thoroughly posted on the use of electricity and the value of public franchises of the kind now under consideration. Without threats or cajoling of any sort, he presented facts and considerations to the Councilmen that were arguments not easily assailed.

Now that people have been aroused to a knowledge that they are possessors of valuable rights earnestly sought for by capitalists who expect to make fortunes out of their use, the tide is turning in the right channel. The subject of the value of this franchise is one of the most important municipal considerations that has been brought to the attention of the city.

It is an assured fact that at the next hearing of the Common Council in the trolley matter that body will be confronted with citizens and arguments that will not be dismissed by the studied indifference of the members to popular sentiment.

Wrong Conception of Duty.

The position taken by Councilman Buckle in the Council meeting last night in reference to his vote on adopting the proposed ordinance granting a franchise to the Plainfield Street Railway Company, was most illogical. After hearing the remarks of Mr. Kinsman and admitting that if he had understood the facts, as presented by the latter, before he had originally voted for present proposed ordinance he would never have done so, Mr. Buckle took the stand that it was a matter of honor with him and that having approved of the ordinance thus far in its progress he could not nor would not change his vote. In effect Mr. Buckle applies the old adage of "two wrongs make one right" to his official career.

Mr. Buckle seems to lose sight entirely of the fact that he is there to represent the mind of the people and not himself personally. If Mr. Buckle employed a man who had arranged certain plans for work and they should not meet with the approval of the former—after he had suddenly realized that it was not to his interests to have them performed that way—what would Mr. Buckle think of the employe if he should say:

"Well, boss, I can't change them now. I have arranged to do certain things and I've got to do them irrespective of whether they are satisfactory to you or not."

Mr. Buckle's statement that he is honor bound to vote for the ordinance as it now stands, because, as he admitted himself, he endorsed it originally not knowing the real facts in the case, is a very wrong conception of his duty to the city of Plainfield.

Medical Experts.

Mr. St. Clair McKelway of Brooklyn delivered a pregnant address at the Saratoga convention of the Americar Social Science association on a topic of great practical interest. In this he discussed the value of medical expert testimony in law trials and the evils involved in the practice. The speaker, putting emphasis on the point that the medical expert is retained to prove the contention of one or the other side precisely as is the lawyer, goes on to say: "If the professions other than that of law, which, as already said, is a licensed and discounted partisan, and the contending partisanship of which is tempered by judge and jury and is really useful to both, deliberately enter the market in competition for clients or for a price, they must expect to part with the authority and respect which they would like to command, and they must expect to be rated by the gauge and wage of interest in hand or in sight, supplied by the adherents to the view to which they sell their services. The retained expert is becoming more and more a discredited quantity in the courts of law, among jurors, in the press and in the general community." Mr. McKelway touched a crying evil with great vigor of statement. Had the consequences not been so maleficent in a host of cases it would have made this court practice a public laughing stock as a travesty on the righteous mechanism of law. The speaker argued that this hitherto necessary evil should be remedied by making the payment of expert testimony an affair of public remuneration, the selection of the witnesses a matter to be determined by the presiding judge. This would eliminate the phase of personal temptation and hang the issue on the skill and veracity of the witness who had ceased to be a retained advocate. Whether or not the manner of reform would suit the preferences of the bench and bar, its need is recognized generally by the profession.

The English foreign office recently complained of the promptness with which the London Times became acquainted with the most secret negotiations pending in the tsung-li-yamen in which Great Britain was interested. Statesmen forget that newspaper proprietors are as able to bribe as they themselves. It has long been known that every foreign minister in Peking has one of the confidential officials of the great Chinese bureau of state in constant pay. Nothing goes on in the tsung-li-yamen without its being promptly known to the "foreign devils" at the legations. The humor of the thing is that the high Chinese authorities know and wink at it. It is suspected that more than one of them, too, is as venal as the minor officials in this way. The London Times has done exactly what the embassadors are doing every day. As for the publication of such secrets to gratify the public longing for prompt news, which has been stigmatized by the outraged gentlemen of Downing street as immoral and unpatriotic, that is a question of ethics, where the relative point of view alone makes the difference between tweedledum and tweedledee.

"An ounce of prevention is worth a pound of cure." The saying is time worn but has never been more applicable than at present in regard to the care of wheels. Quite a number of bicycles have been reported stolen of late but in each case the owner might still possess his or her property had a little care been taken. It does not take very long to slip a lock on the chain of a wheel and thus secure it from any sneak-thief. The best time to do it, however, is before the thief comes, It may take just a little time but it's worth the trouble.

Editorial Comment From Other Papers of Interest in Plainfield.

A "Springfield Democrat" sends us a communication dissenting from the statements made in the article quoted in our last issue from the Plainfield Press concerning the "essential need of the Union county Democracy." Our correspondent says "The Press editor may know some things, but evidently don't know everything"—and then goes on to say that the man who is credited by the Press as being the life of the Democratic party in that township, and seeing that primary meetings are held, has, prior to this fall, attended exactly three primary meetings, and has never had anything to do with calling any. Also, that in his candidacy for certain offices the past year he ran behind his ticket considerably.—Rahway Democrat.

To those people who do not know how to correctly roll an umbrella, the following hints will be beneficial. It is probable that almost every reader of this is in need of these hints which will save them dollars, and make the umbrellas look neat when rolled. When about to roll an umbrella do not begin at the end and roll frame and covering, as almost every one does, thus shaking the whole frame, but catch hold of the points of the ribs with one hand while with the other the umbrella is carefully rolled from end to end. In this way the points are all left close together near the handle. Besides it is a saving on the umbrella.

The oldest house and landmark in the neighborhood of Whitehouse is a complete wreck. In Whitehouse proper there used to stand a curious-looking old building which was noticed by every stranger who came to town. The structure tumbled down Wednesday, and is now only a heap of bricks. The house was known as "Washington's Headquarters," for the General once stopped there over night for entertainment. An aged citizen, who died some forty years ago, left a journal, in which was an account of his staying there the same night that General Washington was there. Stage coaches were then in vogue, and some thirty or forty persons were accommodated that night, and the time was spent very pleasantly at dancing, etc. The house was painted white and gave the name Whitehouse to the town. It was owned by C. T. Stryker. It was near the Rockaway river.

THEATRICAL.

Current Dramatic Attractions That Plainfielders Can Witness.

Music Hall will have week commencing Monday Mr. Oliver Byron's Great Gotham Stock Company, which is one of the largest and strongest of repertoire organizations on the road on which Mr. Byron has spared neither time or expense. The cast numbers some eighteen people who have been selected as to the parts fitted for them. The principal among the ladies is that clever and accomplished artist, Miss Gertrude Dion Magill. No better leading lady could have been chosen to fill the difficult roles, as she is an actress of great strength and power, and whose magnificent wardrobe has always created much surprise and delight. The list of plays that Mr. Byron has selected are all large city successes and will be staged in a handsome manner, as the company carry a car load of special scenery and mechanical effects. No stronger plays were ever produced by one company, and all plays used by the Great Gotham Stock Company are the sole property of Mr Byron The attraction for Monday night will be "Across the Continent," to be followed by the "Inside Track," "The Plunger," "The Soggarth," "Ups and Downs of Life," "A Man in a Thousand," "Heart of Africa," "Queen of the Soil," and "A Dream of Paris." Between the acts will be catchy singing and up-to-date specialties. The Great Gotham Stock Company will produce an artistically and finely finished one dollar performance for the small admission of 10, 20 and 30 cents.

THE COUNCIL HEEDED.

Mr. VanHerwerden stated that he was sorry that he voted on the subject when he knew so little about the matter. He said that Mr. Riker of the trolley company made a statement before the State Legislative Committee that he is a dealer in franchises, that is he buys and sells franchises, and who knows but what this road with its extensions may be sold out for $500,000.

At this time Mr. Barrows moved that the Council take a recess of fifteen minutes. This was done and when Council re-convened it was decided to adjourn the hearing on the trolley extension until October 24th as stated above.

The regular order of business was then returned to and communications were received from Mayor Fisk appointing John Gallagher, James Bolmer and Alfred Jacobson as special patrolmen, and John Welzenried as a regular patrolman. These appointments were referred to the police committee for consideration.

Mr. Runyon then introduced a new fire ordinance, which he has been working on for some time. The ordinance was adopted on its first reading and the other readings were deferred until a later date. The new police ordinance was not called up as was expected, and a motion to adjourn was made and carried.

AUSTRALASIAN CORAL REEF.

Twelve Hundred Miles Long. It Is One of the World's Wonders.

That great barrier reef which fringes the coast of Queensland north of Brisbane, in the direction of Torres Straits, must always rank among the wonders of the world. For 1,200 miles the coral animalcula have raised a solid protection against the rage of the ocean swell at a distance varying from twenty to 150 miles from the shore, leaving a comparatively safe and calm inner passage, suitable for navigation by the largest steamers on their voyages north and east. Sundry channels penetrate the reef at intervals, and whole fleets of trading schooners are regularly engaged amid the intricate labyrinth of coral islets.

Those who have seen the skeleton madrepores and branching corals on the shelves of a museum can form no conception of the surpassing beauty of the living organisms, vigorous at or near the surface of the translucent seas. On the ebbing tide we find every description of animated coral growth exposed, from the rounded masses of brain coral to the stag's horn madrepores, those of corymbose form, and a variety too numerous to mention. The brilliant coloration of the myriads of polyps includes every shade, from the more sombre brown of the fungia tribe to delicate lemon yellow, lilac, pink, rich green interspersed with golden hues, apple greens tipped with violet, bright red, chocolate, purple and even blue. The various aggregations of minute vivacious animals possess all modifications of radiated inflorescence; some have club-headed tentacles, others expand in a feathery fringe, while the number of rays to each organism varies according to the families and genera of coral classification.

These gardens of the sea are too beautiful for words. By subtle transitions the lime-secreting corals pass into the uncovered sea anemones of resplendent kinds, and the reefs swarm with numberless echinoderms, nudibranch mollusca, and parti-colored fishes of most extraordinary shape and size. Everything in the tropical sea assumes a striking brilliancy of color, and the twenty or more kinds or holothuria are not the least interesting among the organisms which abound. As the beche de mer, or trepang, these marine animals constitute esteemed gastronomic dainties in the Celestial marts, the importance of the export trade to the government of Queensland being proved by statistics. Over a hundred vessels are engaged in the industry. The value of the prepared article is quoted from thirty pounds sterling to a hundred and fifty pounds sterling per ton, according to its quality and kind, and good annual returns have exceeded thirty thousand pounds sterling for the beche de mer alone.—London Standard.

OUR TRADE EXPANSION.

Significance of the War as an Aid to Natural Conditions.

The country never was in a better condition for substantial business advancement.

The credit of the Nation is accepted throughout the whole civilized world as second to none of the enlightened and progressive governments; the balance of trade never was so largely in our favor; the gold reserve in the National Treasury is higher to-day than any previous high-water mark; the crops of the year are bountiful; our long depressed industries have very generally been quickened into activity; labor as a rule finds steady employment at fair wages, which are likely to improve, and the necessaries of life have never been as cheap in the markets as they are to-day.

The war has opened up new and permanent demands upon our industries. More than 100,000 men will be drawn from farms and shops and business places of the land to enlarge the army, and fully $500,000,000 have been or will be expended by the Government in prosecuting the war and maintaining the provinces we have conquered, every dollar of which is paid to our own people. We are to-day buying much less than usual from abroad; while we are selling more in foreign markets than at any time in the history of the Government. Indeed, there is not a single feature that goes to make up National wealth and prosperity that this country does not possess to-day in a conspicuous degree.—Philadelphia Times

Mustn't Send Out Invitations.

He looked happy enough as he walked up to the postoffice box, set a huge bundle on the floor and began taking pretty square envelopes therefrom, dropping them by twos and threes into the box.

"Big lot of letters," remarked the policeman. "Nice day, too."

"Letters," said the happy man. "My dear fellow, those are not letters They are wedding invitations."

A stern look came over the face of the hitherto friendly policeman.

"My friend," he said, "I am sorry to disturb you, but I must do my duty. Come with me."

"Arrested!"

"Yes."

"On what charge, sir? This is an outrage!"

"Not at all. You are advertising a lottery through the post."

The man went along.—New York Journal.

"Dar an' no good o' bein' backward in dis life," said Uncle Eben. "De parrot ain't a very smart bird, but it manages purty comfortable, jes' by gittin' on de perch an' hollerin' de little bit it knows."—Washington Star.

PRIZE SYSTEM SHOULD GO.

The Navy Has an Unfair Advantage Over the Army.

In the rapid and decisive victory over Spain in the war for Cuba there is glory enough to go all round, and the veterans of the battles on both land and sea are sure of the Nation's eternal gratitude. But in the substantial fruits of the victory there is a certain disproportion between the navy and army which seems incongruous, absurd and unfair. For instance, by reason of the fact that the fleet under Admiral Sampson's command captured, without resistance of any sort, a number of unarmed Spanish merchant vessels, and in the Santiago fight killed a certain number of Spanish seamen, the Admiral will get over $40,000 in cash when peace is declared, as his share of the spoil, while all the other officers and sailors will receive a substantial share of the prize money, in addition to their regular pay. Admiral Dewey, for killing a certain number of Spanish sailors at $100 a head in the battle of Manila, will get about $9,000, and all his men will get their proper share for the killing. Less than a dozen men in the American Navy were killed or wounded. They were comfortable in their roomy quarters, they were far removed from fevers and miasma, well fed and well tended, and, as events showed, were never in any great danger.

But Gen. Shafter, Gen. Wheeler and the men who braved the fevers of Santiago and the withering fire of the Spanish sharpshooters at El Caney and San Juan make no money out of the war. Even the gunboats in Santiago Bay, surrendered to Miles and Shafter, but claimed at first by Sampson as his lawful prizes, yielded no prize money to either army officers or soldiers. Many of the latter are buried in Cuban soil. Others died on the way home or in the hospitals on their arrival North. Others, weak, fever-stricken and wasted, are still fighting for life and health. The survivors get, or will get some day, $16 a month, or $64 for their four months' campaign, together with their board.

Is there not something wrong in the prize money and bounty system which causes this absurd disproportion between army and navy rewards? It is true that it has been largely a naval war, and the officers and men of the navy have come out of it covered with glory. Nothing was further from their thoughts in the fierce fighting at Manila and Santiago than the fact that every Spaniard killed was $100 in their pockets. But the whole prize and bounty system smacks of piracy and medievalism. It has no place in the naval code of any civilized and Christian nation. It ought to go, together with the system of naval promotions, which, in honoring one brave officer and increasing his emolument, degrades and fines other officers just as brave, whose only fault was that to them was not offered the opportunity which presented itself to and was improved by their more fortunate fellow officer.

ROBERT BROWNING'S LOVE STORY.

"Wherever Mrs. Browning trod, whatever she touched became endowed with the sacredness of her presence," writes Clifford Howard, of Robert and Elizabeth Barrett Browning, in the "Ladies Home Journal." "When Mr. Browning returned with her on a visit to England, after an absence of several years, he repaired to the little church in which they had been married, and there, at the entrance, he reverently kneeled and kissed the paving-stones upon which she, the light of his being, had stepped. And in after years, when the light had gone from his life, he sought this sacred spot on the 12th of each September, and in the dusk of the evening shadows passers-by might have seen a white-haired man kneeling for a moment as if in prayer before the doorway of the dark and silent church. Yet little would they have thought to recognize in this man the poet Browning, he whose mystical writings had led the world to regard him as a man of austere nature.

"Not once in all the years of their married life was Browning absent from his wife a single day. At home or on their occasional journeys he was ever with her, ready to protect her and to wait upon her. Often ill and unable to leave her room, he nursed her with the tenderness of a woman, cheering her in her convalescence with stories and songs or reading to her for hours at a time, as he oft had done in the days before their marriage. It was in his touching thoughtfulness—in his little acts of loving and unsolicited attention—that his love for her was most truly shown.

About Precious Stones.

A remarkable fact has been discovered. The colors of precious stones are not permanent in the light. To give a chemical and physical explanation of this is difficult; for, although chemical reunions in solid bodies have been proved, one would not presume them to occur in the exceedingly hard minerals concerned. A ruby, which had been left for two years in a light show window, was found to be considerably lighter after this time had elapsed than a stone previously of exactly the same color which had been kept in the dark. Similar results were observed with emeralds and sapphires. Still more hasty than with these valuable colored gems is the action of light on the less expensive stones. Garnet and topaz differ in that the former becomes dim and dull, while the latter only turns lighter.

Chemnitz. Das hiesige Geschworenengericht verurtheilte den Geflügelhändler F. Anton Perthel zu zehn Jahren Zuchthaus, Polizeiaufsicht und Ehrverlust, weil er am 30. Juni eine hiesige Wittwe in ihrer Wohnung zu ermorden versuchte.

Leipzig. Das Reichsgericht verurtheilte den Wirth Peter Mundorff aus Verviers wegen Spionage zu fünf Jahren Zuchthaus und Ehrverlust. Durch die Verhandlung wurde festgestellt, daß Mundorff im Auftrage einer fremden Regierung den Bezirksfeldwebel Hahnerbruch veranlaßt hat, geheime Schriftstücke zu verrathen, und bei dem Bezirksfeldwebel Kirsche einen gleichen Versuch gemacht hat.

In einer Zuschrift an die „Greizer Zeitung" hält sich Rechtsanwalt Henning hier mit Recht darüber auf, daß der Raubmörder Fröhlich an dem Tage vor seiner Hinrichtung dahier Gegenstand einer wahren Schaustellung gewesen sei. Beamte, Redakteure, Referendare, Gymnasiasten, Kutscher suchten den Fröhlich in seiner Zelle auf und fanden sich bemüßigt, sich in kürzere oder längere Gespräche mit ihm einzulassen. Dem Sensationsbedürfniß unserer Zeit sei damit eine Konzession gemacht worden, die nur bedauert werden könne.

Jena. Ein eigenartiger Strike ist in einer nahegelegenen Ortschaft ausgebrochen; der dortige Kirchenchor weigert sich, in der Kirche zu spielen. Der Chor soll jüngst vor dem Pfarrhaus gespielt haben; darauf ist ihm ein Geldbetrag mit dem Bedeuten, aufzuhören, herausgeschickt worden. Die „gekränkten" Künstler meinten nach diesem Vorkommniß: „Wenn mer nich blose sulle, wulle merr a sei Geld nich! Do! namens wieder miet! Und wenn merrn aam nich gut genung blosen, do brauch'n merr aa in dr Kerche nich ze blosen!" Beifällig nickten die anderen. „Su werd's gemacht!" Und seitdem strikt der Bläserchor.

Hamburg. Schwindelhafte Versuche, durch fingirte telephonische Aufträge Namens großer Berliner Banken bei hiesigen Bankiers größere Summen, 20,000 Mark und 70,000 Mark zu erhalten, blieben resultatlos. Der Schwindler wurde in einem hiesigen Hotel verhaftet.—Der Sekretär des verstorbenen Fürsten Bismarck, Dr. med. Die Züge hatten oft Verspätungen, da sie die unterwegs gestohlenen Gegenstände ergänzen mußten. Bei den Verhafteten wurden Handkoffer, Eßwaaren aus dem Küchenwagen, Geschirr und Goldwaaren beschlagnahmt.

Bremerhaven. Die Beschuldigung, eine schwere Freveltat begangen zu haben, war von einem Berliner Blatt gegen eine Anzahl deutscher Seeleute erhoben worden. Die Mitglieder der Besatzung des hiesigen Fischdampfers „Helgoland," welcher die Lerner'sche Polarexpedition an Bord hat, sollten darnach das Andree'sche Proviantshaus auf der Bäreninsel erbrochen und beraubt haben. Hiergegen verwahrt sich energisch der Führer der Expedition in einem Telegramm, das dieser Tage aus Archangel hier eintraf.

A STORY OF MAYFAIR

CHAPTER X.

Tired out though he was, Antony Peile, when he got back to his rooms, did not indulge in much sleep. He was up again and driving to Charing Cross by half-past nine, in time to catch the first fast train to his old home. The weariness of body and mind seemed to pass away as he was carried swiftly through the country in the clear, smiling, sunny morning. Indeed, he felt almost a thrill of excitement in the remembrance of the duty he had set himself. It was so pleasant to him to think that it was in his power to do something for Elizabeth. Nothing for a long time past had afforded him so much gratification as the news that the girl's future home was to be so near to his own early one. He pictured to himself the sympathy and affectionate companionship that were certain to spring up between his beloved aunt and Elizabeth.

"Mammy Bertha's influence is just what she needs, poor little desolate thing," he said to himself. "I cannot imagine any morbid or saddening mood holding sway very long if aunt Bertha is anywhere near. In a few months I expect Feo will begin to be quite happy about her Elizabeth."

"It has been done on purpose," he said, as he reached the gates and high walls of Speede, and passed through a smaller gate into the grounds; "it is all part and parcel of her first scheme. For some reason or other she desires the marriage; and she provided this second arrangement so that time and circumstances might help to bring it about all the same."

His footsteps quickened as this idea formed itself in his mind. The pleasure evoked so readily by his dream of making Elizabeth's future a little happier faded away completely in the presence of this last thought. He was conscious of a sharp pain for the girl's troubled pride in discovering the truth. He remembered now that he had been very silent when she had spoken so enthusiastically about his home, and that her face had worn an added touch of pallor and anxiety when they parted. He could not, of course, discern all her difficulties in connection with this new position, but he saw enough to make him suddenly experience a strong feeling of anger against the dead old woman who had brought about all these troubles. He found himself musing in an uneasy fashion, and once he awoke sharply to the consciousness that he was judging Richard Saville rather harshly.

He brushed his eyes and brow with his hand—he had taken off his hat as he walked along. Under the leafy canopy of the giant trees it was delightfully cool. He was passing through an avenue of green shade, with a distant view of the house bathed in sunshine beyond.

The avenue of shade was coming to an end now, and Antony suddenly awoke from his reverie. Just before him, stepping briskly out of the house, evidently bound for a walk in the flower gardens, was a round, dumpy little woman, in a black and white cotton gown; a broad, mushroom-shaped hat was on her head, and a large flat basket, in which gleamed a gigantic pair of scissors, was slung on her arm. A sudden warmth, a rush of strong feeling that was almost happiness, came to Antony at sight of the brisk, plump little figure. Here was one whose love could never fail, whose hand could never hurt.

"Now to give her a delightful surprise!" he said to himself; and the slight color rushed back to his face as he prepared himself for the tender attentions that would instantly be lavished upon him. "She will scream, of course, and drop her basket, dear old soul!" he added with a smile, as he put his hands up to his mouth and gave a lusty shout.

Miss Peile did exactly as he had foretold; she dropped her basket, stood and peered from under her broad-brimmed hat at the intruder in a comical sort of way, then gave a little scream, and came hurrying across the grass to meet him as fast as her legs would carry her.

"Oh, my blessed boy!" she cried as Antony took her into his arms and hugged her. "What a start you gave me, to be sure! You told me yesterday, you know, that you were not coming again for a week. Where have you come from now? And why didn't you let me know? Have you walked from the station? And have you had any breakfast? And, oh, my darling, what is the matter? You look so pale and so tired! Don't tell me you are ill, my precious bird!"

Tony laughed—there was a sound of relief in his laugh—as he walked back to the house with his arm round his aunt's shoulders. Her welcome and joy at seeing him—always sweet—had an added sweetness that morning.

"I am not ill, dear old love!" he said cheerily. "I am just a bit fagged, that's all, mammy Bertha; and, when you have given me some coffee and I have had a snooze out here under the trees, I shall be as right as ever again. Don't look at me so mournfully, old love! I am telling you the truth—I give you my word I am!"

Miss Peile nodded her head.

"I hate that nasty life of London!" she said. "It never did suit you, Tony. You look as if you had not been to sleep for a week. I was not at all happy about you when you left me yesterday. I do wish, my darling"—there was a wistful tone in the brisk voice now—"that I could persuade you to give up all this rushing about—for a little while at least! A week down here in this lovely summer weather would do you a world of good, Tony dear!"

"A glimpse of you, mammy dear, does me more good even than the summer!" he answered gently and truthfully as they passed into the house.

Miss Peile pushed him down into one of the many cosy chairs that were in the entrance hall; she took his hat and gloves, and hovered about him lovingly. Her heart had been seized with a sudden fear when she had glanced up into the pale handsome young face that had so strained and haggard a look. It was only the ghost of her boy that smiled at her and her fussy little ways; and Bertha Peile had never dreamed of the intense pain such a realization was likely to cause her.

"Now, just sit there and don't dare to move till I come back!" she ordered briskly, hiding her anxiety as best she could. She took off her mushroom hat and rumpled her close-cropped curly gray hair. "The morning papers are all on that table, my dear," she said, returning to put a cushion under his head, and stopping to put her lips softly to his brow; "but I don't want you to read or to anything, Tony—only to rest and to get that tired look out of your eyes. How I wish you were my own little Tony boy once more! I am not sure now that I shall not treat you as if you were my baby again, and put you to bed for a whole week!"

"No coercion!" cried Tony merrily, as she whisked away to order more food prepared for him than he could possibly eat in three meals.

He leaned back and closed his eyes with a sigh; the soft, balmy air stole in and eased his aching head; the very "tic-tac" sound of the old clock seemed to be full of peace, of welcome, of rest. How long was it since such a delightful dreamy sensation had taken possession of him? In this sunny, tranquil, familiar corner of his old home he was content to accept so sweet a moment without question, without struggle, without uneasy regret.

He had dropped into a deep sleep when Miss Peile came hurrying back from the kitchen, followed by a footman bearing a tray. Taking the things from the servant, she laid the noiselessly upon a table, then sat down and looked at the face she loved, till hot tears blinded her and shut the vision out. The maternal instinct came to her woman's heart at that instant to warn her of approaching pain and trouble. Tony might have laughed freely and played his part cleverly for months, and she might have been deceived as easily as he had desired she should be, had his senses always been on the alert; but sleep could not hide the reality. It was the face of no bright, free-hearted young man that Bertha Peile was gazing at so yearningly through her tears; there was a story of suffering, of anxiety, of grief, legibly written on Tony's features which no after-words could dispel nor any simulation of merriment efface.

"If there is trouble, Richard will know, Richard must tell me," she mused, as she brushed away her tears. "Perhaps that is why he has delayed coming to Speede. Oh, my boy, my darling! Thank Heaven that you at least have come back to me! I used to rid you of your troubles in your baby days; surely I shall be able to help you to face whatever trouble confronts you now, even if I am powerless to stand between it and your own heart!"

A moment later she was standing up, pouring out the coffee, and speaking cheerily. Antony had awakened with a start, and his eyes had wandered about in a dazed sort of fashion, till full consciousness returned. It was an indescribable joy to his old aunt to catch the smile from the lips again, and to listen to the merry nonsense he talked to her as he ate and drank; but she did not accept them at their old value, even though the pallor and the cloud had vanished to a great extent from his face now that he was awake. Her heart had received such a terrible shock that she did not derive the comfort she might have done from such signs as these.

The sun had made a slow golden course across the lawn and gardens of Speede; the house was in shadow now, and the heat was dying away in a cool whispering breeze that stirred the leaves of the trees and stole from the hearts of the flowers their treasured fragrance as it passed. Tea had been brought out on to the lawn, and Antony had gravely drunk three cups just to please his "mammy Bertha," and was about to drink a fourth, when there came a sound of wheels on the broad carriage-drive, and, as both Miss Peile and Tony turned at the sound, a dusty open fly came rolling swiftly round a corner, carrying a dainty little figure in black, seated gracefully on its brown-holland-covered cushions.

Sir Antony sprang to his feet.

"Feo, by all that's wonderful!" he exclaimed. "Where on earth does she spring from?" Then his face suddenly grew crimson, for he instantly remembered the one and only reason which could account for his cousin's unexpected appearance in the neighborhood of Speede that afternoon.

"Feo?" repeated Miss Peile. "Why, so it is! Well, this is a day of surprises, as you say, Tony! I wonder what——"

The rest of the speech was lost on Antony; he had reached the fly, and, with is strong young arms, had almost lifted Lady Feo from its ample depths.

The new arrival was as much astonished to see her cousin as he had been to see her.

"Tony!" she cried. "Tony—you here? I could not believe my eyes when I came round the corner. I thought you were aunt Bertha's last new man! I am covered with dust. Did you ever see such an object as I am? Did you come down this afternoon, Tony? I sent you a letter." Lady Feo paused in her remarks and queries to embrace Miss Peile most warmly. "No—I won't have any tea, dear," she said—"I have just had some. I came to pay you only a flying visit on my way back to the station. I have been to Little Stonebury with Elizabeth Druro. You know whom I mean. Gregory's cousin," Lady Feo explained to Miss Peile, as she seated herself in the cosiest chair under the trees. "I never dreamed of finding you here, Tony!" she added, as she began beating the dust out of her pretty black frock with her sunshade. "Why did you not tell me you were coming? We could all have travelled down together; and you might have made yourself useful to Elizabeth or to me."

"I came away on the spur of the moment," Sir Antony said hurriedly; "it was such a heavenly morning, it seemed a crime to spend it in town. I had a sudden longing for Speede and aunt Bertha and the country; so I started, and here I am!"

"And here I want to keep him, Feo!" Miss Peile interposed quickly. "Already he looks better than he did this morning; but that is not saying much."

Lady Feo's glance at her cousin was fraught with the anxiety that had already begun to trouble her about him. He was smiling, however, and the color brought into his face by his companion's scrutiny had given him back for the moment so much of his old boyish happy look that both the women felt reassured.

"I'm all right, mammy dear," Tony told his aunt. "Why don't you have a go at Feo? I am sure she wants setting up as much as I do!"

"I am very tired!" Lady Feo confessed, and she gave a sigh. "The last few days have been so trying! Tony, of course you have told aunt Bertha all there is to tell?"

Antony shook his head, and answered—

"No."

This was true. He had journeyed down to Speede on purpose to put the case of Elizabeth before his aunt, and claim her sympathy for the girl; he had been in his old home more than half a day, and he had not found a suitable moment in which to refer to the subject. Somehow, at the last, he felt reluctant to mention it even to one so tender and gentle and womanly as his aunt. He reflected that the task he had set himself was likely to clash with Elizabeth's sentiments about her new home. He had not realized at first how great must have been the girl's pain over the events connected with her grandmother's will; but in a very short time, as we know, Antony had given his truest sympathy to Elizabeth in connection with this matter, and it was this sympathy that seemed to rise and check the words he would have spoken respecting herself and her future. Thus, though it was a sacrifice of real happiness, Antony had determined he must keep silent. Others might mention her name and tell her story to Bertha Peile; he would say nothing, for it came to him suddenly that, were he to speak, a new gift of eloquence would illuminate all that he uttered respecting Elizabeth; and, at the thought of the misconstruction such eloquence might give rise to, even in so simple a mind as his aunt Bertha's, Tony's face flushed with a hot crimson flush that was long in dying away, and that quickened his pulses. So the hours had slipped away and he had said nothing—nothing of Dick will or of Richard Saville's inheritance. He did not even once mention the name that already sounded like sweet music in his ears each time he heard it spoken.

"You have been here a whole day, and you have told aunt Bertha nothing of what has happened? Well, you are a funny boy!"

"We have been talking over old times," Miss Peile said, as she turned the heel of the gray worsted stocking she was knitting. She was considerably relieved; Feo evidently noticed no very great change in Antony. "What is this wonderful news, Feo dear? Of course I know all about old Mrs. Latimar's death. Gregory's cousin used to live with the old lady, I remember. Has she come to stay in Stonebury, Feo?"

"Yes—at a school." Feo Latimar watched the busy knitting-needles for an instant. "I want you to look after Elizabeth, aunt Bertha," she said abruptly after this slight pause; and Tony's heart gave a leap of pleasure as she spoke.

His silence seemed to be fully justified now; Feo's lips were the proper ones to plead for friendship and care for Elizabeth.

"She is an odd girl," Lady Feo went on quickly. "When you get to know her, you will understand what I mean. But she is very sweet and good—I feel she will soon love you, and you——"

Miss Peile caught the sound of something in the younger woman's voice which could not be put into words.

"You may rest content, Feo," she said gently, letting her busy hands lie idly for a moment. "I shall not be happy till I have done all I can for your little Elizabeth. She is at school at Stonebury, you say, dear? Then she must be with Mrs. Procter; and, if that is so, you need not trouble about the child; she will be under the care of one of the best and kindest women I ever knew."

"I am sure what you say is all right, aunt Bertha!" Lady Feo said; but there was no enthusiasm in her voice. "I was agreeably surprised with Mrs. Procter, and I am still wondering how such a nice woman came to be a great friend of grannie Latimar's; but the truth is I don't want Elizabeth to be with Mrs. Procter or with anybody else. I want her to be with me—to make her home with me. I have always wanted this, and I always expected this would be the arrangement when grannie died; and now grannie is dead, and——" Then out came the whole story of the will, of Elizabeth's position, and her determination to carry out her grandmother's wishes, even at the cost of her youth and the happiness that should be part of it.

Miss Peile listened intently. She had ceased knitting. Her face, under her mushroom hat, had a new and, to Antony, who was watching her eagerly, a curious expression. She sat bolt-upright in her chair, a marked contrast in her homely gown to dainty, pretty Feodorowna Latimar, whose morning garb was as graceful and picturesque as Parisian hands could make it, and whose face was flushed and excited as she poured out her woes to so sympathetic a listener as aunt Bertha.

"Now you can quite understand my disappointment—can't you, dear?" Feo asked, when all was told. "And you will see that I have some right to be angry over the cruel will that has upset all my plans just when they should have been realized so happily. I am sure you are sorry for me, aunt Bertha—aren't you?"

Miss Peile's knitting-needles were again clinking in and out industriously.

"Yes—I am very sorry for you, Feo, my dear," she said heartily, with the gentle ascent that was so constant in her voice. "Sorry for you, sorry for this little girl, and sorry for Richard also!"

Lady Feo grunted.

"I don't know why you should waste any pity upon Mr. Saville. He at least has no reason to grumble at grannie's will!"

"Nevertheless I am sorry for him," was Miss Peile's answer, given very quietly. "Richard is not the man to accept a position easily."

Tony flashed a look of gratitude toward his aunt. Her words were like a grasp of the hand from some old dear friend. The confusion of thought, the resentment, the doubt, the sense of desolation that had taken possession of his mind since reading Saville's letter vanished suddenly on his hearing Bertha Peile's expression of unabated confidence in and sympathy for the man he loved so deeply and truly. He turned to his cousin a little hurriedly.

"Have you seen Dick to-day, Feo?" he asked. He had a vague sense of regret at having left town without at least trying to see his "brother," and so dispelling the feelings that had taken possession of him so completely.

Lady Feo shook her head. She still continued to beat her sunshade against her skirt, but it was evident she was doing so unconsciously.

"No," she answered. "I just missed him when I reached Bloomsbury Square this morning. Gregory and he had paid an early visit to Elizabeth; and I fancy"—Lady Feo's eyes flashed suddenly, and her lips were compressed for an instant—"I fancy the interview was not altogether satisfactory or agreeable either for your dear Mr. Saville!"

There was a moment's silence. Once again Feo's tone, her words, her whole attitude, communicated a sort of uneasiness to Sir Antony. On the previous night he had been too much surprised by recent events to make any remark; but now, with his affection and trust restored by his aunt's speech to their old groove, he felt constrained to stand up against Lady Feo's anger and bitter suggestions.

"I hope you are not going to help to make things less satisfactory for Dick where Miss Druro is concerned, Feo?" he said, a little coldly.

Lady Feo looked at him quietly, defiantly.

"I do not suppose anything I can say or do will have the very smallest influence upon Mr. Saville's position, Tony!" she replied, not only with coldness, but also with a touch of hauteur in her voice.

Miss Peile broke in hurriedly here.

"How old is Miss Druro?" she asked. Her eyes, seemingly fixed upon her knitting, took in to the full the hot anger, the doubt, the real unhappiness that burdened Feo's heart at that moment; and her own gentle breast was suddenly filled with amazement at the discovery of so much unconcealed doubt and dislike of Antony's beloved Dick.

Lady Feo told Miss Peile how old Elizabeth was; and the old lady put down her knitting.

"Poor little blossom!" she said tenderly. "Poor little sweet-and-twenty! Feo, you see I am making up my mind to fall desperately in love with Elizabeth! Wait a little while, and you will find I have cut you out altogether!"

All the anger and hardness went out of Lady Feo's face.

"I am not afraid," she answered. "Elizabeth will never change, never forget, never fail! When once she loves she loves always; and she will love you, aunt Bertha dear, though you won't cut me out. I can tell you that it is only my real gleam of pleasure to realize that you are going to be so near each other. But now I must be off again, if I am to catch my train. Tony, are you coming back with me?"

Tony nodded his head.

"Yes," he said; and, as his aunt looked at him imploringly, he went across and kissed her. "I will came back to you, mammy, dear," he assured her tenderly; "but I must go now. I want to see Dick very particularly; and there are several things I must attend to in town."

"First and foremost he has come to amuse me" Lady Feo observed autocratically. "Of course there is no more going out for me this season! Gregory was suggesting that we should take a trip in your Ladylove, Tony. I think the sea air would do 'Pootles' good."

But Bertha Peile's strong sunbrowned hand clung to Antony's arm.

"Oh, don't take my boy away from me again—at least, not just yet, Feo!" she said hurriedly. "Why not all come down and stay at Speede for a while? The place is big enough to hold twice the number, I am sure. And then you would be near Elizabeth; and——"

Lady Feo, however, was in a fractious mood.

"It is Elizabeth herself I want, aunt Bertha! Being near her would not satisfy me in the least, I assure you!"

Antony nodded laughingly to his aunt as he turned away.

"A second edition of the little boy and the blue plate of tradition," he said. He was glad to drift into his old nonsensical mood with Feo. "Poor Gregory!"

Lady Feo's eyes flashed at him.

"Go and get your hat and things. If I am to catch my train I must start at once!"

"You should have sent me word that you were coming, Feo," Miss Peile said, when the two women were alone, and she had heard all the news there was to hear about Gregory, the baby, "Pootles," and the rest of Lady Feodora's belongings.

"I did not know I was coming, dear aunt Bertha! Of course, I longed to see Elizabeth safe in her new home; but I was quite prepared to be disappointed. In fact," Feo said, with characteristic frankness, "I had made up my mind to have an awful scene with Elizabeth when I arrived this morning; but for once in my life I was agreeably surprised! Poor child, she just gave way as meekly as a lamb to everything I wanted! She was glad to see me, aunt Bertha! I am very fond of scolding, as you know, and I was in the very mood for objecting to everything and everybody; but, when Elizabeth met me so gently, all my anger disappeared."

"She has lived in one groove for so many years, poor little creature," Miss Peile said softly, "that this great change must be very trying to her!"

"Yes—you are right, aunt Bertha," Lady Feo agreed. "For all her wonderful courage, I am sure it cost Elizabeth a tremendous effort to turn her back on that gloomy old house, and realize that her old life was gone forever. And then," the younger woman added quickly, a shadow coming over her bright face again, "to add to all the trouble, I know she was both upset and annoyed by the interview with Mr. Saville this morning. I think it was very inconsiderate of him to insist upon seeing her—at any rate, for a time. I begged Gregory to prevent it if he could. But he told me Mr. Saville was determined to speak to Elizabeth; and, as he is supposed to be her guardian now, you see he had the right to insist on having his own way, whether Elizabeth liked it or not." Lady Féo rose and shook out her soft skirts. She looked singularly slim and girlish in her long clinging black gown, with a wide black hat crowning her pretty head. There was something more than mere girlishness in her expression, however, at that moment. "No doubt," she went on in the same constrained voice, as Miss Peile rose also, and they sauntered across the grass toward the path where the fly was waiting—"no doubt he had something to say. But what good he supposed he could do by troubling the girl at such a moment I am sure I don't know!"

"Richard's position is an exceedingly disagreeable one," Miss Peile said, repeating her former statement in a low hurried voice.

"Well, he will have to make the best of it, that's all!" was Lady Féo's blunt response. "At all events, he can renounce every thought of obtaining any assistance from Elizabeth! With the exception of her paltry fifty pounds a year left to her, the girl would sooner die than touch a penny of grannie's money. You cannot conceive what a proud creature she is, aunt Bertha! I assure you I can imagine nothing more distressing or painful to a girl like Elizabeth than this miserable will business must be! She has no angry feeling towards Mr. Saville; she only wants to avoid coming into direct contact with the man who has stood, even for so short a time, in such a strange position towards herself. If Mr. Saville has any sincere regret over the business," Féo Latimar said grimly, "he might show it by honoring Elizabeth's distaste for any discussion of it. And, if"—a little more grimly—"if he really finds his inheritance a burden, I would counsel him either to divide it among the disappointed members of the Latimar family—who won't refuse any offer he may make—or hand it all over to some charitable institution!"

At any other time Bertha Peile could not have refrained from smiling at Féo's anger, but she was not inclined to smile now. Like Antony, she had had in the past many experiences of Féo's jealousy of Richard Saville; and perhaps, in her secret heart, the elder woman had not found it easy to judge harshly of the girl's feeling toward Antony's guardian, knowing as she did how exceedingly dear the boy had always been to his little cousin. But this new anger was something quite different from the anger of the old days, and, as such, it added to the vague disquietude and dread that had been so suddenly introduced into her deep yearning love for her boy. At any other time, in her own kind way, she would have chidden Féo for her impetuous expression of annoyance with Mr. Saville; but on this day there ran a deeper vein of feeling through Lady Féo's antagonism; and somehow, as she realized all Féo's tender thought and love for Elizabeth, and caught the deep note of pain that escaped her, Bertha Peile found she could utter no words, even of laughing rebuke, against Féo's latest exhibition of wrath towards Antony's "big brother."

She roused herself to seem very cheerful and smile at Tony when he came to kiss her before getting into the fly; but there was something lacking in the brightness of the smile. Antony looked at her very tenderly.

THE CALL FOR PORCUPINE QUILLS

Many Gross of Them Shipped to New York and London.

"What may those quills be?" asked the writer, pointing to several small bundles of black and white spikes, which recently lay on the table of an importing house in New York.

"They are samples of porcupine quills," said the merchant. They come from India and also from Spain, and are chiefly sold to fishing tackle houses. These concerns polish and supply them with the necessary pieces of cork to increase their natural buoyancy, and the quills are then purchased by anglers, who use them quite extensively for bottom fishing. Some of the black and white spikes are made into penholders and pipe stems. They are also largely utilized in making up ornamental screens and fancy fans.

"The porcupine has to be hunted and killed before the quills can be obtained, and many thousands of these animals are slain for this purpose yearly. Every "spike pig" carries from $1.50 to $3 worth of quills on his fretful back. The quills are carefully extracted, and when dried they are packed in boxes or crates and shipped to London and New York. They are worth from $6 to $7 a gross wholesale, and the supply is barely equal to the demand in this country."

PLAINTIFF DEFEATED.

MRS. WILLIAM THOMPSON FINALLY WON IMPORTANT CASE.

She Was Sued by a Real Estate Agent Who Wanted Commissions on a Big Sale of Real Estate on Long Island.

The second trial of W. H. Agricola against Mrs. William Thompson, of Central avenue, took place yesterday at Elizabeth before Judge VanSyckel and a jury in the circuit court. The suit was brought by a real estate broker who claimed commissions for exchanging Brooklyn property of Mrs. Thompson valued at $55,000 for Jamaica property, and the defense was that although Agricola brought the parties together and started the negotiations, he never completed them and the exchange was finally brought about by another broker named Woodward.

The first trial resulted in favor of the plaintiff but on the second trial, which was concluded yesterday, Mrs. Thomas was successful. Agricola was represented by Mr. Stillwell, of Jersey City, and Mrs. Thompson's counsel were Nelson Runyon and Craig A. Marsh.

Like some of the other cases at this term of court considerable asperity was manifested by the parties and their respective counsel. When the foreman of the jury announced the verdict in favor of Mrs. Thompson it was difficult for her friends to repress a demonstration of their pleasure, although the court was then in the midst of another trial.

Electric Fans.

"Electric fans have probably come to stay," remarked an electrician, "and, though they are decidedly pleasant to many during the stuffy and very warm weather, there are some things about them that are not thoroughly enjoyable, as far as after effects are concerned. My experience is that persons should not sit for any long time in the direct draft of them, especially if they are sensitive to drafts. It may not always feel so, but the fan is just as cooling as if the wind produced by it does not strike you directly. Better have it strike you from either side, however, than full in the face or back, and especially avoid having it play on the back of your neck. People who are suffering from neuralgia have found this out for themselves. There is a peculiarity about electric fans, and that is that persons sitting so the wind plays on the directly in nine cases out of ten will have a slight attack of sneezing the moment they go out in the open air. The fans in stores that paddle the breeze over the head of the customers do less damage than the wheels that shoot the air directly at you. If the circulation is above the head it is better than if it is on the level of your head."—Washington Star.

NEWSPAPER OF CLOUDLAND,

Unique Sheet Gotten Out on Top of Pike's Peak.

Unique among the newspaper offices of the United States, and probably the highest in the world, is that printed on Pike's Peak during the summer. The paper was an experiment last season, but this year it proved a full-fledged success and was published twice a day out among the trees that are very scanty up at timber line. The publisher is T. B. Wilson.

For several years Wilson has been publishing newspapers in the mountains. When he started the "Pike's Peak News" it was with some misgivings. He located his office on the very peak. The storms, however, are so frequent that he found it better to move down a little, but is then stationed 12,000 feet above the sea level. When the train on the cog road comes puffing its way up from Manitou the passengers are induced to give their names. Then while they go to the top the paper is printed and in it are the names of all who have been on the peak that day. Of course there is a large sale among them, as they desire the papers for souvenirs of the visit.

Not much news is in this mountain-top paper, for there is little happening on Pike's Peak. With the coming of the early storms of winter the paper is suspended, for the visitors are not there to buy the copies. The press and type are moved to the warm valleys of the town below, and there continue in service as an aid to a local paper until there is a resumption of the summer sight-seeing and travel up the peak. The one annoyance of the printer is the relic hunter. When the newspaper man's back is turned there is a rush of laughing girls for the type cases to gather type for souvenirs of the trip. He has several times been compelled to buy new type to replace that taken in this way. Standing out in the open air, the temptation to take a bit of the metal is very strong. One day he published a notice, saying:

"Iph there are seen a phew mistakes in this paper and we phail to spell all names right, do not blame us, phor it is the best we can do. Some phlighty girls phrom Boston philched all our ephs."—Boston Transcript.

FINDLAY S. DOUGLAS.

He Is the Amateur Golf Champion of the United States.

Findlay S. Douglas, the Scot, who earned the right to be called amateur golf champion of the United States by his defeat of Walter B. Smith, the young Onwentsia man and Yale champion, learned his golf in the orthodox old town of St. Andrews where he was born twenty-two years ago. Thus having every advantage to become an expert, he improved his opportunities so as to become scratch man at St. Andrews and also at other clubs. While a student in the university in his native town, he was for two years captain of the golf team. Shortly before his departure for America in the spring of 1897 he won the St. Andrews medal, with seventy-eight strokes. Coming to this country he soon became established at the Fairfield County Golf Club, Greenwich, Conn., as scratch man, and his fame grew so rapidly that he was regarded as the east's most promising candidate for championship honors in the fall of 1897. But after qualifying third among the sixteen and reaching the semi-finals, he was disposed of by Whigman, six up, five to play. Later Douglas defeated Whigham in the Lakewood tournament. Douglas has an easy, graceful style, is a very good uphill player, and has a remarkable amount of nerve. He plays long iron shots especially well. His good work at Morristown, qualifying fourth at 180, and disposing of young Curtis, A. H. Smith of Huntington Valley, Stillman, Travis, and lastly, Smith, besides his remarkably good score play throughout stamped him as a likely winner. His card of seventy-six, made in his match with Stillman, is evidence of his perfect play, and the card is one that is likely to stand for some time. The best previous record was seventy-nine, made by the professional, Willie Anderson, of Baltusrol.

FINDLAY S. DOUGLAS.

DEVIL AN EARTHLY LANDLORD.

Spot in Finland Deeded and Willed to His Satanic Majesty.

There is only one spot on the earth's surface that has actually been willed, deeded, and bequeathed to his Satanic majesty. This spot lies four miles and a half south of Helsingfors, Finland.

A few years ago Lara Huilariene died in the little town of Pielisjarvi, in the above named country, leaving considerable property in the shape of landed estate. How he had come into possession of so much land no one seemed to know, but as he was a very bad citizen it was generally admitted that he was in league with Wintahausu (Satan), and that they had many business deals with each other.

This somewhat startling opinion was verified when on Huilariene was found a certified warranty deed, giving to Satan all his earthly possessions.

The will was to the same effect. The family have repeatedly tried to break the will, but so far have been unsuccessful. Thus the records plainly show that his sulphuric majesty has a legal right and title to some excellent grounds in the near vicinity of Helsingfors.

The simple people of the neighborhood have changed the course of the road which formerly skirted the Huilariene homestead, and declare that they would not enter the possessions of Satan & Co. for all the money that the three estates would bring.—Pearson's Journal.

A Polite Young Barbarian.

Somebody over near Dupont Circle owns a small boy who is unmistakably destined for greatness. He was playing in the circle the other day, and a mite of a girl, presumably his sister, was annoying him mightily. Presently she tried him too far and he gave her a push that sent her headlong to the pavement. Her screams attracted the attention of everybody except her nurse, who was gossiping with another nurse some distance away. The usual woman who reproves other people's children was on hand, however.

"Oh, little boy," said she, "what made you strike your little sister? Don't you know it's very, very wrong to do so?"

The boy went on with the hop-scotch diagram he was drawing.

"Oh," he remarked, unconcernedly, "that's all right. I'll feel sorry by and by, and then I'll ask her pardon like a little gentleman. That'll fix it."—Washington Post.

THE FATEFUL DOUBLE SIX.

Property Worth $60,000 Destroyed By Flames Early Yesterday Morning.

BIGGEST FIRE IN EIGHT YEARS IN PLAINFIELD.

Building Owned By A. D. Thompson, and Occupied By Bard Company and Corle's Livery Stable, Destroyed By Flames That Threatened Far More Serious Results at One Time—Origin of Fire Is a Mystery—Started in Bicycle Repair Shop—The Loss Partially Covered By Insurance.

Thousands of dollars worth of valuable property in the very heart of the city went up in flame and smoke yesterday morning to greet the rising sun. The large building, reaching from North avenue to East Second street, occupied by the Bard Company and the boarding stables of C. V. D. Corle, caught fire in some unknown manner and was completely gutted. The total loss will amount up to $60,000. By almost superhuman exertions the fire department prevented the fire from spreading to the brick and frame structures that surrounded it on every side.

For the first time in eight years the fateful "double six" was sounded and every able-bodied fireman in the city and borough hurried to the scene to give their aid. The fire was the worst Plainfield has witnessed for eight years, and but for the marvelous exertions of the Plainfield and North Plainfield fire departments, must have swept an entire block right out of the centre of the business section of the city. Narrow escapes were numerous, but providentially there were no serious results to any of the accidents.

It was after four o'clock yesterday morning when Roundsman Frederickson made his way to the station house after completing a round of the city. As he walked up the path he noticed a little column of smoke rising from the row of buildings on North avenue. The roundsman started on a run up to the railroad station and from there could see the smoke pouring out of the second-story windows of the establishment of the Bard Company across the street. The building was 60 feet wide and nearly 400 long. It was two stories high and divided by a brick partition into the Bard Company's store and the stable. The brick partition did not run clear to the roof.

When the Roundsman saw the smoke he hurried across the street. A glance in the window showed that the ceiling was just beginning to burn in the rear of the store. He turned in an alarm at once from Box 13, corner of Park avenue and North avenue.

Several of the indicators in the different fire department headquarters did not work correctly and the firemen were left in doubt as to the location of the fire. The shouts of the officer brought them in short order. Second Assistant Engineer Jennings was one of the first on the scene and took command until the arrival of Chief Doane. One of Jenning's first acts was to instruct Patrolman Mattox to send in a second alarm immediately. It followed the first in four minutes.

As the chemical engine and truck approached the building on the North avenue side, the flames were not visible. Sergeant Kiely and Patrolman Mattox were forcing an entrance through the front door. Then the apparatus reached the place. Instantly there was a terrific explosion. The upper part of the front wall was hurled into the street while a puff of black, blinding smoke, as from a cannon, accompanied it. The next second a great flame shot heavenward.

With the crash, the horses of the apparatus sprang away affrightened and thus escaped the shower of bricks and other debris. The bricks crashed against the truck and flew about the head of L. M. Dunavan, who was acting as tillermrn. H. C. Bush was acting as driver. Both escaped unhurt. A hundred weight of brick work fell where the horses to the chemical had been an instant before. They had jumped to the side. As it was, they were struck on the hoofs by the flying debris which also rattled on the wheels of the engine. Driver George Feiring had a close call.

Sergeant Kiely and Patrolman Mattox were directly underneath when the explosion came. One ran one way and other the other and escaped practically unhurt. Each thought that the other was buried beneath the ruins of the wall. Charles S. Cook, a trusted employe of The Daily Press, was trying to gain entrance to the flats in the Woolston & Buckle building next door when the bricks rattled down about his ears and compelled him to beat a retreat.

After the explosion, the flames burst forth and soon the North avenue end of the building became a vast furnace. The wind was blowing hard from the north-west and carried the cloud of sparks over the North Avenue station, Rheaume's lumber yard, and to the front of the old Crescent Rink on Watchung avenue, near East Fourth street.

Three minutes after the second alarm, Chief Doane arrived and, taking in the situation at a glance, hurried to the box and sent in the fateful "double six," a signal for the North Plainfield fire department and all other aid possible. The last time it was blown was at the destruction of the Boice, Runyon & Co. lumber yard eight years ago.

Chief Doane found his force a small one, indeed, as only one or two of the volunteers had arrived and he only had the drivers and paid employes of the department available. The heat was so intense that the men were driven to the opposite side of the street. Out of a window above hung Eugene O'Reilly, the well-known musician, yelling forth direction regarding the progress of the fire. The Chief ordered the men forward and they went, playing the streams on each other at intervals.

The flames curled around the cornice to the buildings across the street and one stream was kept busy there. The handsome brick structure belonging to Woolston & Buckle, next door to the headquarters of the Bard Company, was looked after. The cornice and window casings caught fire at once.

Meanwhile, Sergeant Kiely, Patrolman Mattox and Higgins had stretched the fire lines keeping the crowd off North avenue from McVey's Hotel to the telephone central office. The network of wires and cables strung on poles along North avenue soon began to snap and fall, making progression there very dangerous. Superintendent McClurg had the current shut off in that district as soon as he arrived, thus extinguishing the lights but preventing any trouble with "live" wires.

The police broke in the door leading to the flats in the Woolston & Buckle building and warned Edward Maynard, the colored barber, of the impending danger. His wife was overcome by excitement and had to be carried to a place of safety. The rest of the family watched the progress of the flames from the street. A line of hose was dragged up to the third floor and so saved that building. Lacking firemen, Chief Doane was compelled to press the spectators into service, and it was with difficulty that he could get help enough to drag the heavy hose upstairs. Had that building caught fire, there is little doubt but that the whole block would have gone as there were large quantities of paint, varnish, turpentine and various oils stored in the cellar.

On the right of the burning building are several one story wooden structures which would burn like tinder if they ever caught. Sergeant Kiely had considerably difficulty in waking Ted Clevely who sleeps in his store there. He and his principal valuables were hurried away to a place of safety. The firemen turned a stream on his and the adjoining buildings and the little barn and woodshed in the rear saving them from destruction. It seems wonderful now that they were not all burned as the heat was intense. The side of the little office of the Plainfield Ice and Cold Storage Company caught fire but the flames were extinguished before serious damage was wrought.

The efforts of the Plainfield department were mainly directed toward the North avenue end of the building. No. 2 engine was stationed by the hydrant at the corner of North and Watchung avenues. Lines of hose were also run from all the neighboring hydrants, making nine in all furnished by the Plainfield department. Chief Doane and Assistant Jennings were in command on that side.

The Alert Hose Company ran its lines from the second street side and fought the fire from the yards west of the building. The barn, belonging to Karl Kaerth, next door in the rear of the stable, was ablaze. Gus Sergeant, Charles Smith and Ephriam Compton handled one of the streams for the Alert company and put out the flames after the roof and side were partially burned. The horses and wagons were taken out by Mr. Kaerth and others.

The attention of the North Plainfield department was turned to Corle's stable on their arrival. Chief Fairchild was brought over in Chief Doane's wagon and directed the work of his men while Foreman Roger Murray commanded Alert's men.

William H. Greenwood, of McVey's Hotel, was the first to think of the horses in Corle's stable. He had his valuable animal there. He could not gain entrance to the place until Harry McDonald came to his assistance and suggested an axe. They both went for one and Greenwood returned first and forced open the door. At that time the stable was filled with smoke and a faint light could be seen in the rear.

The crowd gathered quickly and the work of rescuing the horses who were plunging and snorting within, was begun at once. The entrance was blocked with wagons and it was necessary to remove some of them before the horses could be led out. There were twenty-four of them in all. Blankets and coats were thrown over their heads and most of the equines were led out without trouble. The last two tried hard to return to the flames which were then burning fiercely in the elevator shaft. One broke away and rushed back and it took the united efforts of eight men to push it out of the stable.

The flat above the stable was occupied by Eldridge Kline, a colored man, and his family. He expected to move out Saturday and had all his goods packed up, but the day was so stormy that he waited. With him were his wife, little son, mother and sister. The lad, Robert Kline, was the first in the family to discover the fire. It was only after repeated calling, however, that he impressed the fact on the rest. Mrs. Anne Kline, the aged mother of Eldridge Kline, fainted in the excitement and the rescuers had to carry her down stairs in a cot.

The wagons on the first floor were drawn out, some of them badly burned. The delivery wagon of Morey & LaRue was nearly destroyed. On the second floor were ten carriages, consisting of four traps and sundry runabouts, buggies, surries and closed carriages, and nine sleighs. Some were the property of Mr. Corle and others were kept there for his patrons. All were destroyed. The delivery wagon of the Plainfield Beef Company was also destroyed.

William Chamberlain was on duty at the nozzle of a line in the stable when some burning woodwork fell in his back, badly burning him. Johnson Young, working with Driver Feiring of the chemical, in the Woolston & Buckle building, had his hands burned and blistered by the intense heat.

After the first great explosion, there was a second smaller one. William Addis, Jr., was standing at a nozzle on North avenue when the puff of flames surrounded him and burned both his hands.

Chief Doane says that the great explosion was caused by the sudden contact of fresh air and super-heated smoke. The combination is very explosive and is commonly known among firemen as the "back-draft." At the time, it was thought that a keg of powder had exploded but there was none there.

The Chief's theory is that the fire had been burning in the second floor for an hour at least before discovered. At 3:37, Patrolman Mattox passed by and tried the door but he saw no sign of fire then. The only practicable theory for the origin of the fire is spontaneous combustion. There was one gas jet burning in the centre of the first floor, but the fire apparently started in the second. The second explosion may have been caused by the explosion of a gallon of benzine in the bicycle repair department.

The general alarm had its effect for the people of the city were thoroughly aroused. They came, men, women and children, in all sorts of attire and stood and watched the efforts of the

STABBED IN NECK ON LONELY ROAD.

After Night of Carousing Wm. Drobney Was Murdered.

COMRADES ARE SUSPECTED.

WARREN STREETER ADMITS THAT THERE WAS A FRACAS.

Bound Brook Has Another Sensation—Fatality Took Place Close to County Line—County Authorities Claim That the Blow was Struck in Middlesex and That the Man Died in Somerset.

(Special to The Daily Press.)

Bound Brook, October 17—After an evening of drinking and carousing at "Mulvey's," as the Port Reading Hotel is familiarly called, William Drobney, of Somerville, started to walk to the Bound Brook station with two boon companions. When next seen he was a fast-stiffening corpse, lying face downward on the road with a jagged cut on the left side of his throat. His companions of the evening now rest in jail, suspected of being implicated in the murder of the young man.

A party of three young men, apparently in the best of spirits, took the trolley car from Somerville Saturday evening for Bound Brook. They were William Drobney, who is employed in a brickyard there, Warren Streeter, son of Enoch Streeter, a well-known painter in Somerville, and Joseph Spencer, Jr., whose father is employed at the brickyard as well.

Drobney was twenty-one years old and the others were slightly older. All believed in a friendly glass, now and then, and they had sampled several before they left Somerville. Arriving in Bound Brook they went to the Port Reading Hotel, that lies down close to the Raritan river, just over in Middlesex county. There they spent the remainder after their fashion of enjoyment.

It was nearly midnight when, according to the testimony of various witnesses, they left the hotel with the intention of returning to Somerville. It is said that all three were badly intoxicated. While there may have been several arguments among them they all appeared on good terms when they departed. That was the last time the three were seen together.

Edward Smalley has been driving the stage between Bound Brook and the termination of the New Brunswick trolley. After his last trip he brought his team to the Port Reading Hotel and unhitched them. He boarded at the hotel. After putting up his horses he discovered that some miscreant had stolen his blankets from the stage. Knowing that the theft must have taken place in the last few minutes he decided to take the shortest route to Bound Brook with the hope of finding the thief.

From the Port Reading Hotel and the river roads there are two ways into the town. One is dark and lonely. It leads up between the embankments of the Lehigh Valley and Port Reading Railroads and then passes under the Lehigh and Central tracks. The Lehigh Valley depot is reached just before passing under the bridge. On the road are two bridges over small streams. Somewhere between these two lies the county line between Somerset and Middlesex. The other and more often used way is by the new causeway and East Main street.

Smalley selected the dark and lonely way as being the shorter. As he hurried along the cinder path on the right of the road, at 12 o'clock, he stumbled over a body lying face downwards. Supposing it to be a drunken man, he lit a match. When he rolled the body over, there was a horrid cut on the left side of his neck nearly four inches in length. He had bled very freely and his clothing and the ground were saturated with gore.

Horrified at his discovery, Smalley hastened back to the hotel and told the grewsome news. He recognized the man as Drobney. A colored man named George Lewis, from Bound Brook, was there. He remembered the three young men and started to Bound Brook at once to identify the others if they could be found. Word was also sent to Chief Marshal Sebring, of Bound Brook, about the tragedy.

Lewis came to town and, at the Jersey Central station, found Streeter and Spencer fast asleep in a drunken slumber. Chief-Marshal Sebring was notified and came and put the two men under arrest. At that time, it is alleged, both were intoxicated.

Coroner Stillwell, of Somerville, was sent for and arrived here at 4 o'clock yesterday morning. The prisoners were then detained at the hotel across

JOE WAS NOT CREMATED.

WHEN MOURNED AS DEAD, HE MADE HIS APPEARANCE.

Chas. Vail's Barn Near South Plainfield, Destroyed By Fire—Supposed that Farm Hand and Horse Perished.

While Joe Gillespe was supposed to be a charred corpse hidden beneath the ruins of Charles Vail's barn, he appeared yesterday afternoon the same as ever to the great surprise of the family and neighbors who were sure that he was dead.

Compton Vail and Charles Vail both live in Plainfield avenue, near South Plainfield. W. W. Hall, Charles Vail's father in-law, lives with the latter. They employ a Polander named Joe Gillespe to help about the farm. Saturday evening Compton Vail found Joe in Plainfield. He was sadly intoxicated. Vail bundled him into his wagon and drove him home. It was midnight when Compton Vail left Joe at Charles Vail's home. Then Compton went home and prepared to retire. He noticed a glow in the sky and looking out saw that his brother's barn was enveloped in flames.

Mr. Hall locked up the barn as usual last evening. He put the three horses in the stalls and fastened them in. He also put up four calves. The cows were turned out in the yard. At 12:30 o'clock, he was aroused by a farm hand of Joel Manning's, who lives near by, telling him the barn was on fire.

When they hurried out, they found two of the horses. which had been securily fastened in the barn, running about the field. The calves were there as well. Joe and one horse were missing. So was the lantern that usually is kept on the piazza.

The fire burnt itself out, completely destroying the barn. The loss was $800, which was partially covered by insurance. It was supposed that Joe and one horse were cremated and such a message was sent to his family. Yesterday afternoon, Joe and the missing horse showed up separately. Joe, who can talk but very little English, could not explain what had happened.

Patrolman Nicholas Myers saw the light of the fire and sent in an alarm from box 37. The apparatus went as far as Sherman avenue but, finding the fire far beyond the city limits, returned.

Among the other things burned was a delivery wagon owned by the Grand Union Tea Company, for whom Vail worked.

PRIMARIES IN SOMERSET.

Delegates to the County Convention Chosen by the Republicans.

The primaries in Warren township for the election of delegates to the county convention were held Saturday afternoon at the Mt. Bethel Hotel. The interest was intense and there were fully 150 present at both.

The Republican primary was called to order by John C. Cooper who was made chairman. There was only one ticket in the field, and the delegates chosen were John C. Cooper, John Wendell, Howard Toms, A. J. Jennings and Charles Mundy. The delegates were pledged to support Edward Cooper.

The Democratic primary was called to order by Horace Coddington and he was made chairman. Geo. Bowers was secretary. The delegates were Horace Coddington, Robert Zerkiball, Peter Bowers, Jr., William Miller, Jacob Reinmann and John D. Bowman.

When the primaries were adjourned the delegates and politicians all proceeded to Young's Hotel to partake of refreshments and cigars. When the hotel keeper looked for the money no one guaranteed to pay, so the landlord turned the whole delegation out of doors.

The Democratic primaries of North Plainfield township were held Saturday afternoon at Demler's Hotel. The delegates chosen were Wm. Demler and Francis Bartell.

In Hillsboro and Montgomery townships, the delegations that were elected by the Republicans will support Assemblyman VanDoren for sheriff and the other Reed candidates. Franklin township's delegation consisted of Thompson men who will support Suydam for sheriff.

Edward Cooper, the Thompson candidate for the Assembly, is well-known in Plainfield as one of the leading workers of the G. O. P. in Warren township.

Held Court, Then Went to Church.

The unusual proceeding of holding court on Sunday was adopted by Mayor Wilson, of the borough, yesterdap. His Honor held court at 9 o'clock yesterday morning, after which he atteded divine worship. There were three cases of intoxication and disorder, Levi Eird, Frank Willetts and J. Apgar. Each were fined $5 and in each case the amount was paid.

FLAMES SAVED HORSE.

BURNED HALTER STRAP, AND THE HORSE ESCAPED CREMATION.

Fire in Stable of John Reed, of Leland Avenue—Of Incendiary Origin—Angry Employes Suspected—Barn Saved.

The third fire-alarm within twenty-four hours was given from Box 28, last evening at 10:50 o'clock. A small boy in the family of John Reed, of Leland avenue, had gone out to the stable to get a drink, as the pump at the house was out of order. He found a lively conflagration in progress. The stable is adjoining John Reed's brickyard.

The family all turned out and had the flames under control when the apparatus arrived. The fire was very evidenty of incendiary origin. The odor of kerosene was strong. The oil had been thrown on the ceiling and wall above one of the stalls and allowed to run down into the manger. The light had been applied in the manger.

The haltar holding the horse in the stall had been burnt off and the animal backed off into a corner where he was found. The damage will amount to $200. Luckily the hay upstairs did not catch although the floor was nearly burned through.

Mr. Reed has been having some trouble with several of his employes and it is thought that perhaps one of them sought revenge.

COMPLAINT WAS DISMISSED.

Charge Made Against Powers Couldn't be Proved.

Michael Powers, of South avenue, appeared before Justice Nash Saturday night to make a complaint against his son, Garrett Powers, whom he charges with abusing him and threatening his life. Justice Nash took the complaint and issued the warrant, and during the evening Garrett gave bonds before Justice Mattison for his appearance before Justice Nash for trial this morning.

When the case came to trial this morning, Powers was not able to prove the threats and abuse. Part of the alleged trouble occurred in Somerset county, across the brook, and over that Justice Nash has no jurisdiction. The complaint was therefore dismissed.

ETTINGER IS DEAD.

Unable to Survive Bullet Wound and Died Yesterday Afternoon.

The death of Michael Ettinger, of Cottage place, occurred Saturday night at Muhlenberg Hospital. A week ago Mr. Ettinger shot himself with intent to kill. He was taken to the hospital and an effort was made to save his life by an operation. The bullet was removed from his head, but his vitality was so low that recovery was impossible. The funeral services will be held tomorrow afternoon at 2:30 o'clock, from the home of Michael Coyne, 508 East Third street.

The Catholic Fair.

The fair and bazaar at the Catholic Club was continued Saturday evening. The first contest, for a wheel or bicycle, was decided. Miss Hammond won, having collected $126. The second had collected $115, the third $101. All three are little girls and their success is looked upon as phenominal. The booths were replenished with new stock, and there was no dearth of refreshments. No programme was presented, but the floor was cleared for dancing.

Sixth Competition Shoot.

(Special to The Daily Press.)

Bound Brook, October 17 — The sixth competition shoot for the Peters' Cartridge Company trophy by the clubs of the New Jersey Central League was held at this place Saturday last. The Climax Club, of Plainfield, won the match with a score of 85. The other scores are as follows: New Brunswick, 74; Dunellen, 76, and Bound Brook, 65.

Verdict for Plaintiff.

Justice Smalley has given his verdict in the contract case of David Miodovnik against A. B. Thorn and he allows the plaintiff $107.64, which includes costs of court. Lawyer Angleman, representing Mr. Thorn, has given notice of appeal.

Where is Little Margaret?

Margaret McCarty, young daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James McCarty, of West Sixth street, strayed away early this morning, and she cannot be found. The family as well as the police are constantly searching for her.

S. J. Moore, a former resident of Plainfield, but now of Poughkeepsie, spent Sunday and part of today in Plainfield. He has so many friends here that he was compelled to spend but a few minutes with those he was able to call upon. He and Mrs. Moore and their charming little daughter, Evangeline, left for home this afternoon.

THIRTY-FIRST YEAR FOR THE Y. M. C. A.

Anniversary of the Notable Christian Body Yesterday.

SPECIAL CHURCH SERVICES.

REPORT OF ASSOCIATION WORK READ TO MANY CONGREGATIONS.

Started in a Modest Way in a Private House and Now Owns a Magnificent Building and Has 362 Paid-up Members—Does a Work No Church Can do—A Sketch of Growth of Association.

The thirty-first anniversary of the Plainfield Young Men's Christian Association was observed yesterday in an appropriate manner. In all of the city churches, both morning and evening, services in commemoration of the event were held and speakers from out of town addressed large congregations. The speakers are all prominently identified with the Association work in various parts of the county.

Yesterday afternoon at the Y. M. C. A. building interesting services were held. I. R. Mount gave an illustrated talk to boys, while Frank B. Hoagland and Donald MacColl addressed the men's meeting. The latter is State secretary of the Y. M. C. A. Music was a feature and Charles L. Lewis and a male choir furnished the vocal music.

Last evening a report of the Association work was read in all of the churches by a member of the Board of Directors of the Y. M. C. A. The report is as follows:

Our report tonight must necessarily be brief, and we invite you to visit us, and see for yourselves, far better than words can tell, the work we are doing.

On the 28th of this month, our Association will finish 31 years of work. Among those who were instrumental in the organization of the Association in 1867, and who are still active in the interests of the Association, are Alexander Gilbert, James W. Jackson, Nelson Runyon and H. O. Newman. It surely is a good endorsement of our work that these men should have stood by it so long. Today we have 352 paid up members, of whom 65 are serving on committees. No Association in the state has a better plant than we. Our building, open as a safe resort for young men, fourteen hours every week day and six every Sunday, contains a reading-room, well supplied with papers and magazines, a parlor and reception room, a large and small hall, various class rooms, a bicycle room and gynasium, with bowling alleys and swimming tank. The work is in charge of a general secretary and an assistant, and a thoroughly trained physical director.

In our work we seek to benefit the whole man, body, mind and spirit; we have therefore, three departments—physical, educational and religious. In the physical department, we conduct nine gymnasium classes a week, one for business men, one for those who can attend in the evening and one for the Juniors.

During the year ninety-seven physical examinations have been made by the director. Outside of the class work, men have been taught to swim, various bicycle runs have been made and the gymnasium was rented for a ladies' afternoon class. In our educational department, ninety-seven different students were enrolled and were taught by nine teachers, in stenography, German, Spanish, book-keeping, mechanical drawing and mathematics. Not a few men are known to have increased their salaries because of the training received in these classes.

In our religious work, we have had two principal features, our men's meeting held every Sunday afternoon, with an average attendance for the fifty-one meetings of the past year of 103. Outside of these meetings we have supplied speakers for other meetings on a great many occasions, as many as nineteen being furnished in a single month. Two Bible classes have been maintained, one taught by the general secretary and one by the physical director. A vast amount of personal work has been done by the secretaries and members of the committees, both at the building and other places, as for instance at the hospital. We feel that some of our most effective work has been done by our secretaries in their personal interviews with mothers and fathers and young men.

Various phases of work cannot be classified, and yet are not less important perhaps, than the preceding. We have furnished during the year a course of clean entertainments, free to members, and of small cost to others, and a similar series is arranged

PRESIDENT AT CHICAGO.

He Arrives in that City After a Day of Speech Making.

Chicago, Oct. 17.—The Illinois Central train bearing President McKinley and party arrived in Chicago late Saturday evening. The president left the train at Thirty-ninth street and went at once to the home of Lafayette McWilliams, where Mrs. McKinley awaited him.

One of the most interesting incidents of the entire trip occurred at Terre Haute, after his drive around the city, which gave the president an opportunity to see the Terre Haute street fair now in progress.

He ascended a platform near the Union depot arm in arm with the venerable Richard W. Thompson, ex-secretary of the navy. The sight of the veteran statesman on the arm of the president of the United States was the signal for uproarious and long continued applause from twelve thousand people. Mr. Thompson introduced the president, who made a brief speech.

At Paris, Ill., five thousand people listened to the president. His remarks were very brief but were received with much enthusiasm.

The citizens of Arcola made especial preparations for the reception of the president. rom the rear platform of his car he stepped over a carpeted passageway to a stand decorated with flowers and covered with American flags.

At the conclusion of his speech the president called for three cheers for the army and navy, which were given with a will.

Then the president said: "Three cheers for the old flag!"

The response was tremendous. One old man near the platform waved his hat and shouted: "Dewey made them honor it!"

The president smiled at this remark and nodded his head as if in approval of the sentiment.

Enormous crowds listened to the words of the president, both at Decatur and Springfield. The latter place, the former residence of Abraham Lincoln, furnished the largest assemblage of the day. They listened solemnly and with bared heads while President McKinley spoke feeling words in eulogy of Lincoln.

Another striking incident at Springfield was the presence on the platform of eneral John A. McClernand, who is ninety years old and a hero of two wars.

General McClernand rode in the carriage with Secretary Bliss and leaned on his arm throughout the exercises. General John M. Palmer was also a member of the receiving party at Springfield.

"Corn Carnival" was in full swing at Decatur when the party arrived, and here Senator Shelby M. Cullom and Governor and Mrs. John R. Tanner joined the train.

Speeches were made here by the president, Secretaries Gage, Wilson and Bliss, Senator Cullom and Governor Tanner, all arousing great enthusiasm among the people.

Major Seaman Back from Washington

New York, Oct. 17.—Major Louis Livingston Seaman, chief surgeon of the First volunteer engineer regiment, arrived here from Washington Saturday and called at the Army building.

Major Seaman declined to discuss his experience before the war investigating commission at Washington. Regarding his future plans he said that he had lost forty pounds while serving in Porto Rico, and if he could recruit his strength by a short stay here, he would do so, if no other orders came. He said that he did not intend returning to Washington, but that he might do so.

The Brooklyn Injuries.

Washington, Oct. 17.—A special naval board appointed to investigate the repairs necessary to the Brooklyn, Admiral Schley's flagship, because of damages sustained in the battle which destroyed Cervera's fleet, finds that the principal injury to the Brooklyn was caused by the entrance and explosion on the berth deck of a six-inch shell; shot holes in three smake stacks and two escape pipes; shot hole through hammock netting; injury to the after engine room ventilator by six-inch projectile; three one-pounder shot holes in plating and one six-pounder shot hole forward.

Major Gordon in a Hospital.

Washington, D. C., Oct. 17.—Major Frank Gordon, late of the Third United States volunteers (immunes), son of General Gordon of Georgia, has been placed in a hospital in this city by his wife, suffering from fever, which he contracted during his service with the army in Cuba.

NO FAITH CURE.

ABOUT STUART'S DYSPEPSIA TABLETS.

They Cure Stomach Troubles and Indigestion Anyway, Whether You Have Faith in Them or Not.

Mere faith will not digest your food for you, will not give an appetite, will not increase your flesh and strengthen your nerves and heart, but Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets will do all these things, because they are composed of the elements of digestion, they contain the juices, acids and peptones necessary to the digestion and assimilation of all wholesome food.

Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets will digest food if placed in a jar or bottle in water heated to 98 degrees, and they will do it much more effectively when taken into the stomach after meals, whether you have faith that they will or not.

They invigorate the stomach, make pure blood and strong nerves, in the only way that nature can do it, and that is, plenty of wholesome food well digested. It is not what we eat, but what we digest that does us good.

LOSS OF THE MOHEGAN

116 Lives Said to Have Been Lost in the Disaster.

BODIES WASHED ASHORE

A Dispatch from the Scene of the Catastrophe Says 161 Persons Were Aboard the Mohegan and That Only 45 Were Saved. Only Eleven Passengers Said to Have Been Saved.

London, Oct. 17.—The total number of lives lost by the sinking of the steamer Mohegan of the Atlantic Transport Company will reach 116.

There were 161 souls on board of the vessel when she struck the rocks. In this city it is stated the officers and crew of the Mohegan numbered 96 instead of 115, as was first reported, and of these 33 are known to have been rescued. It is probable that the list of dead will be increased, as some of those who were saved are in a serious condition from exhaustion and the injuries they sustained from their battle with waves and rocks.

From the best evidence obtainable at St. Keverine it appears that the Mohegan foundered five minutes after she struck the rocks. She was going at full speed, struck twice, stopped and rapidly settled in the water. As the captain and executive officers of the steamer went down with her it has been impossible, thus far, to ascertain how she got out of her course, as Falmouth light and the coast were visible.

Dinner was ready and Captain Griffiths was about to proceed to the saloon when a sudden crash made it apparent that the steamer had gone ashore. The captain immediately went on deck and the survivors say they saw him on the bridge doing all that lay in his power as a brave man to lessen the disaster.

A. G. L. Smith, who was among those known to have been saved, says his home is in Oregon. In conversation with the representative of the Associated Press, Mr. Smith said that he saw the captain on the bridge giving orders, which were carried out as far as possible. As the ship sank the captain ran along the side and sprang overboard. The vessel lurched and the passengers all seemed to be thrown into the water at the same moment. Mr. Smith, who is a strong swimmer, managed to get through the mass of people in the water and succeeded in evading several who tried to clutch him as he passed them.

He says he swam for three hours and a half before he reached the shore.

The survivors, without exception, speak in the highest terms of the devotion, heroism and coolness displayed by the officers and crew of the ship, and declare that all were instantly at their posts when it was known that she had struck. The perilous position of the ship was no iced on shore, and a warning rocket was sent up, but it was too late then to avoid the catastrophe which occurred so suddenly that there was not sufficient time to get out all the life saving apparatus of the ship.

The terror of the scene was indescribable; men jumped overboard in an agony of despair and the women passengers huddled together and refused to leave the deck. The officers remained on the bridge to the last and many instances of sacrifice are recorded. Members of the crew are known to have stood by and watched the boats launched and put off when it was apparent that these were the only means by which their own lives could be saved.

A lifeboat, with a load of forty persons on its way to the shore, passed many who were battling for their lives in the water whom it was impossible to save.

The villagers, headed by the vicar and coast guard, stood on the shore and cheered the boat. When the lifeboat entered the little cove the fishermen waded into the sea to help drag the little ones up on the beach and tenderly carried the exhausted survivors to their homes, which had already been prepared for their reception. The vicar attended the injured.

The lifeboat was again launched and put out on its outward journey, picking up three survivors. The trip to the wreck was fruitless, so far as taking anyone from the wreck was concerned, but on its way back to the shore sixteen other survivors were taken from the water. This was just before day break.

Names of Those Saved.

It is now known that John Hyslop, the official measurer of the New York Yacht Club, a passenger, was among the saved. Others saved are F. R. Pemberton and Mrs. Pemberton and their two sons; Mrs. Compton Swift, Miss Noble, of Baltimore; W. J. Bloomingdale, Richard Kelley, A. C. L. Smith, S. Wood and Miss Roudebush. The valet to T. W. King was also among the saved.

The following officers of the steamer have been saved: Victor Lawringe, Ferguson, and Dr. Trevor and Mrs. Piggott, the stewardess.

The body of R. A. Baxter, one of the passengers, has been recovered.

Regent for Germany.

Berlin, Oct. 17.—Emperor William's departure for the Orient has started a discussion as to the advisability of the establishment of a regency.

The Freisinnige Zeitung says: "In such cases, where the emperor and king of Prussia leaves the country for any length of time, as in the present instance, a duly empowered person ought in the meanwhile to seize the reins of government."

The Freisinnige Zeitung proposes that the case be brought before the Reichstag.

Some of the leading papers support the regency proposition, while several of the Conservative papers scout this view. The constitution of the empire does not appear to provide for a regency.

TO CONCEDE FASHODA

The Question Hinges on Nature of Marchand's Report.

ENGLAND CANNOT RECEDE

Marquis of Salisbury Has Received England's Unanimous Support and if War is to Be Averted France Must Evacuate Fashoda.

London, Oct. 7.—The situation arising out of the question between Great Britain and France as to the right of occupying Fashoda is extremely grave. Everything hinges on the nature of the report of Major Marchand, the French commander at Fashoda, which is now on its way to Paris from Khartoum, owing to the courtesy of the British government in permitting one of Marchand's officers to use the British lines of communication.

The evacuation of Fashoda by the French must, however, take place if war between Great Britain and France is to be avoided, as the Marquis of Salisbury has nailed his colors to the mast and cannot recede from the position he has taken up, and in which he has received the unanimous support of the country.

The clear, strong speeches of the Liberal leaders, Lord Rosebery and Herbert Henry Asquith, coming at this critical moment, were very important, in that they demonstrated to the world that the Liberal party is solidly with the government in the stand the latter has taken in the Soudan question.

The Speaker, the organ of the Liberal party, this week refers plainly to the impossibility of relinquishing the British claims and points out that if it comes to war it will not be merely for Fashoda, but for the maintenance of Great Britain's place in the world, plus her undoubted rights. The Speaker adds:

"If we abandoned our claims Englishmen would not only lose the respect of others, but would lose their own self-respect, and nglish statesmanship would be dragged in the mire."

These emphatic declarations of the nglish press and public men have already had a certain influence across the channel and the inspired statements of the French press belittle the importance of Fashoda and shift the ground to an undefined claim upon the province of Bahr-el-Ghazal and a port on the Nile.

The moderate thinking section of the French press is earnestly urging a peaceful arrangement of the affair. These papers candidly admit that France is no match for Great Britain in the event of war.

There has been a great deal of talk here about the possibility of war with France, and various preparations upon the part of the British government are reported to have been made.

For instance, it was announced that a leading small arms firm at Birmingham was asked whether it was prepared to turn out a thousand magazine rifles weekly.

The significance of this will be appreciated when it is pointed out that the British government works are alone capable of turning out four thousand magazine rifles weekly.

SILVER TICKET SHUT OUT.

Owing to a Defect in the Preparation it Loses a Place on the Official Ballot.

Albany, N. Y., Oct. 17.—The state ticket of the Chicago Platform Democracy will not go on the official ballot. The certificate placing this independent ticket in the field was received by the secretary of state on Friday night, and in examining the same he found the jurat of the notary public on the Ulster county petition defective, and he soadvised the committee that brought the same to him and gave them such opportunity as was left to have the defect corrected.

The last hour for filing the certificate under the law expired at midnight Friday night and the Ulster county petition was not returned corrected by that time nor has anything been heard of it, so Secretary of State Palmer has ruled that inasmuch as the Ulster county petition was defective and was not corrected and filed before midnight the whole certificate as defective, and its nominees cannot go on the official ballot.

Secretary of State Palmer has postponed the hearing on the protest against the legality of the Citizens' Union state ticket from Monday afternoon to Tuesday morning at 10 o'clock.

Miss Hoyt Wins.

New York, Oct. 17.—Miss Beatrix Hoyt, of the Shinnecock Hills Golf Club, cleverly defended her title of champion woman golfer in the tournament which was brought to a successful issue on the Ardsley links Saturday.

In the final round of the contest which determined this year's championship, Miss Hoyt met and defeated Miss Maude K. Wetmore of Newport, R. I., by a score of five up and three to play.

This is her third successive victory in such a tournament. She won the first contest at Morristown, N. J., in 1896, and repeated her victory last year at Manchester, Mass. With the championship goes the Cox cup.

Indiana's Narrow Escape.

New York, Oct. 17.—There was considerable excitement Saturday afternoon in the navy yard, when, after a few preliminary cracks and groans, a section of the seawall at which the Indiana was tied up collopsed, and slid into the channel, some of the big stones going under the battleship, just missing striking her.

The big battlship, which was tied up at the wall, was apparently uninjured, but there was lively hustling finding new places for lines, as the break had weakened the posts to which the cables of the ship had been strung.

Must Pay Bankers Tax.

New York, Oct. 17.—Commissioner of Internal Revenue N. B. Scott has decided that, inasmuch as the American Sugar Refining Company makes loans on collateral, it must pay the special war tax of fifty dollars as a "banker."

TANNER SAID TO BE GUILTY.

Virden Coal Company's Officers to Bring Riot Case Before Grand Jury.

Virden, Ill., 1 Oct. 17.—William Patton, attorney of the Chicago-Virden Coal Company, is authority for the statement that no further attempt will be made o land here the Alabama negroes whose coming resulted in the loss of so many lives.

There is under consideration, according to Mr. Patton, an attempt to fix the responsibility for the tragedy upon the governor of Illinois. The lawyer declares that it is the intention of the coal company to press the matter, and it will be for the grand jury of Macoupin county to say whether Governor Tanner shall answer in court.

Inside the stockade Saturday Coroner art resumed the inquest over the bodies of the victims. Three witnesses were examined, all ex-guards of the company.

They admitted that they were present in the fight, but denied having taken part in the battle. One witness swore that he came here to help build the stockade, and afterward was employed as cook. e said that he, together with about twenty-five others, was sworn in by Sheriff Davenport as deputies, and, so far as he knew, he was still serving in that capacity.

Pana, Ill., Oct. 17.—Quiet prevails here, the excitement over the reported coming of the Virden negroes having abated largely.

St. Louis, Oct. 17. —Fifty-seven negroes who came from Alabama to work in the mines at Virden, Ill., are in this city. They arrived here over the Chicago and Alton road from Springfield, Ill.

Mr. Mills of Thiel's detective agency has received a dispatch from the Chicago-Virden Coal Company telling him to keep the negro miners here, the coal company to pay their rexpenses. The telegram said the negroes would be kept in St. Louis until protection for them at Virden could be had, and then they would be taken there and put to work in the mines.

COURT MARTIAL FOR SEAMAN.

Investigation Committee to Visit the South.

Washington, Oct. 17.—The discovery that the transport Obdam was abundantly supplied with provisions and rations before leaving Ponce may lead to the court martial of Major Seaman, in view of the latter's statement before the war investigating commission that nothing but travel rations had been furnished the ship.

Surgeon Appel's statement that Major Seaman had made the statements attributed to him and afterward denied by Seaman, may also have an effect on the course to be taken by the war department in dealing with the latter.

Washington, Oct. 17.—The members of the war department investigating commission left Washington about 4 o'clock yesterday afternoon, going direct to Jacksonville, Fla., where they are scheduled to arrive about noon today. They purpose going to the military camp there, where they will take the testimony of those who can throw light on the conduct of the war, giving especial attention to complaints that appear to have any foundation.

From Jacksonville the commissioners expect to visit in order Tampa, Atlanta, Anniston, Huntsville, Chattanooga, Knoxville, Lexington, Ky., and Middletown, Pa., where Camp Meade is located.

Later they will go to Camp Wikoff on Long Island.

It is thought that the southern tour will consume two or three weeks, and possibly longer, as it is the intention of the commission to make a thorough inquiry at all points.

PARIS BECOMING QUIET.

The Number of Troops on Duty Has Been Decreased.

Paris, Oct. 17.—The number of the military patrols and the detachments of troops on duty at stationary points has been decreased in strength, except in the case of the troops on duty at the railroad depots, and the detachment of troops on duty at the Town Hall, near the Labor Exchange, which has hitherto been composed of a company of infantry and two troops of cavalry, has been entirely withdrawn. In addition, the soldiers are no longer confined to barracks and are promenading the streets as freely as usual.

Outside Paris the same state of affairs prevails. The troops have been withdrawn from the railroad station at Rouen, where all fear of trouble has vanished.

The French cabinet is examining into the case of Colonel Picquart, in regard to whose strict seclusion in the military prison of Cherche Midi a conflict has arisen between the civil and military authorities.

Army Paymasters Accounts.

Washington, Oct. 17.—Paymaster Stanton says that there is no truth in the report that certain paymasters have got into difficulty because of mistakes in payments of salaries to officers promoted in the field.

"There has been no hitch of any serious character," said General Stanton, "and with the exception of one or two cases where a clerical error has occurred in the accounts of a paymaster, everything has gone smoothly ahead. The law specifically provides for an increase in salary for an officer promoted in rank by brevet or by commanding generals in the field. A number of officers were promoted on recommendation of General Shafter, and their pay was advanced at the same time. This is all provided for by law and there has been no trouble at all in such cases."

Disturbances in Tafilet.

Tangier, Morocco, Oct. 17.—Advices have been received from Fez confirming the report of serious disturbances in Tafilet, one of the great sub-divisions of the empire, used as a place of banishment for political offenders.

These advices say that many other frontier tribes favorable to France are all supplied with arms and ammunition, and French agents are suspected of inciting the rebellion, in order to enable them to join the Ain-Sefra and Senegal railway by way of Tafilet.

AMERICA'S FIRM TONE

Unalterably Against Assuming the Cuban Debt.

SPAIN DISLIKES TO YIELD

Peace Delegates Final Answer to the Plea of the Spanish that the United States Should Assume the Cuban Debt, Will Not Guarantee the Return of Funds Paid by Spain.

Paris, Oct. 17.—The American and Spanish peace commissions to-day began the third week of their labor here and any careful summary must disclose the fact that the progress made has been accomplished chiefly by negative action and the attitude of the Americans.

The first article of the protocol provided that "Spain will relinquish all claim of sovereignty over and title to Cuba." Naturally, after the preliminaries providing methods of procedure and such rules therefor as were necessary, the joint sessions were devoted to the Cuban article of the protocol. Naturally, too, the Americans opened their case by the assumption that little or no action was necessary regarding Cuba, on the ground that its disposition was definitely fixed by the terms of the protocol.

Notwithstanding, at the meeting on Tuesday last the Spaniards submitted suggestions and propositions amounting to holding that the United States should take over all or part of the Cuban debt. The Americans, at their own session on Wednesday, took up the Spanish presentment and determined the formulation of the answer of the United States, on which the clerical force was busily engaged until the hour of the Friday session, the commissioners in the meanwhile devising, amplifying and fortifying it.

It may be distinctly said that with such light as it now has the United States commission will consistently and to the end refuse to assume all or any part of the Cuban debt. In the absence of reasoning more cogent than any yet advanced, the United States commission will declare that the Cuban debt represents treasure chiefly spent by Spain in suppressing insurrections and possibly in warring on the United States.

The Spaniards will be assured that the United States has expended enormous sums, not to acquire Cuba, but to free it from disastrous conditions for self-government.

The Spaniards will, if indeed it has not already been done, have pressed upon them the fact that by the signature of the protocol they utterly relinquished all claim of sovereignty over and title to Cuba. If they have not yet heard it, the Spaniards will hear the expression of American surprise that Spain, having so unconditionally and unequivocally surrendered Cuba, should now advance a claim or even a suggestion that the United States assume the debt of a territory which, though surrendered by Spain, was not sought for by the United States as a conquest prize, is not now a possession of the United States, and which has been freed by the United States at a vast expense, for independence now, or when matured for self-government. Thus, possibly progress has been achieved negatively, for with the present light the Americans decline or will refuse the responsibility of a single peseta of the so-called Cuban debt.

Spanish sympathizers and presumable neutrals are even urging that the United States under the protocol are authorized only to hold Manila pending the consummation of a treaty, whereupon they shall withdraw from all territory save such as Spain might then cede directly.

Apropos of this is an editorial in the Correspondencia of Madrid, the official organ, without factional color, which was telegraphed here yesterday, saying that to well advised persons it is incredible that there should be even discussion as to whether after the signature of the peace treaty, the rights of Spain regarding sovereignty over the Philippines should be brought into question, significantly adding that the "Americans are intransigeants, disposed to yield only points of detail and little disposed to accept, as Spain would, arbitration by Germany or Russia."

If the Americans here were willing, which they are not ,to traverse these assumptions, they might simply point out the third protocol article, reading "That the United States will occupy and hold the city, bay and harbor of Manila, pending the conclusion of a treaty of peace, which shall determine the control, disposition and government of the Philippines."

Hunter Killed by Game Warden.

Paterson, N. J., Oct. 17.—James L. Tooker, a game warden of Perth Amboy, while at Haledon, near here, Saturday afternoon, looking for violators of the game law, met Secunda Canova shooting birds which the game warden says were out of season. The game warden attempted to place Canova under arrest and a fight followed.

During the scuffle Canova as shot through the heart and died instantly. The game warden says he shot the man in self defence. He was arrested and is now in jail.

Typhoid at a Garrison.

Denver, Col., Oct. 17.—There is an epidemic of typhoid fever raging at Whipple Barracks, Arizona, and several deaths are reported.

The post is garrisoned by volunteers. Orders have been issued at army headquarters in this city for Major W. W. Gray, surgeon, to proceed at once to the scene from Fort Huachuaca, and do everything in his power to stay the progress of the disease.

Private Kenn Acquitted.

St. Louis, Oct. 17.—Private Charles Kenn, Company E, Second Missouri volunteers, who shot and killed Russell Wedney, the negro whom he found living with his wife on returning home from a furlough, was acquitted Saturday by the coroner's jury after less than a minute's deliberation.

The verdict meets with the approval of a majority of the citizens.

GEN. MILES AT ST. PAUL.

He is Inquiring Into the Indian Trouble.

St. Paul, Minn., Oct. 17.—Major General Nelson A. Miles, commander-in-chief of the army, with his staff, arrived here Saturday from Omaha. In the course of the day he called on Governor Clough and talked over the Indian troubles at Leech lake.

The general went thoroughly into the whole situation.

General Miles also spent considerable time at Fort Snelling.

A Walker, Minn., telegram to the Dispatch says:

"Indian Commissioner Jones and a number of correspondents arranged to go on the steamer Vera to the battle ground off Bear island, and to the hostile camp for council with hostiles, but the lake was too rough.

Mr. Jones wants to make another attempt to persuade Old Bug-Mah-Ge-Shik to surrenger. It is generally believed here that the commissioner will not succeed.

The Indians will hold a council at the agency, and Commissioner Jones will have another general council there on Wednesday, when a number of hostiles are expected to surrender.

General Bacon is anxious to begin his campaign of subjection, and is convinced that it will require force to restore peace.

It is almost the universal belief here that active campaigning will be resumed before all the Indians wanted by Marshal O'Connor are secured.

A Walker, Minn., dispatch to the Pioneer Press says:

"The Indians, including the two delegates from the hostile camp, have had their council with Commissioner Jones, but it is hard to see where any positive progress has been made. In one respect the authorities probably gained an advantage.

The Indians tried to consolidate all the collateral questions in one issue. The commissioner declined to allow it. He told the Indians plainly that if they would get together and agree as to what they really wanted he would endeavor to settle their grievances as satisfactorily as possible for the majority under the law. But the men wanted by the marshal must be surrendered without any regard to the other questions.

KAISER HAD NARROW ESCAPE.

Anarchists Plotted to Kill King Humbert of Italy as Well.

London, Oct. 17.—The Alexandria correspondent of the Daily Mail, telegraphing regarding the Anarchist plot against Emperor William, which was discovered on Friday, says that the plot against the kaiser is hourly proven more important, each arrest disclosing new ramifications. The documents found disclose a plot to kill King Humbert already well matured.

Fifteen persons, all Italians, have been arrested. The original plan was to throw a bomb of guncotton and fulminate of mercury on Emperor William's carriage in a narrow street of Cairo.

When the Egyptian trip was abandoned elaborate arrangements were made by the conspirators to send confederates to Jerusalem to carry out the plot during the dedication of the German Church of Our Redeemer.

The Constantinople correspondent of the Times says that the worn out war craft, patched up for the occasion, have proceeded to the Dardanelles to swell the naval escort of Emperor William, and twenty-four Turkish officers have gone there on board of a yacht.

Emperor William ,on the Hohenzollern, is expected to reach the Dardanelles this afternoon, and to arrive at Pera, where the German legation is situated, on Tuesday morning.

CHINESE ENPEROR ALIVE.

Prince Ching Says So on Behalf of the Tsung li Yamen.

Pekin, Oct. 17.—Prince Ching, on behalf of the Tsung-li-Yamen, has given Sir Claude Macdonald, the British minister, satisfactory assurances as to the health of the emperor.

Prince Ching says that the empress dowager is not opposed to genuine reform, but only to such violent and impracticable reforms as were hastily decreed. Her majesty will proceed on lines more adapted to Chinese conditions.

The Baptist mission at Sing-ngan-fu, in the province of Shen-Si, has appealed for protection.

The Pekin correspondent of the Daily Telegraph says that it is expected that the emperor will be formally deposed on Novmber 23, the birthday of the empress dowager, and that Prince Jun, a boy of 13, will be nominated as his successor.

The Berlin correspondent of the Standard says that the emperor was to have taken refuge at the British embassy in Pekin, whence he would have issued a proclamation declaring the acts of the dowager empress void; but the plan was discovered and frustrated.

First New York in Fine Trim.

Albany, Oct. 7.—Concerning the condition of the First volunteer regiment from this state, which is stationed at Honolulu, Adjutant General Tillinghast has received this telegram from Colonel Barber:

"Condition of First regiment excellent. Men well rationed and clothed. Fifty-seven on sick list report to-day. No critical illness. Have lost two men by disease since entry into service.

Anti Semitic Riots.

London, Oct. 17.—The Vienna correspondent of the Observer reports that anti-Semitic riots have occurred at Kossow, in Austrian Galicia, on Friday night, when a number of peasants attacked and plundered the Jewish quarter, killing ten persons and wounding many others.

The movement is said to be spreading. Troops have been dispatched to the scene.

Lokoja Comes in Leaking.

St. Johns, N. F., Oct. 17.—The British steamer Lokoja, Captain Lander, from London thirteen days, for Montreal, with a general cargo, has arrived here leaking badly and with twelve feet of water in her hold.

The leak was discovered on Wednesday night last and occasioned considerable alarm.

Mr. Murray's Tally Scheme.

There are comparatively few who thoroughly understand the workings of the election machinery and the counting or tallying of the ballots afterward. It is irksome business for the election officers to gather about their tally-sheet after the election is over and count the votes one after another. It does seem rather laborous and the public waits impatiently to learn the result of it all and find out the exact standing of the different candidates. Any scheme destined to shorten the work of the election officers and give the public the returns at an earlier hour, is bound to meet with popular favor. Now when it simplifies matters and eliminates many errors in the count, it becomes decidedly desirable. Such is the place held by Assemblyman Roger F. Murray's new plan for the counting of the votes. The difference is in the tally sheet as has already been explained in The Daily Press.

There are very good reasons why the scheme should be generally adopted through the city while no one has yet found anything in it with which to find fault. Any man of ordinary intelligence can grasp the new system in a very few moments and the amount of time and labor that would then be saved would seem to far more than make up for the little time necessary to put the scheme in operation. Assemblyman Murray is very enthusiastic over the plan and is using his best efforts to have it generally adopted. The effort seems a worthy one and should be crowned with success.

Excellent Work of Firemen.

The fire department deserves unlimited praise for its excellent work in coping with the fire that ravaged the Thompson building yesterday morning. Had it not been for the skillful and willing work of the paid members of the fire department, who were quick to arrive on the scene after the alarm had been sounded, it is reasonable to believe that the flames might have spread to the adjoining buildings and wrought damage that would have been a severe blow to the business interests of this city.

No doubt the splendid work performed by the paid members will have the effect of silencing many of the grumblers and chronic kickers against the action of the City Fathers in the maintenance of the fire department at its present efficiency.

With Middlesex and Somerset already at the point of breaking friendly relations with each other as a result of county bridge and road improvements, we can imagine that the legal machinery between the two bailiwicks is now liable of conflict as a result of the point raised as to whether the Bound Brook murder was committ d in Middlesex or Somerset counties. As a rule the expense of murder trials are not welcomed as pleasant or economical adjuncts of modern government.

William Fisher, who in years past has been a faithful follower of the Republican organization, rises to exclaim that he is devoted in the same old way to his old political friends. William says that he has no desire, or, at least, no hopes, of becoming a solon in the city legislature. So far as working with some of his race in trying to "do" the Republican party under cover, William says he is not with them.

Tomorrow we shall see what we shall see at the Republican county convention in Somerville as to whether Senator Reed or Supreme Court Clerk Thompson will act as the powers that be for the next year in G. O. P. ranks in Somerset.

By his work at the fire yesterday morning, Second Assistant Chief Andrew Jennings proved that his selection by the Common Council as the active first assistant was well-judged as to his fitness.

WHAT THE SHEARS FIND.

Editorial Comment From Other Papers of Interest in Plainfield.

Father Murphy, the new rector of Holy Trinity Roman Catholic church, entered upon his new duties Sunday. He has a very pleasant address, and a real good and hearty Irish smile, that captivates the people.—Westfield Republican.

FIXING UP THE STREETS.

City Thoroughfares in Many Places Being Attended To.

The rain Saturday was considered by Street Commissioner Gavett as a very good thing for the streets. It was such a rain as cleans the streets and gutters thoroughly, while not doing any damage. The debris accumulated here and there in gutters and at culverts, and the street cleaning gang were clearing up the muss Saturday and today.

The culverts at Fifth street and Watchung avenue and at Carleton and Watchung avenues were choked and Fifth and Richmond streets the culvert was broken, so that a lantern was displayed all night Friday.

The repair gang is at work finishing macadamizing Belvidere avenue, a job which was begun last spring but interrupted because of repairs being done to the sewer from Ravine road to the hotel.

The street commissioner has expressed himself as pleased with the job that is being done on Front street where the Street Railway Company is having the tracks torn up and in many places new ties laid. Before this the rails were loose, and when a car passed over them would not be solid. The job is such a good one that Superintendent Adelmann says the rails won't have to be disturbed again for five years, that is, unless asphalt is laid.

Arrested the Wheel.

When Patrolman Morris Higgins passed the corner of Park avenue and Second street this morning about two o'clock, he noticed a wheel leaning against the curb. There was no owner in sight so the officer placed the wheel under arrest and took it to jail to spend the night. It now awaits its owner there. The wheel has no name plate on it and has been enameled red. One of the tires was punctured. The police are inclined to believe that the wheel was stolen but that the thief feared to lead it after puncturing the tire and so deserted it.

An Echo Meeting.

Elaborate preparations are being made for the "Echo" meeting of the Local Union of Christina Endeavor Societies which is to be held in the Seventh Day Baptist church on Thursday evening. The committee in charge consists of Miss Ernestine Smith, chairman, Ira Winthrop Travell, and A. A. Lake, of Dunellen.

Delegates to Synod.

Rev. Charles E. Herring, pastor, and Wm. H. Shotwell, elder, of the First Presbyterian church, will be the delegates at the meeting of the Synod at Asbury Park tomorrow. From the Crescent Avenue church the pastor, Dr. Richards, and Elder S. Cahoone, will be the delegates.

—The Young People's meeting, Trinity Reformed church, begins at 8 o'clock tonight. You are invited to attend.

THE THIRTY-FIRST YEAR.

for this winter; many letters of introduction have been given to young men leaving town, and letters have been written to college Y. M. C. A.'s, notifying them of the coming of Plainfield young men; thirty-eight men have been directed to boarding houses; thirty situations have been secured; a number of socials and receptions have been held; many visits have been paid to the sick and the building has become a distributing station of the public library.

The building has become a center of philanthropic and interdenominational religious work, and has been used during the year by over twenty outside organizations, among which were the following: Primary Teacher's Union, Chinese Sunday-school, Board of Managers of Children's Home, City Union of King's Daughters, Town Improvement Society, Dr. Stearn's Bible class, various committees of Y. P. S. E., Sunday-school superintendents, physicians of the city, city pastors and Plainfield Relief Association.

Our budget for the year is $6,215. Two-thirds of this sum is met by membership dues and rentals. One third of it we ask from our friends in the form of subscriptions. We have always been opposed to raising money for our current expenses by exhibitions and entertainments. We have thought it wiser to do a commendable work and then ask the citizens of our city for the money to sustain it. Whatever you may give tonight is for this purpose, but our hope is that it will be additional to any personal subscriptions which any of you may make during the year.

It will, no doubt, be freely admitted that no one church in our city, could by itself, carry on the work we have reported; that the work needs to be done is equally beyond question. We, therefore, the representatives of the different churches of the city, who compose the board of directors of the association, ask that the members of the various churches combine to make this form of Christian effort a success.

The Plainfield Y. M. C. A. was organized October 28th, 1868, at the home of former Mayor Alexander Gilbert, when the following officers were elected: President, Alex. Gilbert; vice-president, J. W. Jackson; corresponding secretary, H. O. Newman; recording secretary, Nelson Bunyon; treasurer, T. T. Bainbridge. At the first meeting former Councilman Frank E. Marsh presided, and was elected a member of the Board of Directors. At another meeting held November 26th, 1877, in addition to the fourteen charter member, the following were elected: Dr. F. S. Wells, J. H. VanWinkle, C. C. Crawford, W. H. Williams, J. B. Coward, H. M. Estil, G. Thorn, Andrew Vanberbeek, W. A. Woodruff, J. T. Vail, L. M. French. At this meeting an interesting address was made by Rev. Dr. D. J. Yerkes, pastor of the First Baptist church.

The first general secretary called to the association work was W. P. Webster. The followed H. O. Williams F. L. Willis. In February of 1887 J. H. Manning, the present secretary, was called and has remained with the association ever since. He, as well as the other secretaries, has worked very hard for the success of the association in this city.

Following is a list of those who have served as presidents: Alex Gilbert, A. F. Campbell, C. W. McCutchen, J. W. Jackson, C. E. Tyler, H. A. McGee, G. R. Cornwell, H. R. Munger, F. J. Miller, W. D. Murray and Stephen Cahoone.

The association's first quarters were in the present City National Bank building, and from there rooms were secured in The Daily Press building, corner of Park and North avenues. From there headquarters were established in the VanDeventer building on East Front street. Here the association remained until December 31st, 1894, when possession of the present new building was taken. An informal opening was held in February, 1895.

DUNELLEN.

(Special Correspondence of The Press.)

Dunellen, October 17—The Protective Game and Propogating Association, of Union, Somerset and Middlesex counties, held their regular monthly meeting last week, and among other things it was decided to appoint several game wardens who will watch the preserve during the hunting season and arrest all those caught hunting on the leased grounds who are not members of the association.

Mrs. VanDyke and Miss VanEps, of East Front street, were among the many Plainfielders in attendance at the anniversary exercises in the M. E. church yesterday.

Rev. Augustus Todd is quite ill with malarial fever, and Mrs. Todd, his wife, is recovering from six weeks of suffering with an abcess on her foot.

It is reported that two popular young people of the borough are to be married this month and the boys are expecting to have a big time.

A. F. Warden, Jr., caught six fine black bass in the lake last week. One weighed 2½ pounds and the smallest tipped the scales at 1 pound.

An important meeting of the Dunellen Gun Club has been called for this week, when business of importance will be transacted.

Mrs. Edward Teel has returned from Easton where she has been spending a few days with her mother.

Miss Sadie Davis has returned to her home in Newark, after visiting the Misses Jamison for a few days.

Miss Taylor and Miss Fleming, of New Brunswick, have returned home after a visit with borough friends.

W. H. Carmon has purchased another setter dog and thinks he is a "dandy."

Miss Lottie Ryno has been entertaining company from New Brunswick.

Herbert B. Wyckoff has been initiated into Court Dunellen, I. O. F.

'PLAINS AND FANWOOD.

(Special Correspondence to The Daily Press.)

Scotch Plains, Oct. 17—A number of friends of Ernest Marsh tendered him a surprise party at his home Saturday evening in honor of his sixteenth birthday. The affair, which was arranged by his mother, was a complete surprise to Ernest, who had made an engagement to spend the evening with a friend. Just as he was ready to go out of the door his friends arrived in a body. Among some of those present beside the family were Mr. and Mrs A. L. Jimerson, of Westfield; Mr. and Mr. and Mrs. J. S. Braker; Miss Anna Andrews, of Montandon, Pa.; Miss Sarah Hand and others. During the evening Ernest received several very pretty and useful presents.

A harvest home service was held in the Methodist church Sunday evening and, although something new in the village, it proved to be a great success. Rev. C. S. Woodruff, of Dover, father of the pastor, preached the evening sermon, and Mrs. Woodruff, his wife, sang two beautiful solos. The church had been beautifully trimmed with autumn leaves, flowers, American flags, harvest fruits and vegetables, and the effect of mingling them together was very pretty. The annual church missionary offering was taken in the morning and proved to be one of the largest offerings for that cause in the history of the church.

The local football team played a one sided game Saturday afternoon with the C. and C. team from Garwood. Scotch Plains won by a score of 32 to 0, and could have made the score larger but took pity upon their opponents.

Wm. Bowlman, of New York, was the guest Saturday and Sunday of his friend Geo. Allen.

Horace Hand, of Plainfield, visited friends in town Saturday evening.

Miss Kittie Buckley spent Sunday with friends in Netherwood.

WESTFIELD.

(Special Correspondence of The Press.)

Westfield, Oct. 17—The annual meeting of the Children's Country Home will be held in the Baptist church on Elm street this evening. The address of the evening will be delivered by Mrs. Lucy Bainbridge, of the New York City missions.

The Westfield foot ball team went to Dunellen on Saturday afternoon and played a tie game with the team from that place. Joe Vought made a fine run in the second quarter and would have made a touch down, as there were no men in front of him, but he fell into a hole and could not get up as his ankle was wrenched. He played through the game and did fine work for the Westfielders. The ball was within three yards of the Dunellen goal when time was called in the last quarter.

On Saturday morning Judge Vail granted a license to William Holz to conduct a hotel at Garwood. Mr. Holz recently erected a new place and there has been a great deal of opposition to his being granted a license.

The soldiers from Westfield will all be in town tomorrow to attend the reception to be tendered them by the members of Willard Union, W. C. T. U, at their hall on Prospect street.

from the depot They had not yet recovered from their spree but Streeter admitted that there had been some kind of a fracas, but declared that Drobney had struck him first. Spencer, it is claimed, corroborated the statement.

In the morning, the light disclosed that a trail of blood about fifty feet in length led to the place where the body was found. It was known that the county line ran close by but no one could tell in which county the crime was committed. It will be necessary to make survey to ascertain.

The Somerset county authorities held a coroner's inquest over the remains. A jury composed of Henry Bollinger, William Schure, Walter Reiss, C. L. L. Peeples, George Wyckoff, James T. Terry and F. B. Carr, all of Bound Brook, was sworn in. The inquest began in the morning and was continued in the afternoon. During the afternoon Prosecutor Dungan, of Somerset, and Prosecutor Voorhees, of Middlesex, held a conference, and both prepared to take the case in charge if it is found to be in their respective counties. The place where the body and the trail of blood were found were carefully marked and the earth where the blood had soaked in was taken up and saved. The body remains in the establishment of DeMott & Edgerton.

A pocketknife with an open blade was found near the body of the murdered man.

After the session yesterday afternoon, the coroner's jury adjourned until 1 o'clock this afternoon when it met at Somerville. The autopsy was performed by Dr. Fisher, of Bound Brook, and showed two cuts, one on the left side of the throat four inches long and the other, a smaller one, behind the left ear. The first cut pierced the jugular vein and caused the victim to bleed to death. The two prisoners were taken to the Somerville jail yesday morning.

MAIMED BY THE WAR.

UNCLE SAM SUPPLIES ARTIFICIAL LIMBS TO CRIPPLED SOLDIERS.

How Wooden Legs Are Manufactured and What They Are Made Of. Hudson Maxim's Scrap With the Cabman and How It Ended.

One of the United States Government officials told an artificial leg and arm maker the other day that in his judgment the number of amputations resulting from the war with Spain would probably not exceed 100.

Now, the Government always furnishes artificial limbs, gratis, to soldiers and sailors who lose their natural ones in its sevice, and the amount paid out for that purpose while the civil war was in progress and after it was over was an exceedingly large sum. But as the highest price for an artificial limb is $100, and as only a part of those now to be furnished need each cost more than the larger fraction of that amount, the Government outlay for limbs in 1898 will be under, rather than over, $10,000.

In other words, though the war has caused a deplorable deal of maiming, it has been much less disastrous in that direction than the working of the railroads, the blasting that is going on all over the country and a great variety of the ordinary operations of civil life in time of peace. For, according to the best authority on prosthesis, there are on an average 20,000 amputations a year in the United States, and at $75 a limb their victims could not be supplied for less than $1,500,000.

Prosthesis, by the way, is the adding of some artificial part, like a leg or a foot or an arm or a hand, and a man whose business is the making of wooden limbs is a prosthetician, as is duly set out in all the catalogues of artificial limbs the writer has ever seen.

There are about a hundred concerns engaged in prosthetic pursuits in the United States. Most of them are of small capital and output, however, and the establishments doing big business in that line may be counted on the fingers of one hand. Curiously, and yet naturally enough, when you come to think of it, the majority of the small makers are themselves the wearers of wooden legs or rubber hands. It is easy to understand this. The man with a new artificial limb becomes interested in the science which he has just learned is termed prosthesis. He thinks he can improve his own limb and makes a successful attempt to do so. Then he sets out in the business for himself. Of course the big makers claim that such men can't do all-round prosthetic work well; that they are biased by their own preferences and so become narrow-minded on the subject of wooden legs. But for all that, the small concerns continue to flourish, and occasionally one does so well that his shop, employing one man, and that himself, expands into an establishment with a big payroll and yielding handsome profits.

The biggest concern of the sort in this country, however, located in New York, was founded by a man with two legs and two hands. It has made a fortune for him and several of his relatives, and its storerooms occupy every floor of a six-story building to the exclusion of all other tenants, while a small army of employes have their names on the payroll.

It is common for men who are sound in all their limbs to speak or cork legs and cork arms, but the truth is, as an accomplished prosthetician of this town informed the writer, there are no cork arms nor yet cork legs. There probably have been such things or the phrase never would have got into circulation, though it may have originated in the fact that excellent false limbs were formerly made in the Irish city of Cork. At all events, artificial limbs are now invariably made chiefly of the wood of the willow or the bass wood tree, the joints being of steel, the sheaths and facings of leather and rawhide, and the feet and hands of rubber.

Other fibres than the bass and the willow, including rawhide, leather, vulcanized rubber, celluloid, papier mache, tin, copper, steel and pulp have been experimented with as artificial limb material over and over again, but none of these has proved at all desirable for the purpose. For hands and feet, however, sponge rubber is far preferable to anything else because of its combined flexibility and lightness, the almost universal practice now being to fasten them rigidly to the wooden stumps, the rubber being sufficiently flexible for all practical purposes, and not subject to the wear which renders jointed feet and hands clumsy and a burden to their wearers after comparatively short service.

No two false limbs or hands or feet are made on precisely the same model, and this accounts for their comparatively heavy cost, the price list being as follows: Hand, $30; forearm and hand, $50; arm (amputation above elbow) with hand, $75; foot (amputation at or below the ankle), $50; leg (amputation above or below the knee), $100.

Artificial limbs are now so skillfully made that many a man wearing one false leg is able to walk without betraying his deformity, and many others wearing two false legs get around handily without a crutch, with the aid of a cane, while some folks are able to write legibly with the aid of a good rubber right hand. Legs last from three years to thirty, according to the care taken by their wearers, and, if well made, should all last the longer period at least. But, to insure this, a limb should be carefully oiled in the joints once a day at least and the metal parts preserved from rusting by close attention. Workingmen and careless folks lose limbs oftener than men of leisure and those habitually cautious, as a matter of course, and it thus falls out that proper care of false legs and arms is an exception and not the rule, and so the actual average age of an arm or a leg is about seven years, according to the authority quoted above. Artificial limbs for children do not last as long, for the reason that they have to be discarded for bigger ones about once a year, as the wearer grows.

Just why a false leg or arm seems a funny thing to the ordinary human being is not clear, but it is and always has been. Many stories of the funny situations arising from unexpected discoveries regarding the artificiality of limbs are current, and here is a true one.

Hudson Maxim, inventor of guns, smokeless powder, air ships and such like things, had the misfortune, some years ago, to blow off part of one arm in an experiment with explosives. Of course, he hurried from London, where he was then living, to New York, to procure a handsome new arm of willow, with a hand of sponge rubber, which he now uses so cleverly that half the people who meet him never suspect he has suffered the loss of a limb.

Now, Hudson Maxim is, or when younger was, a bit of a scrapper, and he got into an altercation with a cabman soon after beginning to wear his wooden arm, and before he had become sufficiently used to it to strap it tightly to the stump. But, the fact that he had a false member, didn't interfere in the least with his willingness to fight the cabman, and he "put up his dukes" in attitude of defense without the slightest hesitation. Cabby struck first, however, as cabbies are prone to do, hitting the false arm a sounding thump, to its instant dislocation, and it fell rattling to the ground. It would be hard to say which was the most surprised, Maxim or the cabman, but the latter was surely most frightened for, evidently supposing he had done his opponent permanent harm, he ran away as fast as his legs would carry him, and he may be running yet, so far as Mr. Maxim knows.

Here's another story which prosthetics declare has a moral, though it will be left to the reader to draw the same:

Some years ago a naturalized Russian citizen of this town was run over by a cable car and lost both legs. Being without money to buy wooden legs, he had a pair of leather ones made for the stumps, and set about peddling lead pencils and other small wares for a living, hoping to get enough over and above the necessities of life to buy the coveted legs. He had a card fastened to his breast on which the facts were clearly stated, and sympathetic buyers were so numerous that he made from $30 to $50 net every week, so that he succeeded in accumulating the needed sum in a few months, and was presently supplied with two legs of as good a quality as ever prosthetician had made.

Then he started out to get a job, but, alas, no one would hire him at work yielding a weekly wage of more than $6 or $8. As he had a family to support this seemed altogether too small, and so after a brief but unsuccessful trial as a man with two good artificial legs, he took up again the task of earning his living and that of his family with no legs at all. You may see him any day sitting "in his leather stumps" at the edge of the sidewalk in one of the busier cross streets, selling his pencils—and likely you have bought of him. Anyway, there is no reason why you shouldn't, for his goods are of excellent quality, the price is right and he is educating his children with the profits of his little business.

He goes in his stumps, however, in business hours only. Promptly at 6 p. m. every day he disappears from his post to go home, and there he dons his precious wooden legs, which he wears every evening and on Sundays with great satisfaction and much better grace than you would suppose possible, getting around easily with a cane and not often being suspected of having lost his natural "walkers."—New York News.

Not Superstitious.

The woman who declares she isn't a bit superstitious would as soon think of forgetting her orange-blossom as of omitting to wear something borrowed and something blue on her wedding day.

Then the man who never looks where he is going always manages to dodge ladders and walk outside instead of underneath them. It's funny how he does it, but he does, though he'd call you a hard name if you ventured to suggest he was superstitious. What hostess discovering thirteen on the point of sitting down at her hospitable board but would hastily send for little Mary or Tommy to make the fourteenth?

The hardiest actor on the stage wouldn't take an umbrella on to it; and as for the breakage of a mirror, breathes there a miscreant who wouldn't feel a pang if he or she were so unfortunate as to cause so evil a catastrophe? Yet we all declare we aren't superstitious, and that we don't believe for a moment there is anything in such old wives' tales as howling dogs heralding a death, or seeing the moon through glass bringing disaster to mention two of the thousands of ills presaged by such occurrences. The fact of the matter is we are all more or less superstitious, and small wonder, too, considering we are merely human beings.

Make Lots of Friends.

"Sometimes," said the young man who is becoming slightly cynical, "it does seem that a dollar is the best friend a man can have."

"Yes, sir," replied Senator Sorghum. "And I have always contended that it is a politician's duty to make as many friends as possible."—Washington Star.

CHAPTER XI.

"I cannot think what the mysterious business is that you are always discussing with Mr. Saville," Lady Fëo said to her cousin as the journey from Speede to London came to an end, and Sir Antony handed over the dainty little lady to the care of her husband; "but, whatever it may be, Tony, please get it over and done by this evening. You are to dine with me, you understand! I don't care what engagements you may have made—you are to break every one of them!"

Sir Antony laughed and nodded.

"Look out for squalls, Gregory, old chap!" he said, winking mischievously as he turned to hail a cab. "Fëo is in a most rampageous mood! I never expected to reach London alive!"

He was still smiling as the cab threaded its way out of the busy railway station. The Latimar carriage was just in front of him, rolling lightly through the sunshine, and Fëo's bright flower-like face, full of animation, was clearly discernible as she poured the whole story of her day's doings into her husband's sympathetic ears.

"How happy they are!" Tony said to himself, and though he smiled with sincere affection and admiration at his cousin as her carriage was lost to sight, he could not still the pang of envy that shot through his heart.

Would be pleased to serve readers of The Daily Press. A trial order will make you our customers.

He was conscious only of a feeling of eager pleasure, however, when, a quarter of an hour later, he mounted the stone stairs to Saville's chambers in the quaint old Temple.

Richard Saville's housekeeper gave Sir Antony a smile as she opened the door to him.

"Yes, sir—Mr. Saville is in," the woman said. "He told me that he was going to be very busy, and that I was not to disturb him; but of course, sir, he will see you," the woman added quickly.

Sir Antony smiled back at her.

"Oh, of course he will see me!" he said confidently, as he knocked at the inner door.

"It is I—Tony," he said. "May I come in, Dick?"

Richard Saville answered the knock, for the door was locked. He looked very careworn. Antony never remembered seeing him look so pale and worn before.

"Why do you work so hard, Dick?" the young man said involuntarily. "You look quite done up!"

"I have no choice but to work," Saville answered briefly. "My hands are over-full just at present. Did you want me very particularly, Tony?"

The younger man had followed him into the room. He answered quickly, with a faint note of reproach in his voice—

"I have not seen you for three whole days, Dick!"

Dropping into his chair again, Richard Saville took a cigar and pushed the box across the table.

"You want me to do something for you, I suppose?" he said languidly, as he struck a match.

Sir Antony's face flushed; the odd chill sensation of the early morning hours came creeping over him again.

"I know I deserve that reproach, Dick," he said gently; "but on this occasion I do not want to bother you. I only wanted to see you to have a chat with you, and——" He paused.

Richard Saville laughed, a hard, harsh laugh, as he flung the match into the empty fire-grate.

"And to congratulate me?" he queried with an ill-concealed sneer. "If so, I trust your congratulations will not be offered in the same spirit as were those of your cousin, Lady Fëo."

Antony colored again; but his great sympathy and real affection for the man before him instantly pardoned the very evident irritation that was breaking through Saville's customary calmness.

"You should know me too well to sneer at any feeling I may express for you, Dick, old chap," he answered, softly.

Richard Saville made no response; he sat back in his chair and grimly smoked his cigar. He gazed fixedly through the gray tobacco cloud at the handsome young face opposite to him, and the pallor and hardness of his face seemed to increase. At that moment he was keenly conscious that he was no longer his old self. The rôle he had been playing so marvelously during the past five and twenty years had fallen from him at last. He had so fallen into the habit of the years gone by that there had come to him at odd times a curious doubt whether, after all, it was a rôle he had been playing, or whether his calm, wise, affectionate attitude towards the lad put into his care had not been the true expression of his real and true self. This curious doubt had gone from him utterly during the past few days; the venom of his old anger had burst forth, revivified, redoubled—blended, moreover, with a great jealousy—the bitter impotent jealousy of age against youth. The power of self-repression, of patience, of sustained treachery which had characterized his daily, hourly life since Antony's birth up to the present had suddenly deserted him. It was an enormous effort to him to school his tongue to speak with its familiar blandness, his lips to smile indulgently at Antony; his simulation of sympathy and interest seemed a task beyond him—he had lost the trick for the moment. He only remembered now that he hated the young man before him—hated him with all the concentrated bitterness of which his avaricious, wholly-selfish, unscrupulously-ambitious nature was capable; he only remembered the crushing blow he had sustained early in his career through the advent of this heir of the man he had been taught to call father; he only remembered the vow he had sworn when Antony was but a few hours old—to thrust back on William Peile's son the full weight of the broken hopes, the shattered dreams, and the lost joys that had turned his young life so swiftly into a premature and embittered age. He only wanted to remember these things now to tell over again to himself, with the new rush of fierce resentment that filled his heart, the story of that past that had been as cruel, as annihilating to him almost as death itself.

Antony had remained silent for a long time after his last speech. He had expected some sort of an answer to it; but Mr. Saville said nothing. He sat with his arms supported on his chair, moving only now and then, half mechanically, to shake the ash from his cigar. Antony drew his breath quickly as the silence continued. He could not exactly define his feelings, but he was acutely conscious of a return of the strange uneasiness that had seized him in the night before, and of the pain and disappointment also. At last he rose hurriedly from his chair.

"I see—I am rather a nuisance today. I will be off," he said, trying not to let his voice betray his feelings.

As Antony spoke, Saville awoke almost with a start from his deep reverie. He put down his cigar and drew his chair closer to the table.

"Your visit was rather inopportune," he made answer, hurriedly; "but, since you are here, we may as well go through with what business I have to discuss with you. I was about to write to you, so you will at least save me a letter," and with a faint sigh he passed his hand over his brow.

Antony looked at him again, this time with quick sympathy.

"Dear old chap!" he said. "Why need you bother about my business now? Surely it can wait. I am certain you have just as much as you can get through without worrying about my wretched affairs."

Richard Saville gave a faint smile.

"Your 'wretched affairs,' as you call them, are not so easily disposed of as you seem to imagine," he said, drily. "Sit down again! I want you to sign these papers. I am transferring this Canadian stock I spoke to you about the other day, and I want your signature. Wait"—as Antony, half relieved by the faint smile and the old well-known tone of voice, flung himself into his chair again and took up a pen—"wait! How often have I told you to read through everything and anything before putting your name to it?"

Antony flashed a look half merry, half tender at his "big brother."

"And how often have I told you," he made answer, "that, so long as your brilliant brain will condescend to bother itself with my business, I don't intend to try to tax my poor one with things I can't possibly understand?"

"Ah," Richard Saville said, still with a hard intonation in his voice, "it is fortunate for you, Sir Antony, that you were born a millionaire! Such Quixotic indifference and confidence are permissible only to the few."

"Is that all, Dick?" he asked, as he put down the pen.

Richard Saville paused for a moment.

"I have to acknowledge the cheque you sent me the other night," he said. "I despatched it to New York this morning. That is all of your business for the moment. Now"—he hesitated for a moment—"now I want to ask for your co-operation in my affairs."

"You want me to do something for you?" Antony said, a look of absolute incredulity chasing away the sudden shadow that the mention of the cheque had brought.

"Yes," Saville answered quickly, and he got up from his chair as he spoke—"yes, Tony—I want you to do something for me." He went over to the fireplace and stood there. He was in the shadowed part of the room—his face could not be seen very clearly. "I am leaving town for a fortnight or three weeks. I start tonight; and during my absence I want you to use all the influence you possess with your cousin, Lady Féodora, to urge her to plead with Miss Druro in my behalf. I am desirous of making over to Miss Druro the greater portion of the money her grandmother bequeathed to me. She"—he spoke somewhat hurriedly here—"she has unfortunately not met my advances with the willingness I hoped for. Lady Féodora is a close friend of hers, and you are very dear to your cousin—hence, you see, I come to you to help me in a difficulty which is as painful as it was unexpected. May I hope I shall not ask your help in vain?"

Antony rose; his face had flushed, and its entire expression had changed at the mere mention of Elizabeth's name. The flush, however, had quickly disappeared; he looked pale now, and his lips were compressed. He paused for a moment before he made answer, and to Richard Saville the pause was more eloquent than words. The elder man broke the silence harshly.

"Pray do not make any promises if it is against your inclination!"

Antony looked across at him quickly—he had just taken up his hat and gloves preparatory to departing.

"It is not a question of inclination, Dick," he said, in his frank way. "The affair is just a little difficult; and—and"—he colored again—"and somehow the whole matter is so delicate that one cannot but feel how painful it must be to Miss Druro! However," he went on hurriedly, eager to put an end to further discussion about Elizabeth, eager, for the first time in his life to be out of Richard Saville's presence, "you know well there is nothing I would not do to serve you if it lay in my power, and so I will speak to Fëo!" He came forward and held out his hand. "I must be off now. I am awfully sorry I disturbed you! You will let me know when you get back again, Dick?"

It was impossible to dismiss the coldness and the sneers as being anything but intentional; and, as he walked slowly through the Temple and out into the busy roar of Fleet Street beyond, Antony knew that he had bidden a lasting farewell to the friendship he had treasured so blindly all his life, and that henceforth he must stand and face his future utterly alone.

PURSUED BY A POEM.

My weekly supply of doggerel had not been forthcoming. Engagements of a social nature, together with a vacation, had so infringed upon the Muse that the editor, or rather editress, was forced to borrow a poem from an exchange and insert it above my name.

There was a good, strong demand among our readers for poetry of the

"Hurrah for Harrison and Tyler, Beat the Dutch or bust your biler" kind, and the printer's contract called for an allowance of "fat matter."

So a large chunk of rhythmic melancholia with the following refrain appeared:

"Oh, what a sad, sad thing is life,
But the saddest of all is loving."

Now, of course, I ought never to have forsaken my post for so long a time; fact is, I had been on a regular—well, no matter. I had never done anything so serious as "Oh, what a sad, sad thing is life——" never in my whole life. I trembled as I read it.

A man came first to offer his sympathy—fifteen other club members stood by, weeping.

"Sorry, old boy, but it's a terrible affliction, I know; don't blame you for rushing madly into verse when you've been thrown overboard. I'd do it myself. But come, come——"

I was trying to escape, but he held me by the sleeve.

"Take a brandy and soda; goes right to the spot, and——"

I told him no medicine would answer; I'd got beyond it. Everybody, including the doctor and the girl, had given me up. Suddenly remembering an engagement I disappeared, accompanied by a hearty laugh.

I walked rapidly down the avenue with a nervous step, carefully avoiding friends; but it was no use; I heard in deep, resounding tones behind me

"Oh, what a sad, sad thing is life!"

I turned, and a friend, or rather enemy, slapped me on the back.

"It's just too bad, I declare! Won't you take a friendly glass of absinthe?"

"No; never indulge."

"You don't eh? Well, you do worse—a darn sight worse!" And as I vanished round the corner I heard him breathing out contemptuously, "Saddest of all is loving.' Well, I be switched!"

Walking was dangerous. I boarded a car and sat down beside an illiterate colored lady. There was no one else in the car, but still I couldn't risk an acquaintance for a seat-mate, even if "auntie" couldn't understand it. Useless again.

A sweet little, nervous little woman friend of mine began to coo softly in my ear from the seat behind:

"Mr. ——, I'm really very, very sorry for you."

I turned and saw a sympathetic face I knew. She went on with tears in her voice.

"You know, dear, you aren't utterly ruined. Of course you can't be happy right off, but in time things won't look so dark, and possibly—I oughtn't to say it—but you might, after a long time, of course, fall in love——"

I got off the car hurriedly.

Well, to cut things short, I was wept on by everybody I knew or didn't know until then. I went into retirement, but they pursued me there. Letters came, oh, such tearful letters—letters with mottos in the corner. Advertising firms, too, forwarded sample bottles of nepenthe and love potions and other harmless poisons.

I couldn't hide from my crime anywhere, so I came home again.

I tried a blood and thunder drama, to see if it wouldn't help me forget, but through a gory, ghostly duel scene, in which the entire dramatis personæ were butchered, a gentle voice at my side was whispering in my ear:

"Too bad! You know if I thought you could ever care just a little for any one else, dear, why, I wouldn't mind making the sacrifice myself—no I wouldn't."

"Say it again!" I said hysterically, while the bass drum tried vainly to drown out my impassioned voice "And you would take her place, little martyr?"

"I would," she said.

Suddenly I saw a way of escape from my trouble.

"Of course," I said. "I'll swear off on verse when we're married, never think of getting on a poetic tear then——"

I hated to ask it but she insisted.

"Would you be willing to take the authorship of this sad, sad thing off my shoulders?"

"Yes, dear, I wouldn't mind it at all," she said tenderly, and I felt ten years younger.

Parting Shot of Pat.

The general had just been retired. He had been a brave soldier, and his advancement was due to merit. But his excellent wife had the reputation of commanding the home field. Her word was law.

A quick witted son of the old sod had been employed about the place as general utility man. He had the usual weakness, which caused him to be forgetful, and one day he received his discharge from the wife for over indulgence. There was an agreeable party on the veranda as Pat passed with his bundle on his shoulder. He halted immediately in front of the general and saluted him, and then he said in the hearing of the general's company:

GOLF.

The regular monthly handicap will be played on the Hillside Tennis and Golf Club links next Saturday afternoon.

Last Saturday afternoon the team from the Hillside Tennis and Golf Club went to Brooklyn and played a match with the Dyker Meadow Golf Club team. It was a Waterloo for the Hillsides and not a point was scored by them. On the other hand the Dyker Meadow team scored 24 points. Below is the score:

HILLSIDE.		DYKER MEADOW.
Wharton	0	Edwards	2
Glenney	0	McKeever	3
Fisk	0	W. H. Crittenden	3
Stockton	0	W. B. Crittenden	1
Sheparo	0	Fowler	4
Dumont	0	Manton	2
Wade	0	Dike	3
Saugstad	0	Tilden	6
Total	0	Total	24

On the links of the Hillside Tennis and Golf Club last Saturday afternoon there was play for the Schoonmaker cup. There was a large attendance on the links and some excellent scores were made. The cup was won by Miss May Evans with a net score of 45. The detailed score follows:

	Gross.	Handicap.	Net.
Miss Evans	66	21	45
Mrs. Freeman	66	18	48
Mrs. Wharton	69	20	49
Miss Corlies	61	10	51
Miss May Holly	89	18	51
Mrs. Rogers	01	10	51
Miss Schoonmaker	69	18	51
Miss M. VanBoskerck	58	3	55
Miss May Tracy	69	12	57
Miss B. VanBoskerck	75	18	57
Miss Edith Tracy	67	8	59
Miss Stewart	78	18	60
Miss Margaret Holly	82	21	61

The committee in charge of the handicaps has experienced some difficulty in their work and some criticisms have been made. The committee is obliged to handicap on a basis of the best average score. Miss Evans, the winner of the Schoonmaker cup, held an average of 82 for the three games, and Saturday she made a gross score of 66. This trouble has appeared with other players as well, and the committee is striving to give the best satisfaction. On two more Saturdays there will be play for the Mrs. Fisk cup. One week from next Saturday the winner of the cup will be announced.

Took an Unwelcome Bath.

While Thomas DeMeza and David Demarest, of this city, were sailing in the former's canoe in the pond at South Plainfield, last Saturday afternoon, the wind capsized the little craft and threw both boys into the water. They were obliged to swim to shore, which they did with great difficulty. They then hastened home and changed their clothing. The canoe was recovered by an employe of Mr. Smith, of South Plainfield. Neither of the boys appear to be any the worse for their unpleasant experience.

firemen. But for the fire lines, the work of the firemen would have been sadly impeded. There must have been several thousand people gathered in the neighborhood b fore it was all over. The crowds increased as daylight came on and almost all the police force was utilized in keeping the crowd in check. Then, too, there was a big delegation of the exempt firemen who turned out and lent a hand

As soon as the members of the firm of Woolston & Buckle arrived, they sent orders that all firemen should be given coffee at their expense at McVey's Hotel. Mr. and Mrs. McVey kept open house for those three hours after the alarm sounded and furnished hot coffee to hundreds, firemen and other workers, and refused to take a cent for it. They appreciated that but for the wonderful efforts of the firemen, they would have been burned out of house and home. Judge V. W. Nash circulated among the firemen with a pail of coffee and a dipper. At fire headquarters and the Alert house, coffee and sandwiches were served. Karl Kaerth also had hot coffee for the firemen as did a number of the other neighbors.

The fire in the North avenue end of the building was first brought under control. Then the rear succumbed to the efforts of the firemen. After two hours of hard work there remained only a little fire here and there. An hour after that the recall was sounded. During the morning the ruins began to smoulder and Chief Doane kept a stream on the debris for a half hour.

The loss occasioned by the fire it is impossible to estimate with any degree of certainty as yet. It will amount in the neighborhood of $60,000 as near as calculation is possible at present. The building itself is owned by A. D. Thompson. While it cost the Day Brothers $33,000, Mr. Thompson values it at between $20,000 and $30,000. As near as can be ascertained it was insured to the amount of $15,000.

Mr. Colgate, manager of the Bard Company, did not learn of his loss until nearly 7 o'clock when young Harry Thompson aroused him and told him that his store had burned down. Mr. Colgate resides on Kensington avenue. He hurriedly dressed and went downtown at once. He was half-stunned by the shock for some little time. The Bard Company had a large stock in hand. It consisted of sporting goods of various kinds, including some ammunition for shotguns. These shells sounded like a small battle when they exploded during the first part of the fire. There was also a large line of phonographic and photographic goods. There were 10 000 records, valued at 50 cents each. There were also several new phonographs of particular value. Everything was destroyed. An inventory had been completed last week and laid on Mr. Colgate's desk only to go up in smoke. The loss on the stock will reach $17,000, while there is only $13,000 to cover it.

Carl Kaerth places the damage to his barn at $100. It was fully insured. Kline lost all, and had no insurance. He had just completed the purchase of his household effects on the installment plan. He places his loss at $500

Mr. Corle could not tell a Press reporter what he had lost. Everything was so scattered that it will take several days to find out just what is missing. He was not insured, however, and his loss will undoubtedly reach several hundred.

The damage to the Woolston & Buckle building will amount to $1,000 or more. It was fully insured.

The New York and New Jersey Telephone Company was one of the heaviest losers. Eight of their cables passed right in front of the building. They were all broken, together with hundreds of single wires. There were 250 subscribers whose service was interrupted, while all communication to the west was suspended.

As soon as Manager C. W. Runyon reached the scene of action, he telephoned to Newark for a repair gang and at 6:30 o'clock, yesterday morning, trucks laden with the necessary material and a gang of twenty-two men were en route for Plainfield. Four of the cables are now to go underground, together with 120 independent wires, making 320 wires in all in the conduits. The work was begun yesterday morning and continued all night. The damage is now pretty well repaired and Manager Runyon expects that all will be in working order tonight or tomorrow morning. It will cost that company $1,500.

Some of the other adjacent buildings were slightly scorched but the damage is slight. There was also some damage done by the torrents of water that were poured into them.

As soon as the fire department arrived, Chief Doane telephoned to the pumping station of the Plainfield Water Supply Company telling Superintendent Andrews that there was a big fire to deal with. There was 133 feet of water in the stand pipe. The small pump was in use then and was started at full speed. The water was raised a foot when the twelve streams were connected and the water was lowered twenty feet before the fire was extinguished.

Rheaume's lumber yard had a narrow escape from joining the conflagration. F. R Stevens, of Park avenue, and Walter L. Long, of Park avenue, discovered that several sparks had lodged in the piles of lumber. Securing a fire-extinguisher from one of the apparatus, they put out the little blazes and patrolled the lumber yard extinguishing several more until the rain of sparks ended and the danger was over

It has been ascertained this morning that there were three bicycles stored in the Bard Company's establishment for customers. They belonged to John Valiant and A. L. C. Marsh. The owner of the other is not known as yet.

AN OLD GLORY FACTORY.

Flags for Our Ships and all Nations Made in the New York Navy Yard.

On the floor of the great flag room in the New York navy yard are drawn patterns and designs from which the flags for the navy are made.

The lines of these designs are painted on the floor or laid out by means of brass-headed nails, and it is no easy matter to design a flag accurately even with the help of these lines.

The largest American flag made by the government is called No. 1. It measures 34.86 feet in length and 13.13 in breadth, and is rarely used. Probably the Detroit and Minneapolis are the only ones of Uncle Sam's ships that regularly use this size.

The size known as No. 2, which is considerably smaller, is the popular size, and is the one used by most of the war-ships. In addition to this one flag, all the different sizes below it are carried by each of the cruisers and war-ships. The bunting which Uncle Sam uses is tested severely before being used. From each lot of bunting a small sample of about a foot square is taken, and this, after being steeped in fresh water for twenty-four hours, is then scrubbed with strong soap and rinsed and dried. Then it is put under sunlight for from eighteen to twenty hours, and if it shows no fading it is accepted. This one navy yard uses 50,000 yards of bunting annually, but for the present year probably one-half more will be added to the average figure.

Not only are American flags made here, but flags of all nations as well, for Uncle Sam's cruisers must have other national flags bsides our own.

The most difficult flag to make is that of San Salvador. This flag requires all the colors used in flag-making, namely: Red, white, blue, orange yellow, green, brown black and canary yellow. Costa Rica has another difficult flag using all but the brown —New York Press.

A CHURCH ANNIVERSARY.

METHODISTS HAVE WORSHIPPED IN PRESENT EDIFICE 25 YEARS.

Special Services in Commemoration of the Event Were Commenced Yesterday—Many Visiting Pastors Present.

(Special to The Daily Press.)

Dunellen, October 17—The Methodist Episcopal church began yesterday a celebration of its twenty-fifth anniversary, an observance which will be continued more than half of this week. The attendandance at the meetings was large and great interest is being shown in the church not only by its own members, but by outsiders as well.

The first service was a love feast at 9:30 o'clock. The leader was Rev. A. M. Palmer, of Newark. The morning sermon was preached by Rev. C. S. Woodruff, of Dover, at 10:30 o'clock.

The young people's rally at 2:30 o'clock took the place of the regular Sunday-school exercises. At this service Rev. G. H. Whitney, D. D., of Plainfield, and an ex-president of Hackettstown Seminary, made an excellent address. Dr. Whitney is just recovering from a severe illness, but despite that there was vigor and strength in what he said. The other speakers were Rev. A. L. Wilson, of Bound Brook, and Mrs. Dr. C. S. Woodruff, of Dover.

Rev. W. C. Snodgrass, D. D., preached the evening sermon. Dr. Snodgrass made a few introductory remarks in which he congratulated the church and organization on the life and growth of twenty-five years. The Doctor ventured the remark that in another quarter of a century this district will be thickly settled, and hoped that the church would be able to meet the added responsibilities. The text was taken from the twentieth chapter of John, twenty-first verse: "As my Father has sent me, even so I send you."

Upon the pulpit platform with Dr. Snodgrass were seated Rev. Frank Fletcher, of New Market, and the pastor, Rev. Dr. E. S. Jamison.

The anniversary exercises do not celebrate the twenty-fifth anniversary of the organization of the Methodist society, but of the building of the present edifice. About eight years before the church was erected Dr. G. H. Whitney, who was then pastor of the First Methodist church in Plainfield, suggested to Rev. C. E. Little, D. D., now of Jersey City, that he organize a society in Dunellen and New Market. The suggestion was followed out and about 1868 or 1869 a little band of Methodists gathered together and organized. Later they built the church in New Market now occupied by the Episcopalians Dr. Whitney addressed the young people yesterday, and tomorrow evening Rev. Dr. Little is expected to be present at the reunion with former pastors and friends. Rev. C. C. Woodruff, of Scotch Plains, son of an old pastor, will speak tonight, and Rev. George Angleman, of Junction, grandson of an old worker, will speak tomorrow night.

At tonight's service and also tomorrow night several of the old pastors will be present, and no doubt will have many interesting things to tell about their experiences during their pastorates.

The choir is assisting at all the services, and has been largely augmented. Last evening the pulpit was prettily decorated with palms, potted plants and cut flowers. Over the pulpit was displayed the American flag, and against the wall were placed two dates, 1873, when the church was built, and 1898.

The State Democratic platform was confirmed, but no mention was made of the silver question.

Bowling on the Green.

(Special to The Daily Press.)

Dunellen, Oct. 17—The second afternoon's bowling for the Booth prize took place Saturday afternoon on the Schepflin green, but the contest was not finished. It will be continued October 29th and probably finished that day. That will wind up the bowling for the season. Next Saturday the bowling green club of Communipaw will come here and play a friendly match game.

Hopes to Release Champion.

Firemen Thanked.

Mr. and Mrs. E. B. Maynard wish to thank their friends who stood by them in the hour of need, and the firemen who so bravely assisted in their rescue at the fire Sunday morning.

SMALL NATIONS ECLIPSED.

But In Their Eclipse Lies Their Security Against Absorption.

The aspiration with which the Queen Regent of Holland closes the proclamation in which she announces the accesion of her daughter to royal powers, that Holland "may become great in everything in which a small nation can be great," is evidence that she realizes that this is an age in which little countries will do very well if they do not become less. This is an age of consolidation of power by the expansion of territory. Small nations, those with a population of a few millions, that yet retain their independence, owe retention more to good fortune than to their ability in arms. The chief element of this good fortune is the rivalry among the larger nations that would absorb them, and the determination of each of the great powers that the others shall make no acquisition that shall upset the balance of power. For this reason such small countries as Switzerland, Belgium, Holland, Portugal and Greece are allowed to continue on the map. Germany would like to absorb Holland but that would not be tolerated by England.

France has long cast hungry eyes on Belgium, but Germany vetoes the fulfilment of French desires and England would not be indifferent. We all recall how Bismarck used to dangle before the eyes of Napoleon III. the suggestion that some day or other as the reward for his neutrality during Prussia's progress in aggrandizement a slice of Belgium might be given to France. Switzerland is surrounded by covetous neighbors. Italy would like the Swiss cantons; France would be pleased to rectify her frontier at the Swiss expense. Germany has a similar wish, but Austria would not consent to a partition of Switzerland that did not give her predominance, and against this all the other would-be partitioners would be up in arms. Portugal is protected by British friendship, which takes care to make a good thing for itself out of the old-time relationship.

These small nations all live quite comfortably in their isolation from great interests, but the day is past when they can expand their territories or repeat the great deeds of their prime. Switzerland lives on the summer visitors; and what Portugal lives on is mainly memory, a drowsy little power in a corner by herself. Holland still has a great colonial empire, with a native population of more than 30,000,000, and does a snug business, accumulates money and is in every way a most respectable little country, only asking to be let alone. Neither by land or sea is Holland a formidable power. Her army is very small, as must be the case with a country whose population is about 5,000,000, mostly burghers of the most unmilitary taste. The Dutch navy is likewise small, and the carrying trade of Holland is but the shadow of what it once was.

The Hollanders are a stout hearted race, but in these days the battle is with the strong, who have a good organization. That Holland may long continue to dream beside her canals in peace is the wish of her people, who, however, are rather disquieted at seeing the scepter pass into the hands of a young girl. They realize that ambitious neighboring nations may aspire to control Holland by dynastic alliance, and are naturally anxious that the Queen's choice of a husband shall not fall upon a prince whose kinsmen may or can make him the agent of a scheme to subvert the independence of the kingdom. Holland is a constitutional kingdom, where the people are the source of power, but even in such a country the Queen's husband may exert an influence which the laws are powerless to defeat.—Boston Transcript.

DROBENY'S FRIENDS HELD FOR MURDER.

Coroner's Jury Lays Blame on One or the Other.

SPENCER TELLS HIS STORY.

he Coroner's Jury Completed Its Work Yesterday Afternoon, Bringing in a Verdict—Both Men in Jail—Spencer Says Streeter Struck the Fatal Blow—Authorities Can't Agree.

(Special to The Daily Press.)

Somerville, Oct. 18—Wm. Drobeny, the young man from Somerville who was found dead near the Lehigh Valley station at Bound Brook with his throat cut, was foully murdered. Such was the decision of the coroner's jury that investigated the matter. The coroner's jury also brought in a verdict that Drobeny met his death at the hands of either Joseph Spencer, Jr., or Warren Streeter, who were his companions that night. The jury decided that the crime was committed in Middlesex county, but that the victim staggered across the county line and died in Somerset. The session of the inquest was continued in the courthouse yesterday afternoon, when a verdict was reached.

The Somerset authorities will make every effort to have the trial take place in Middlesex county. The matter will doubtless make surveying and reference to old laws and maps necessary. The murder was committed between two bridges about one hundred yards east of the old stone-arch bridge, which has been in existence more than one hundred years. Some years ago the course of the river was changed so that it runs under an iron bridge built by Middlesex county. The river is the boundary line, and the question is whether this line is to be determined on the course of the river at the time the law was passed or its present course. Upon the decision of this point hinges the place of the trial of the case.

Spencer's version of the affair as made to the authorities shortly after his arrest is that in company with Streeter and Drobeny, he was in Mulvey's roadhouse shortly after midnight throwing dice for drinks. There was a number of colored women in the place, he says, with whom Streeter conversed. Drobeny made an offensive remark to Streeter and said "Stick to your own color." An altercation followed between Drobeny and Streeter, who were finally quieted by a woman of Mulvey's family. Spencer says that in company with Streeter and Drobeny he left Mulvey's place after midnight and walked up the road toward the New Jersey Central Railroad station. On the way Drobeny and Streeter renewed their quarrel and came to blows.

"Drobeny struck Streeter first," said Spencer. "His hat went off into the bushes. Streeter returned the blow. In the dim light it seemed like a sweeping sidelong blow on the side of the face. Drobeny staggered off down the road. I waited two minutes for Streeter to find his hat, and we both started after Drobeny. We found him lying in the middle of the road. I attempted to lift him up and saw blood on his face. I thought Streeter had struck him in the nose and told him that he struck too hard. Streeter replied, 'Well, I can't stand everything from him,' and walked off up the road. I was unable to get Drobeny on his feet. Four men came along, and I asked them to help me. They thought he was drunk and refused. Later on two men passed, and I appealed to them, but they would not aid me. Drobeny said, 'Joe, go on and let me be.' I thought Drobeny was very drunk. I was drunk myself and so gave Drobeny up and joined Streeter further up the road. We then went to the depot, where I fell asleep. Streeter was only slightly intoxicated, but he did not tell me he had cut Drobeny with a knife. There had been bad blood between Streeter and Drobeny for a long time."

Taxes Paid Before Bills Are Sent.

Collector George F. Brown, of the borough, has received to date about $1,500 of 1898 taxes, and the bills for this year have not yet been issued. This is considered remarkably good. Mr. Brown will send out twenty-two tax bills in a few days.

METZ TO PLEAD GUILTY.

HE WILL THROW HIMSELF ON THE MERCY OF THE COURT.

He Has Confessed all Concerning His Thievery in This Section and Also That He Stopped at McVey's Hotel

Paul Metz, of New York, who is now confined in the Union county jail on charges of thieving, and who has been indicted, will probably be called before the Court in a few days. His plea will be guilty. Metz admitted a few days ago that it was he and his wife who stopped at McVey's Hotel last January, as stated exclusively in The Daily Press. He admitted all concerning his actions in this vicinity and there is no other plea that he can make. Yesterday afternoon County Detective Keron, of Elizabeth, secured the memorandums, etc., which Metz left at McVey's Hotel, and it is barely possible that some of the addresses will lead to the recovery of several articles that evidently have been pawned.

The father of Metz has been seen by the county officials and it is a fact that he cannot furnish a sufficient amount of money to redeem the articles which his son stole from the home of Wm. Stanbery, at Scotch Plains, and from the home of N. Pendleton Rogers, of East Front street.

From what can be learned it is evident that Mr. Metz's parents have been wholly unaware of what their son has been doing in various parts of the country. They are heartbroken over his acts and cannot account for them. Metz will no doubt throw himself on the mercy of the Court and hope for a light sentence. What will be done with him in other places where he is wanted is hard to tell at present.

MRS. JULIA WARD HOWE'S LECTURE.

Plainfield Promised a Rare Treat in Her Lecture.

Plainfield is promised a rare treat in the lecture which Mrs. Julia Ward Howe is to give October 24th at the house of her daughter, Mrs. Florence Howe Hall. The subject will be "Personal Reminiscences of Lowell, Whittier and Holmes." Mrs. Howe is one of the last survivors of the "Golden Age of American Literature," and her recollections of the famous men and women, who made Boston so well-known as a literary centre, are full of interest and piquancy.

Although born and brought up in the city of New York, Mrs. Howe has lived in Boston for fifty years, ever since her marriage to the late Dr. Samuel Gridley Howe, the well-known philanthropist. A devoted student of books from her earliest years, the thoughtful atmosphere of her adopted city was very congenial to her tastes, and she soon became identified with it, although she has travelled extensively both in this country and in Europe. The home of the Howe's was a gathering place for authors, statesmen, reformers and the brightest element among society people.

Mrs. Howe is now preparing her reminiscences for publication in the Atlantic Monthly, and the lecture to be given here, her hearers will have a delightful foretaste of these.

A poet herself, and the author of one of our most stirring national lyrics, her recollections of the three poets of whom she will speak—Lowell, Whittier and Holmes—cannot fail to be full of insight and appreciation, while the wit for which she is well-known, puts her thoroughly in sympathy with the trenchant humor of the author of the Biglow papers, and the genial wit of the autocrat of the Breakfast Table.

MRS. OHL ALLEGED ASSAULT.

Adam Blair Wouldn't Let Her go Into a Stall to See a Horse.

Mrs. Percy Ohl, of Central avenue, made a complaint before Justice Nash yesterday against Adam Blair, the liveryman, charging him with assault and battery. Mrs. Ohl claims that he pushed her out of a stall with great violence, struck her head against the wall and hurt and bruised her. Blair later gave himself up, and the hearing was set down for tomorrow afternoon.

Blair, when seen this morning, said the trouble arose over a horse owned by Mr. Hope of the Revere House. Mr. Hope purchased the horse through Mrs. Ohl, and later, because of some little private affair between him and the woman, gave Blair orders not to permit Mrs. Ohl in the stall if she came to look at the horse. Blair says that when she came yesterday and insisted upon going in where the horse was, he simply prevented her and ejected her from the place as gently as possible.

—A quartette has been organized at the Park Avenue Baptist church to lead the singing at the Sunday-school service hereafter. The quartette will appear next Sunday for the first.

SAYS HER NAME WAS DAMAGED $10,000.

Captain Phillips Sued by a Former Servant Girl.

HE IS RETIRED SEA CAPTAIN.

CAUSED HER ARREST AND INDICTMENT BY GRAND JURY.

While Captain Phillips' Family was Away From Home Costly Furnishings Were Stolen From the House, and Miss O'Brien was Charged With the Crime—Couldn't Prove it—Sensational Evidence.

(Special to The Daily Press.)

Elizabeth, October 18—The suit for $10,000 damages instituted by Miss Sarah O'Brien against Captain Geo. M. Phillips, of Plainfield, for slander and false imprisonment, is now pending in the Circuit Court. The case, owing to the prominence and wealth of the defendant, is attracting a great deal of interest.

Captain Phillips is a retired sailor and for many years he had charge of an ocean liner. He is quite wealthy and about sixty-seven years old. He lives in a fashionable residence on West Front street, Plainfield, with his wife, who is an invalid, and his niece, who is thirty-eight years of age. Miss O'Brien was a servant in the house for some time.

The family went to Mauch Chunk one day and left her in charge of the house. When they came back some costly rugs and camel hair shawls were missing, and Captain Phillips accused Miss O'Brien of taking them. She was arrested, taken before a justice and held to await the Grand Jury's action. The Grand Jury found an indictment against Miss O'Brien, but after several months had elapsed the indictment was quashed for lack of evidence.

Then Miss O'Brien, through her counsel, Craig A. Marsh, brought the present suit. Miss O'Brien, in her testimony, said the family always treated her well until one day she happened to enter the dressing room and found Captain Phillip's niece sitting on his lap pulling his whiskers. Then there was quite a coolness sprang up toward her on the part of Captain Phillips and niece. Frank Bergen and N. W. Runyon, of Plainfield, are counsel for the defendant.

The trial began on Friday morning and the plaintiff's testimony was all in at the hour of adjournment.

This morning the defense occupied the court. Witnesses were sworn who testified that Miss O'Brein left the house on the day the rugs disappeared, with a large basket, covered in order to conceal its contents.

Miss Warrington, the niece, testified that she was Captain Phillip's adopted daughter, and it was not an unusual thing for her to sit on his lap, or walk in the garden with his hand upon her shoulder

The jury today brought in a verdict for the plaintiff. H. W. Runyon was associated with Mr. Marsh in the prosecution. The verdict was for $250.

A FORMER PLAINFIELDER INJURED.

Frank Ianson Meets With a Serious Accident in a Railroad Collision.

One of the worst railroad accidents in the west was that which happened recently at Indianola, Neb., in which three railroad employes were killed and several injured.

Among the latter was Frank Ianson, well known to many of our citizens. He lived for years on East Third street, where his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Charles K. Ianson, now reside. Mr. Ianson is at present a resident of Hastings, Neb., and he is employed as an engineer on the B. and M. Railroad.

He was in charge of the second engine of a double-header, (known in railroad parlance as two engines hitched together), that was pulling a stock train, composed mostly of sheep cars, which ran into a freight train at the Indianola depot. The engineer of the freight train, the fireman of the first engine of the double-header and a brakeman on the stock train were killed. The McCook, (Neb.,) Courier says that Ianson was badly bruised and possibly injured internally.

Two brothers of Mr. Ianson are employed on the New Jersey Central Railroad—Jud as engineer of a passenger train, and George as baggagemaster. His father was for a number of years in the employ of the Central as a boss carpenter.

—The stone steps in front of the First Baptist church are being repaired.

—The third rank will be worked upon three candidates at the meeting of Perseverance Lodge Friday night. Visitors from Friendship Lodge, New Brunswick, will also be present.

FORMER PASTORS HEARD

CONTINUATION OF CHURCH ANNIVERSARY AT DUNELLEN.

The Services Last Night Devoted to a Reunion of Old Pastors and Members.—Remarks That Were Made

(Special to The Daily Press.)

Dunellen, N. J., Oct. 18—The twenty-fifth anniversary exercises of the Methodist Episcopal Church were continued last night. The programme included addresses by former pastors and friends, and was a re-union service. In addition to this the pastor, Rev. Dr. E. S. Jamison, read fraternal letters from several clergymen and interested friends, and paid a touching tribute to the former pastors, who have crossed the line of life. The choir was large and rendered an anthem while the offering was being taken up. The attendance was not as large as on Sunday night, but the room was well filled.

On the pulpit with Dr. Jamison were Rev. A. I. Martine, pastor of the Presbyterian Church; Rev. T. D. Frazee, Staten Island; Rev. Walter C. Kinsey, of Newark; and Rev. C. C. Woodruff, of Scotch Plains. Rev. M. Frazee and Rev. M. Kinsey are old pastors of the church and Rev. M. Woodruff's father, Rev. C. S. Woodruff, of Dover, is a former pastor.

Rev. M. Frazee, of Staten Island, was the first of the former pastors to speak. Mr. Frazee had charge of this Church in its infancy, and so was not acquainted with many of the members now connected with it. Mr. Frazee was here in 1869. During his pastorate the Church Society rapidly increased, and just after his departure plans were made to build the present structure. "It is a good thing," said he, "during these glad exercises, to look after the spiritual growth of the Church. The members of a church may not be rich, but if they possess a true Christian character and are reservoirs of spiritual life, their lot is a useful one.

We must also remember that we must keep abreast of the times and that God's church is advancing. But the principles by which we are actuated never change: they are the same yesterday, today and forever."

Rev. W. C. Kinsey's pastorate was preceded and followed by two divines who are now dead, Rev. A. S. Compton and Rev. R. C. VanCleve and prior to Mr. Kinsey's remarks Dr. Jamison paid a high tribute to their memory, and also to Rev. G. W. Seran and Rev. S. F. Custard. Their Christian characters, upright lives and devotion to their work were exploited. The death of Mr. Custard was particularly sad, as he was taken with his final illness, and passed away in the parsonage next door to the church.

Rev. Mr. Kinsey was a pastor whose connection with the church people was the most pleasant, and his remarks were greatly enjoyed.

Rev. C. C. Woodruff, the last speaker, has been located at Scotch Plains for about one year, yet already he has made himself a power among his people. His father, Rev. C. S. Woodruff, is now in charge of a church at Dover. The father preached the Sunday morning sermon, and the son last night made an address.

There are several clergymen and friends who were invited to speak at the service, who could not attend, and they sent fraternal letters, some of which were read last night. Among those who wrote were Rev. J. W. Marshall, D. D., of Camden; Rev. J. A. Kingsbury, D. D., Vineland; Rev. Joshua Mead, Rutherford. These are former pastors. A letter was also sent by Rev. W. W. Winans, of Long Island City, who was licensed to preach by the quarterly conference of the Dunellen Methodist church.

James McGee, of Plainfield, has invited the members of the Monroe Avenue church to meet him Thursday night at the church and to take supper here.

BEST OF FRIENDS MUST PART.

Mysterious Disappearance of $6 Severed This Friendship.

Mary Sabert and Agnes Hall are two colored women who used to be friends. Sunday afternoon their friendship came to an end, for Mary claims that on that day Agnes stole $6 from her. A warrant has been sworn out for Agnes Hall's arrest, and she is expected to be brought before Justice Mosher this afternoon for a hearing.

Mary Sabert lives on West Second street, and the other on East Third street. Sunday afternoon Agnes visited Mary, and while the latter was out of the room, Agnes, it is alleged, slipped up to a trunk and took the money.

Resigned as Chief Hello Girl.

Miss Lucy A. Westphal, for sometime past the chief operator at the local telephone office, resigned her position last Saturday. Her place has been filled by Miss Etta Yaeger, who was formerly an operator.

SENATOR REED'S MAN NAMED FOR SHERIFF.

A Big Fight in Somerset County Republican Convention.

THOMPSON IN THE LEAD.

ON FIRST VOTE FOR CHAIRMAN FACTIONS WERE TIED.

One Bedminister Delegate Was Late, but When He Appeared on the Scene Thompson Had a Majority of One—Nominations Made for Sheriff and Assembly—A Compromise Reported.

(By a Staff Representative.)

Somerville, Oct. 18, 2:40 p. m.—After the convention reconvened the balloting on the nomination was commenceds.

The result was as follows:

For Sheriff—VanDoren, 24; Suydam, 20; Green 1.

VanDoren's nomination was made unanimous.

For Assembly—First ballot, Cooper, 22; McMichaels, 16; Ludlow, 7.

Second ballot—Cooper, 25; McMichaels, 20. Ludlow withdrew.

Cooper's nomination was made unanimous.

Lewis Reed, of this place, and Henry DeMott, of North Plainfield, were nominated for coroners.

Somerville, October 18—Somerville is today the most important point of political importance in either Somerset county or the Third Congressional district, owing to the fact that both Republican county and Congressional conventions are being held here, and that at their conclusion Governor Voorhees is to speak. The two conventions present contradictory phases—the Congressional affair being harmonious and settled upon one candidate, while the county delegates are involved in one of the biggest fights that has marked the ranks of the Somerset G. O. P. in a good many years.

It has been a foregone conclusion all along that Congressman Howell, of New Brunswick, was certain of renomination, and the convention really meets to perform but a perfunctory duty. The county convention, however, gathers not only to name the candidates for county offices, but also to put to test the strength of Supreme Court Clerk L. A. Thompson, of Somerville, and Senator Charles A. Reed, of North Plainfield, as to which is the most powerful factor in the party organization in the bailiwick.

The aspirations of Senator Reed to supercede Mr. Thompson as the county leader is an open book, and it is well-known that preliminary skirmishes took place in the township primaries last Friday and Saturday. Just exactly how the delegates then elected would affiliate in the county convention with one or the other factions was in uncertainity until the convention was concerned this morning.

The delegates to the county convention commenced assembling in Speer's hall on Main street before 11 o'clock, but it was 11:15 o'clock whem L. A. Thompson, as chairman of the county committee, called the convention to order.

The fight for the control of the convention commenced at the very start when B A. Hegeman, Jr., of North Plainfield, was nominated by N. B. Smalley, also of North Plainfield, for the temporary chairmanship. Mr. Hegeman is Reed's right hand supporter in the fight and his spokesman in the convention. George W. Hope, of Raritan, was named also for temporary chairman by J. L. Griggs, of Somerville, representing the Thompson faction.

At that time there were forty-four or forty-five delegates present, the missing one being in the Bedminister delegation. The first ballot showed twenty-two votes each for both Hegeman and Hope. Just before the second ballot was commenced, however, the missing Bedminister delegate turned up and when the second ballot was counted it was found that the missing man was a Thompson follower and that Hope had twenty-three to Hegeman's twenty-two votes. With a majority of one, the Thompson faction looked triumphant and prepared to go ahead with more confidence.

Charles Bateman, editor of the Somerville Unionist-Gazette, was then chosen as secretary without opposition, the Reed faction realizing that it was useless to oppose.

In the announcement of the other convention officers the name of N. B. Smalley, of North Plainfield, for a member of the committee on permanent organization, was heard. B.

MEN OF TALENT TO TALK

SPEAKERS SECURED FOR UNIVERSITY EXTENSION LECTURES.

Prof. Smyth to Discuss Subject of American Literature in First Course—Prof. W. H. Mace in the Second Course.

The committee in charge of the University Extension lectures, which are announced in another column, have been very fortunate in securing for the first course Prof. Albert H. Smyth, professor of English language and literature in the Central High School of Philadelphia.

Prof. Smyth is a man of splendid presence, an easy, graceful speaker, who has a fine grasp of his subject and who concentrates the attention of his hearers. He will lecture on American Literature, covering in his course "The Colonial Period," "The Revolutionary Period," "Washington Irving and the New York writers," Emerson and the awakening of New England, "Hawthorne," "Poe" and "Lowell."

The second course will be delivered by Prof. William H. Mace, professor of history in Syracuse University. Prof. Mace has had large experience as a public lecturer. He has been so well liked in Rochester that they have engaged him year after year.

The secretary of the Extension Society of Greater New York says of him that "He is without doubt the most brilliant philosophical, and inspiring extension lecturer in his line of study in this country. He has a genius for teaching the principles of history vividly and he possesses the rare gift of stimulating his hearers to become students and do personal work in reading, thinking and writing. He is certain to arouse enthusiasm on the history of our country wherever he speaks."

Prof. Mace will lecture on the "Development of the Nation," and he will guide us through the various stages of nationality, Democracy, the union of the two, then the struggle against slavery, with the process of denationalization and the movement for secession.

FOUND THE BLANKETS.

Constable VanHorn, With a Search Warrant, Found Stolen Property.

(Special to The Daily Press.)

Dunellen, October 18.—Henry Case, of Greenbrook, appeared before Justice Crosley, of North Plainfield, yesterday afternoon with a complaint against Golson Smalley, of this place, and James Burke and John C. Richards, of Plainfield.

Case is a stone carter, and yesterday noon, while eating his lunch on the road between the stone cracker in the hills and Dunellen, three blankets which he had put on his horses were stolen.

According to S. Sorensen, a neighbor, who was passing, the thieves were Smalley, Burke and Richards, so Case hurried to North Plainfield got a search warrant and Constable VanHorn and proceeded to Smalley's farm.

When theft errand was made known Smalley declared that there were no blankets about his premises, but the officer decided to look for himself. He rummaged all through the barn, forked over the hay and straw, looked into boxes and wagons without success. Finally he noticed a barrel placed upside down, and in turning it over, found two of the blankets under it. The other one was later discovered in a manger.

VanHorn did not arrest the men, but it is probable that the matter is not settled.

MR. CRANE SENDS $5.

Democratic Candidate for Governor Remembers Catholic Fair.

Last night at the Catholic Club was a repetition of the previous night. The attendance was fair, and the interest unabated. P. Casey, of West Third street, has donated a cane made of wood from the fort at ElCaney, Cuba, which will be given either to the Democratic nominee for Governor, Crane, or the Republican, Voorhees.

The cane has a silver knob on top, and is well worth having. Mr. Casey has written to both Crane and Voorhees, asking permission to use their names in the contest. Mr. Crane has replied giving his consent. It costs a few cents to vote, and last night the contest was quite exciting.

This morning Mr. Casey received a letter from E. W. Crane, Democratic candidate for Governor, in which was enclosed a check for $5. In the letter Mr. Crane says he hopes the best man may win, and the check is to be credited to whoever he may be.

—Next Thursday evening there will be a meeting of Greenbrook Council, Royal Arcanum, at which time arrangements will be made for the coming anniversary of the council.

CONGRESSMAN HOWELL RENOMINATED TODAY.

Harmony Personified in the Third District.

JUST LIKE A LOVE FEAST.

THE CONVENTION WAS HELD IN SOMERVILLE TODAY.

Convention Called to Order by Chas. Place, of North Plainfield—Monmouth Man Made Chairman—Convention Did Not Take a Recess—Rev. J. B. Cleaver Made Nominating Speech for Howell.

(By a Staff Representative.)

Somerville, October 18.—The Republican convention of the Third Congressional District convened in Somerset Hall, on Main street, this morning at 11:30 o'clock, being called to order by Hon. Charles Place, of North Plainfield, chairman of the Congressional committee.

Henry L. White, of Monmouth, was named for temporary chairman, and Benjamin L. Ogden, of Monmouth, and H. C. Suydam, of Somerset, secretaries. Senator C. Asa Francis, of Monmouth, Theodore Strong, of Middlesex, and T. W. Morrison, of Somerset, were chosen to escort Mr. White to the platform. The vice-presidents chosen were Frank Appleby, of Monmouth, Howard Valentine, of Middlesex, and J. Newton Voorhees, of Somerset.

The Congressional committee was appointed to consist of Charles Place, of North Plainfield, and George W. Hope, of Raritan.

After the organization of the convention was perfected, the committee on resolutions presented their platform without taking a recess. It endorsed the State platform and the candidacy of Foster Voorhees, praised the administration of President McKinley and the conduct of the war, and highly complimented the career of Congressman Howell in the House of Representatives.

Nominations were then called for and Rev. J. B. Clever, of Bound Brook, arose and in a glowing speech nominated Congressman Howell for a second term. The nomination was then made by acclamation. Congressman Howell was conveniently near, and he was escorted to the hall and delivered a speech of acceptance.

The whole proceedings were over and the convention had adjourned by one o'clock,

BIRTHDAY CELEBRATIONS.

Mrs. Fisher is Seventy-five Years' Old—Mrs. C. L. Force Greatly Surprised.

A dual birthday celebration was pleasantly observed yesterday when Mrs. Fisher, of 72 Jackson avenue, and Mrs. Charles L. Force, of Duer street, joined in receiving a number of friends. During the day Mrs. Fisher, who is 75 years of age, was kept busy receiving her many relatives from Elizabeth, East Millstone, Raritan, Plainfield and the borough. The affair was arranged by Mrs. Bertha Richards, Mrs. Fisher's daughter.

In the evening a surprise was given to Mrs. Charles L. Force, of Duer street. She was in attendance at the celebration of Mrs. Fisher, and when she returned home about 8:30 last evening she was completely surprised to see about twenty friends assembled at her home. This affair was arranged by Mrs. Force's husband.

A pleasant fact was the presentation of two handsome chairs, one from the guests and one from the celebrant's husband.

Lafayette Day at the Public School.

Tomorrow Lafayette Day will be observed in the Plainfield High School in an appropriate manner. The exercises will be held at 8:30 a. m., and will include an address by Rev. Dr. A. H. Hewis, bright and attractive music by the scholars and a declamation by William A. Fisher on "The Carreer of Lafayette." A hearty welcome is extended to all interested to attend the exercises. The day will be quite generally observed in all parts of the country.

Lecture on Electricity

There was a very large attendance of members at the regular lecture given before the Monday Afternoon Club yesterday afternoon, when E. R. von Nardroff, of Brooklyn, gave his second talk on electricity. The subject was "Recent Electrical Discoveries and Inventions," and the speaker illustrated his lecture by experiment.

Surprise for Mrs. Staats.

Last Saturday evening at the home of Postmaster and Mrs. Elias H. Bird, on Elm place, there was a gathering of relatives in honor of the birthday anniversary of Mrs. Bird's mother, Mrs. Staats. The affair was a very informal one and a good social time was enjoyed by all.

Serious Conditions to Be Faced by Our Troops.

GENERAL LEE TO COMMAND

Health of the Soldiers the Grave Problem The Employment of Cubans. Southern Camps Not to be Occupied Until the Fever in the South is Checked by Frosts

Washington, Oct. 18.—It is said at the war department that nothing has taken place to change the plans already framed for the movement of troops to Cuba.

It was not intended that the occupation of the island should begin immediately, except at such towns as Manzanillo and perhaps Holguin, where immune regiments could be used to advantage.

Colonel Hecker's investigation into the situation has been of great value to the department, disclosing as it has the views of a thoroughly practical man based on keen observation.

But Colonel Hecker's primary object was to locate camp sites for the occupation of the troops, and he is proceeding in exact accordance with his instructions.

The conditions that he found, it is said, thoroughly warrant the belief that the war department will be obliged to face the most difficult problems that have yet arisen in connection with the handling of troops in order to insure the protection of the health of the soldiers.

It has become evident that the men must be isolated for some time in their camps to avoid the danger of infection, and the department is not quite clear that any useful purpose will be served by placing soldiers where their services cannot be available.

While the wet season has now almost reached its end in Cuba, it is said that the yellow fever is more prevalent and more dangerous in type just now than at any time during the year.

These conditions, however, will not continue long, and it is believed that before November has progressed far it will be possible to have several divisions of troops safely camped on Cuban soil.

A proposition that is now under consideration looks to the employment of the Cubans as local gendarmes, it being urged that they would be more serviceable in maintaining order in the towns than American soldiers unacquainted with the Spanish language and Cuban customs.

The United States government in this way, also, would be able by the payment of small salaries to these men considerably to relieve the distress that exists on the island without breeding a class of professional paupers or lowering the pride of the Cubans.

Unless General Lee specifically asks to be relieved from that duty he is to command the first expedition, seconded by General Greene and General Arnold.

It was said at the war department that troops will not be sent to the southern camps until after frost has made it certain that yellow fever will not spread. This applies to troops now at Camp Meade, Lexington and Knoxville.

The troops at Camp Meade will be held in any event until after the peace jubilee at Philadelphia, as they are to take part in that demonstration.

Major Edie of the medical department, who has been stationed at Lexington for some time, was at the department and says that the health of the troops there has been steadily improving.

It is said, however, that it will be too cold for the troops to occupy tents during the winter season in the Kentucky highlands.

Fever in Mississippi.

Washington, D. C., Oct. 18.—The following additional official reports regarding developments in the yellow fever situation were received by Acting Surgeon eneral Bailhache of the marine hospital service yesterday:

Jackson—Eight new cases.

Oxford—One new case and one death

Edwards—Four white and one negro case.

Yazoo City—Six new "foci."

Harrison—Twelve new cases.

Poplarville—Two cases.

Tongaloo—One case.

A dispatch from Meridian reports one case of yellow fever discovered, and says that guards have been placed around it. A light frost occurred there Saturday night.

A Mail Agent Killed.

Los Angeles, Cal., Oct. 18.—Word reached this city yesterday that the Southern Pacific overland train No. 3 west bound, was ditched thirty-five miles west of Yuma.

Mail Agent George F. Kellogg was killed. As far as learned there were no other fatalities.

The cause of the accident is not definitely known, but it is thought that the engine, baggage car and mail car were thrown from the track by sand drifts.

THE COMMAND IN PORTO RICO.

Gen. Brooke to Have Sole Charge of the Government.

Washington, Oct. 18.—Gen. Brooke has plenary powers in Porto Rico and will have sole charge of the government of the island until some other arrangement is made. It is quite possible that when the president returns he may designate a military governor of the island to act in that capacity until Congress can provide for a territorial civil government.

No instructions have been sent to General Brooke regarding his duties after to-day, when the island formally passes over to the United States, and all Spanish authority is withdrawn, but he is acquainted with the proclamations of the president regarding the management of affairs.

General Brooke, it is understood, intends to return to the United States as soon as the affairs of the island become more settled, but probably before that time a military governor will be named, as was done at Santiago recently.

SICK SOLDIERS FROM MANILA.

The Arrival of the Transport Pennsylvania.

San Francisco, Oct. 18.—The transport Pennsylvania, which arrived yesterday morning from Manila by way of the Ladrone islands and Honolulu, brought thirteen sick soldiers from Manila and sixteen from Honolulu.

Among the latter were Clement Atkins, James Dunton, Joel Holmes, Wallace Phillips, and H. N. Bullock, all of the New York volunteers. These men were at once removed to the division hospital.

Phillips and Bullock became demented at Honolulu, and Bullock was so violent yesterday that he was put in a straitjacket.

The Pennsylvania brings no news of importance. She will be fumigated and docked to-day and will soon be in readiness for further service.

The troops assigned to the transport Senator were sent on board yesterday and the vessel will sail for Manila to-day.

Oil Ship Destroyed by Fire.

Margate, England, Oct. 18.—The British ship Blengfell, Captain Johnston, from New York on September 19 for London, was destroyed by a sudden fire off this place early yesterday morning.

Nine of her crew, including the captain and pilot, perished. The survivors were landed at this place and at Dover.

The Blengfell was passing here in tow, on her way to London at about 6.30 a. m., and was about four miles off the coast. Suddenly she was enveloped in flames and smoke poured from her hatches.

Two lifeboats immediately put off to her assistance, but before they were able to reach the burning vessel her masts fell and she was burned to the water's edge.

The Blengfell was an iron vessel, built at White Haven in 1876. She registered 1,117 tons, hailed from Liverpool and was owned by J. Edgar & Co.

The Blengfell had a cargo of naphtha on board.

A Liquor Rio in Connecticut.

New aven, Conn., Oct. 18.—Secretary Thrasher, head of the State Law and Order League, left this city yesterday with a deputy sheriff for Wallingford, to arrest, if possible, the leaders in the riot at that place, where agents of the league, after raiding a liquor saloon and arresting sellers and drinkers, were mobbed, stoned and put in serious peril of their lives.

The details show that it was one of the most serious mobs in the history of the state.

The mob consisted of about five hundred persons, including a number of women. The agents of the league were hit many times by stones, badly cut or bruised, and had a single shot been fired from the drawn revolvers, a volley would have followed, and loss of life almost surely resulted.

At the office of the league here it is said that the leader of the mob was a soldier in uniform.

The governor of the state may be appealed to to act in the case.

Fears of Yellow Fever.

Washington, D. C., Oct. 18.—It was stated at the war department yesterday that troops will not be sent to the southern camps until after frost has made it certain that yellow fever will not spread.

This applies to the troops now at Camp Meade, Lexington and Knoxville.

The troops at Camp Meade in any event will be held until after the peace jubilee at Philadelphia, as they are to take part in that demonstration.

Davis Makes 24 Knots.

Portland, Ore., Oct. 18.—In its preliminary trial of three-quarters of an hour, under the supervision of the naval board, the torpedo boat Davis averaged a speed of twenty-four knots, which is one and one-half knots above the required speed.

The engines averaged 385 revolutions, or fifteen above the number required by the specifications.

The official trial trip will take place next Wednesday.

Mrs. Sherman Recovering.

Washington, Oct. 18.—Mrs. Sherman's condition yesterday was such as to give great encouragement to her physicians. While she has not yet regained her speech, it is said that she is on the road to recovery and there are no apprehensions of her illness proving fatal.

Marines for Manila.

Norfolk, Va., Oct. 18.—The first marines, it is stated, to go to the Philippines will be three hundred of Huntington's men, now here resting after service at Guantanamo.

It is said that they will soon leave for New York and sail on the Buffalo for Manila.

The Paris Strike Ended.

Paris, Oct. 18.—The building strike is ended and the troops have been withdrawn from the yards and other places in which they have been stationed since disturbances were threatened.

WHITEWASH FOR ALGER

Report of War Investigators Said to Be Practically Complete.

POOR MILITARY SYSTEM

An Attache of the Commission Says the Secretary of War and Other Department Officials Will Be Absolved from All Blame Unless Something New Develops During Inspection of Camps.

Washington, D. C., Oct. 18.—It is declared by attaches of the war investigating commission that the report upon the war scandals is practically made up and that the document will completely absolve Secretary Alger and the other officials of the department from all blame connected with the mismanagement of the Santiago campaign and of the camp horrors.

The members of the commission have gone south on a tour of inspection of the various camps, and unless they develop something startling and unexpected on the trip, their report will clear the department of the main charges that have been made against it.

An attache of the commission, who was present during the entire investigation, had the following to say on the work of the men who had been holding daily sessions and interrogating officers at the Lemon building in this city.

"The examinations and statements submitted to the commission show that our military system is poor and needs entire revision, particularly the staff departments. The report of the commission will lay much stress upon this point, but unless events take a new turn during the southern trip, the commission will declare that the department is not to blame for the sickness and suffering of the soldiers in camp and during the Santiago campaign. They will state that the witnesses examined by them and the reports of the various chiefs of the supply departments of the army failed to show that there was negligence on the part of the department officials to do their full duty; that they were handicapped by certain conditions at the outbreak of hostilities and that they did the very best possible under the circumstances. This in effect is the opinion of the board at this time, and is the result of the examination of witnesses in this city."

It is possible that public opinion may compel the commissioners to continue their work after returning from the various camps, and demand that certain men who are able to give some interesting information be called upon. The commmission has not yet summoned Dr. Huidekoper, the veterinarian, and a number of others whom it is thought the public would like to have examined. It is thought, also, that an effort will be made to have the future hearings of the commission held in a hall large enough to admit of more persons being present ahan is now possible in the limited quarters in the Lemon building.

It is claimed that the commissioners have not been fair in their treatment of witnesses and that had there been more outsiders present fuller facts would have been forthcoming. The air about headquarters savors of anything but a desire on the part of the commissioners to obtain full publicity. Persons straying into the Lemon building are met by a small army of doorkeepers who do their best to keep visitors out. Signs warning persons not to go on the third floor where the commission holds forth, hang from every wall. If one succeeds in running the gauntlet and reaches the third floor, he is confronted by screens that shut off even a fleeting view of the commissioners and their witnesses. A man who has been present at all hearings said:

"The investigation smacks much of star chamber proceedings. A witness is instantly put on the defensive and made to feel that he is on trial. He is kept constantly in check, and it is practically impossible for a man to give testimony on a line other than that indicated by the questioners.

A man must be fearless and determined in order to succeed in making himself heard on any subject not mentioned by the commissioners. I heard the full testimony of Major Seaman, and I do not consider that he got fair treatment at all. He was ill and suffering under a great mental strain. No notice was taken of this fact and the witness was browbeaten and harrassed to such an extent that at last in self defense he refused to answer."

French Naval Activity.

Paris, Oct. 18.—A semi-official note was issued last night saying that the reports about orders received at Toulon speedily to prepare the armored cruisers Admiral Trehouart, Bouvines, Jammapes and Valmy for active service, and to send as many gunners as possible to Brest, without delay, to man the forts and batteries there, are incorrect.

Rumor connected the preparations with the question in dispute with Great Britain as to the possession of Fashoda on the Nile.

It is added that undue importance has been attached to the orders sent to Toulon.

To Make Dewey an Admiral.

Washington, Oct. 18.—Representative Hilborn, Republican of California, a prominent member of the naval affairs committee, is in Washington. He expresses the belief that Congress will re-establish the grade of admiral of the navy and bestow it upon Rear Admiral Dewey.

The grade of vice admiral may not be restored on account of the conflict between the partisans of Schley and Sampson which would almost inevitably result.

Emperor William's Journey.

Constantinople, Oct. 18.—The imperial yacht Hohenzollern, with the emperor and empress of Germany on board, arrived in the straits of the Dardanelles with her escorts Sunday. She was saluted by the forts and the crew of the Turkish warship Izzeden and other Turkish vessels cheered her. The Germans responded.

SEVERE STORM IN THE SOUTHWEST.

Wires Broken at Kansas City and News from Trains Delayed.

Kansas City, Mo., Oct. 18.—A severe storm prevails in the southwest and west. A heavy wet snow has been falling since three o'clock yesterday morning, driven by a strong wind. The wires are down in all directions.

The snow followed twenty-four hours of steady rain. The sidewalks are covered three inches deep with slush.

There has been a decided fall in the temperature, and the suddenness of the storm, coming as it has upon the track of the summer weather, will undoubtedly cause great suffering, especially on the ranges covered with cattle.

Kansas City is practically cut off from telegraph communication with the west.

Up to eleven o'clock yesterday not a word had passed by wire with Topeka, Wichita, and the points between here and Denver. At that hour the general conditions, while clearing up slowly, appeared at this point to be getting worse west of Kansas City.

The interruption of railroad traffic was not serious. The Union Pacific, the Santa Fe, the Burlington and the Missouri Pacific officials all reported incoming trains practically on time. Because of lack of telegraphic communication, however, the Missouri Pacific was unable to report the condition of their east bound Colorado express. The same is true of all information from the storm-ridden part of the southwest. Until wires have been restored, the real extent of the storm cannot be ascertained.

Roosevelt Begins His Stumping Tour.

New York, Oct. 18.—Colonel Roosevelt's tour, which is to give the Hudson river counties and those in the north of the state a splendid opportunity to show heir patriotism and Republicanism, began yesterday morning under highly favorable conditions.

Besides these, six Rough Riders went with their old colonel to tell the people of New York what kind of a man they followed through the war.

The special train is perfectly appointed and is fitted out with a corps of servants, a kitchen and cook. A private secretary and a stenographer accompanied the party.

Chauncey M. Depew will accompany Colonel Roosevelt on his trip next week through the middle and to the west of the state.

Investigating Commission at Jacksonville

Jacksonville, Fla., Oct. 18.—The war investigating commission arrived here yesterday afternoon on a special train from Washington. The commission held a meeting yesterday and made plans for the inspection of Camp Cuba Libre.

There are two divisions of troops at the Jacksonville camp, consisting of three brigades each.

The First brigade of each division will be visited by Colonel Denby, Dr. Connor and Colonel Sexton. The second brigade of each division will be inspected by General McCook, Governor Woodbury and Captain owell, and the third brigade will be examined by General Wilson, General Beaver and General Dodge.

The committees will converse with the officers and men.

The hospitals will be visited and sanitary arrangements inspected, while complaints will be patiently listened to Architect Boyington Dead.

Chicago, Oct. 18.—W. W. Boyington, Chicago's oldest architect and the designer of many noted structures, died Sunday at his residence in ighland Park.

He was eighty years of age. In his life in this city since 1858 Mr. Boyington planned, among other buildings, the Board of Trade, Columbus Memorial, Old Exposition, the Grand Pacific hotel, Sherman House, the Illinois state building at the World's Fair, and many business blocks and churches.

He designed also the Joliet penitentiary and the State Capitol at Springfield. Mr. Boyington was born at Southwick, Mass.

Gen. Greene in Savannah

Savannah, Ga., Oct. 18.—Major General F. V. Greene, who led the left wing of the American army in the fighting before Manila, has arrived here to look over the situation preparatory to assuming command of the First division of the Seventr army corps, which will be brought to Savannah this week.

General Greene takes command of the entire corps in the absence of General Lee, who is at present in Richmond on account of the serious illness of his wife.

Fire in Dismal Swamp.

Norfolk, a., Oct. 18.—Fire has again broken out in the Dismal Swamp, and wild animals are fleeing before the flames. Bears are playing havoc with the farmers' growing corn and many traps have been set.

Judge S. W. Gary has arrived here with two huge black bears which he killed. They weighed three hundred pounds each.

Wife of Capt. Folger Dead.

Washington, Oct. 18.—The navy department has been informed of the sudden death in Boston Sunday of the wife of Captain William M. Folger, commanding the cruiser New Orleans.

It was too late to send news of her death to Captain Folger, as the New Orleans had left San Juan, Porto Rico, for Philadelphia on Saturday.

The Lasters' Strike.

Brockton, Mass., Oct. 18.—The fifth week of the lasters' strike in southeastern Massachusetts was begun yesterday morning, and according to the union press committee the end is not in sight.

Nancy Guilford Again Remanded.

London, Oct. 18.—Nancy Guilford, the Bridgeport, Conn., midwife, was again arraigned in the Bow street police court yesterday, upon extradition proceedings and was further remanded.

PEACE NEGOTIATIONS

Sixth Joint Session of the Commissioners Held.

ADJOURNED TO WEDNESDAY

Agoncillo the Philippine Agent Making Public His Views in Paris. He Declares Provisional Government Must Determine the Future of the Philippines.

Paris, Oct. 18.—The joint peace commission met at two o'clock yesterday afternoon and sat until 3.45 o'clock. Senor Villaurutia and Secretary Ojeda of the Spanish commission were absent owing to indisposition.

The session adjourned until Wednesday afternoon. Further information concerning the situation is not obtainable.

United States Ambassador Porter will give a dinner to the Spanish and American commissioners to-day.

Whatever business difficulties may have arisen in the official intercourse of the Spanish and American commissioners the very best personal relations exist, and their feelings of genuine mutual esteem continue.

Philippo Agoncillo, the representative of Aguinaldo, who arrived here late on Sunday afternoon, has engaged apartments at the Hotel Continental, on the same floor as the rooms occupied by the United States peace commissioners, said that the Filipinos desired independence, and that they possessed a recognized government, which would determine the attitude towards a United States protectorate or toward the annexation of the islands to the United States.

Asked whether, should the United States take all or part of the Philippines the Filipinos would fight the United States or not, he replied:

"I cannot answer without possible error; but I think it would be most unwise for the United States to divide the Philippine islands. They should take all or none."

He said that if the United States should give up the Philippine islands, the Filipinos would continue to fight the Spaniards.

The Filipinos did not object to the continuance of the native priests, he said. As to the religious orders he said:

"The presence and acts of the orders were the chief determining cause of the insurrection. It would be impossible for the Filipinos to become reconciled with Spain. We have vainly and repeatedly sought the rights of citizenship, employing all legal means, and have risen in insurrection twelve times in a century to secure them, and we are now enjoying them.

"Peace is only possible under any government by the abolishment of the orders, which, as I have said, were the chief determining cause of the abuses and oppression, and hence the rebellions."

Agoncillo said that he had not come to seek a hearing before the commission, but to learn the determination of the commissioners regarding the Philippine islands, and to communicate it to Aguinaldo.

Agoncillo, thus far, has not communicated with either the American or the Spanish commission.

Coaling Station at Guantanamo.

Washington, Oct. 18.—So far as the navy department is concerned, nothing is known of any protest from any one in Cuba, either authorized or unauthorized, against the establishment of a coaling station at Guantanamo Bay.

About a month ago Captain Goodrich, then the senior officer on the station, being unwilling to subject the government to the considerable charges involved in keeping coaling schooners lying in the harbor, asked permission to have the vessels land their coal and relieve the government of the demurrage expense.

The department authorized him to proceed, if he could find a tract of land open to such use.

He did find such a tract and landed his coal, and the department regards it as singular that objection should be made to this action, in view of the fact that the United States government now holds all of the public buildings and property in Santiago, Manzanillo and other Cuban cities without objection.

The Political Betting.

New York, Oct. 18.—Tammany money is still being placed in the Wall street district by the stock exchange firm of Bell & Co.

E. B. Talcott bet $5,000 on Van Wyck on even terms, various Stock Exchange members taking the Roosevelt end of the betting.

Among those who put up Roosevelt money were A. A. Housman & Co., $2,000; J. S. Bache & Co., $1,000; and M. B. Mendham, $500.

The remainder of the $5,000 was taken in scattering lots. Mr. Talcott offered to bet $1,000 to $10,000 that Van Wyck would have seventy-five thousand plurality.

E. B. Talcott made one bet of $1,000 even on Van Wyck.

J. H. Eagle bet $1,000 even with John J. Judge that Roosevelt would be victorious.

C. H. Davis of Buckhout, Davis & Co., bet $500 even with Mr. Judge the same way.

Rates of Ocean Postage.

Washington, Oct. 18.—Third Assistant Postmaster General Merritt will recommend in his annual report this year the reduction of ocean postage between this country and Great Britain to two cents a half ounce. The present rate is five cents, so that, for business houses on both sides of the Atlantic having a large correspondence, this will mean a very great saving in expenses.

This is the first time such an official recommendation has been made though the subject has been agitated at various periods for more than forty years. General Merritt's recommendation seems likely to bear fruit.

THE CHICAGO PEACE JUBILEE.

Large Crowds in the City Thoroughfare.

Chicago, Oct. 18.—Jubilee enthusiasm was at its height yesterday. Thousands of flags fluttered in the breeze, while on every street near the city's center were jostling crowds of a magnitude not surpassed in Chicago since the days of tthe World's Fair in 1893.

General Nelson A. Miles, accompanied by his wife and staff, was among the first arrivals.

The party came in over the Rock Island railroad from Moline, Ill., and remained on the special cars until after nine o'clock, when carriages were taken to the Wellington hotel.

The president, Mrs. McKinley and members of the president's party, left Captain McWilliams's house at 11.30 a. m. for the University of Chicago, where President McKinley was to receive the degree of LL. D.

The party was escorted to the university by one hundred and fifty cadets from the Culver Military academy.

At the university President McKinley took luncheon with President Harper of the university, before the conferring of the degree.

Raising the Colon.

Santiago de Cuba, Oct. 18.—Naval Constructor Hobson, who has arrived here from the wreck of the Spanish cruiser Cristobal Colon, will leave today for Guantanamo, on business connected with the Infanta Maria Teresa, which he expects to get off to the United States before the end of the current month.

For the last few days he has been engaged in preparing to raise the Cristobal Colon, a work which is practically impossible from the sea, because of the dangerously heavy ocean swell. The operations will, therefore, be conducted from the shore.

Lieutenant Hobson has built a trolley line out to the ship, a distance of one hundred and fifty feet, with a suspension bridge, and the compressed air pumps are now in position.

On his return from Guantanamo he will push his operations vigorously, as he still feels absolutely certain of raising the hull uninjured.

Fear of Small Pox at Ithaca.

Ithaca, N. Y., Oct. 18.—The board of health of Cornell university, of which Professor James Law is chairman, has promulgated an order requiring every student who is ill, or becomes ill, to report at once to the physical director, Dr. Hitchcock, for examination, that his ailment may be properly diagnosed.

This action is taken on account of the prevalence of small pox in this county. The village of McLean, where the disease is epidemic, is only ten miles from the university, and is visited to some extent by students, and the board is fearful that the disease may be spread among them.

There are now twenty-five cases of small pox at McLean.

Upon reporting to Dr. Hitchcock students will be taken to the office of the health officer of the city of Ithaca to receive a clean bill of health or the opposite.

Mohegan Inquest Adjourned One Week.

Falmouth, Eng., Oct. 18.—The inquest upon the remains of the victims of the wreck of the Mohegan has been adjourned for a week in order to allow the attendance of a representative of the board of trade.

Mr. B. Kelly, one of the rescued passengers, created a sensation by declaring that there were no officers about except the captain when they were most needed to supervise the launching of the boats.

The following cablegram was received last night from the London agent at the offices of the Atlantic Transport line.

"Passengers' bodies identified: Baxter, Brandin, Mrs. King, Mr. Luke, Warner Fuller, George, Miss Gowan, Blackley, Master King, Miss Firing, Miss Saunders.

American Photographers Arrested.

Havana, Oct. 18.—One of the most remarkable phases of the situation here now is the zeal of the Spaniards intrusted with the task of preserving public order to prevent the publication of street scenes showing the state of squalor in which the poorer classes here exist.

Sunday afternoon an American named King was arrested opposite the Hotel Inglaterra for taking a snap shot photograph of a group of children.

The surprise which he felt at his arrest was increased by the explanation afforded him, which was to the effect that such steps were necessary in order to prevent the publication of pictures which would be construed in the United States as examples of the condition of the subjects of Spain.

Bound and Slain.

Tarrytown, Oct. 18.—Jose Gianto, an Italian employed by the Tarrytown Water Company, was found murdered in the woods near the water works on Sunday evening.

His body was buried about three feet beneath the ground. Gianto had been missing since Saturday, a week ago. A fellow workmen, while walking through the woods, noticed that the ground had been freshly turned, and notified John Eagan, a contractor.

The latter went to the place with some Italians. They dug up the spot and came across the body of the missing Gianto.

Pekin, Oct. 18.—Lord Charles Beresford, who has been intrusted by the British government with a special mission to China, arrived here Sunday.

Zola Returns to Paris.

Paris, Oct. 18.—M. Emile Zola returned to Paris at midnight Sunday night. His coming to this city caused no disturbance.

Corporation Financiering.

The people of Newark are now witnessing a bit of financiering that should be taken heed of by the city of Plainfield in treating with the Plainfield Street Railway Company for the further granting of valuable public rights. The situation that confronts Newark, and will some day confront Plainfield in much the same way, is best described in the following editorial words of the Newark Call:

The Newark Gas Company is to be financed again, by the issue of new bonds, and the stock and bond liabilities of the company will foot up to $10,000,000, it is said. The process is one which has become familiar to Newarkers, through experience with the trolley railroads, the electric light company, the breweries and several other large money-making corporations. The companies increase their income enormously, and then proceed to issue more bonds and stock, to represent the increase. Sometimes the change is made with a new ownership, and sometimes it is made by the old owners, who desire to realize cash and still hold control. The time when companies never owed a cent, if it could be avoided, seems to have passed utterly. Nor is their solvency reckoned according to the value of the property above debt. What they are expected to show is an earning capacity great enough to pay 4 per cent. interest, and if this or better seems to be guaranteed by the experience of years, their bonds and stocks will sell at par, or above. To the financier of twenty years ago this would seem to be impracticable, sheer nonsense; but as hundreds of companies find thousands of persons willing to invest their money on this basis, the condition knocks the theory into flinders. Newark has seen fortunes by the score made in the trolley, electric light gas, brewery and similar deals, and the end is not yet, according to the views of many.

In dealing with the Plainfield Street Railway Company the condition of affairs so clearly defined by The Call seems to have been lost sight of by the Common Council. However, such a fault is not one for which this particular Council alone is guilty of, but one in which many previous ones have erred, as is now realized in the inestimable rights that have been granted, with scarcely compensation worth mentioning, to the water, gas and electric light companies.

But if the present City Fathers should persist in following out this line of government in the face of the conditions that are now recognized, it would be almost paramount to a crime. The capitalists and promoters back of these great enterprises, depending upon concessions from the people for their very existence, are very wise about future developments, but it must be admitted that the law makers do not exercise such a perspicuity.

Honest Worth of Trolleys.

Elizabeth as well as Plainfield is seeing the light of honest worth in trolley franchises and as a result there is now pending before the Common Council of that city an ordinance which provides that John Kean's new street railroad provides for a three cent fare to be charged between 5 and 7 o'clock in the morning and in the evening. Of course, such a discrimination in fares between the time mentioned is designed for the benefit of poor workingmen.

In Councilman VanHerwerden's proposition now being agitated for the local Common Council to inculcate in the pending ordinance granting a trolley franchise to the Plainfield Street Railway Company, a similar stipulation is also suggested. It is hardly necessary, however knowing the methods of trolley promoters and capitalists, to mention that neither the John Kean or the Plainfield company will consent—at present—to such an arrangement.

THE MINNESOTA INDIAN WAR.

The map shows the scene of the Chippewa Indian outbreak. The disorderly element of the Chippewas is the band known as the Pillagers. The present trouble grew out of the band's attempt to prevent the arrest of Bog-ah-ma-go-shik, or "Bushy Ear," who was in contempt of court for failure to obey a subpœna.

Somerset county Republicans are talking about the great love feast that they proposed to indulge in at Somerville today. This view of it may be all right so far as the appearance of Governor Voorhees is concerned, but how about the little difference of opinion between Mr. Thompson and Mr. Reed? The preliminary skirmishes have scarcely been indicative of a love feast between these gentlemen.

The Mail and Express Saturday Illustrated Magazine has a very good picture of former Mayor Alexander Gilbert, president of the Market and Fulton National Bank of New York. The picture, in company with other bank officials, illustrates an article on the New York Clearinghouse, Mr. Gilbert being the chairman of the conference committee in that powerful financial association.

Tomorrow The Daily Press will print a communication from L. W. Serrell, Jr., concerning trolley matters. Whatever Mr. Serrell writes on such a subject will no doubt be read with great interest, as he is closely identified with the private enterprise aiming to secure the franchise that is now under consideration by the Common Council.

The Democrats of Hunterdon county Saturday nominated William S. Closson, of Lambertville, for County Clerk, and Oliver I. Blackwell and George F. Martens for members of Assembly. The rock-ribbed Democracy of Hunterdon undoubtedly proposes to "get there" this year as of yore.

WHAT THE SHEARS FIND.

Editorial Comment From Other Papers of Interest in Plainfield.

Plainfield Democrats are talking strongly of nominating ex-City Judge William A. Coddington for Assembly, and making a hot fight to elect him. He is a relative to Hon. William R Codington, who was the member of Assembly two years ago. The two gentlemen differ radically in politics. The best way to remember which is which is to recall the fact that the one whose middle letter is "R" is a Republican.—Elizabeth Journal.

PASSING COMMENT.

Things that Are Not Exactly News but Just as Interesting.

The New York Herald of Friday contained an article, the length of half a column, from Dr. Charles Lancaster, of Plainfield, on the subject "Does Guillotine End All Feeling?" In this article Dr. Lancaster combats the theory of Dr. Shrady and others that at the decapitation life ends instantaneously. He cites instances of turtles, cold blooded animals, that for days after decapitation responded by muscular contraction to a blow with a stick and believes the action of the animal was prompted by feeling, if not pain. He then asks "Is there any quantity of vital force or sanctity of life vouchsafed to these cold blooded animals which is not shared also by man?" He closes his article with denunciation of the death penalty, which he calls "the last smirch borrowed of paganism" The article is accompanied with an excellent picture of Dr. Lancaster, who is nearly ninety one years of age.

THE AMUSEMENT WORLD.

CURRENT ATTRACTIONS THAT PLAINFIELDERS MAY WITNESS.

Local and Metropolitan Performances That Will Please Those Who Delight in the Art of Thespis and Mimic World.

Oliver Byron's familiar "Across the Continent" was the dramatic vehicle used last night by the Great Gotham Stock Company to make its debut to the patrons of Music Hall, where they will remain this week. The company is managed by George Willey, formerly manager of Music Hall, who must have been gratified at the large audience that greeted the company. As for Manager Maze Edwards, he was in high glee. For the first time since his management he was compelled to do more than put out the "S. R. O." sign. He was compelled to stop selling tickets for the balcony, so crowded was it. "Across the Continent" is a melo-drama of four acts that has more thrilling situations in it per square inch than anything of its kind ever seen in Music Hall. It started in the Five Points in New York and ended in the Rocky mountains, and wherever the hero and heroine might be the villian was there to pursue them. It commenced with a man having the delerium tremins and ending with a massacre of a band of Indians, and between times there were stabbing, shooting and scheming galore. The audience was wrought up to a high pitch of enthusiasm throughout. The acting company is capable in all respects. The work of Frederick Kensil as the hero, and R. Fulton Russell as the villian, was good, while in the dual roles played Miss Gertrude Magill showed herself to be a versatile actress and a conscientious student of dramatic details that proved popular with an audience. Fred Warren as a comedian carried a laugh with him every time he appeared on the stage. The specialties were especially entertaining, The Brownings scoring a hit in what they are pleased to term "a bunch of nonsense." Edward Hume and Alice Magill also appeared in an act made up of negro dialect songs and a cake walk that brought down the house. From start to finish the show went with a vim that stamped it a success with the audience, and the favor with which it was received beepeaks for the company a successful engagement. There will be matinees every afternoon.

* * * *

There is not the slightes danger of Proctor's Twenty-third Street Theatre losing its reputation as the "home of vaudeville debuts," par excellence, if the present rapid rate is continued. Scarce a week passes by but that some well known stars from the legitimate fold make their first essay in the vaudevilles at this cosy theatre, still it is not often that one is treated to such a cluster of notables as this week. First and foremost there is that most charming of comediennes, Amelia Summerville, who has been a favorite of the theatre-going public from the time of her association with "Adonis" Dixey down to the present day. She is to appear in a new comedietta, from the pen of Miron W. Leffingwell, who will also support the star, as will May Wheeler, herself a star of some note and best remembered by her stellar tour in "Zitka."

—Tomorrow afternoon at 4 o'clock the Junior Christian Endeavor Society of the First Baptist church will hold an important meeting.

NEW MARKET.

(Special Correspondence of The Daily Press.)

New Market, October 18—The forty-eighth annual convention of the East New Jersey Baptist Sunday-school convention is being held at the First Baptist church in Roselle today. Charles F. Dayton, of this place, is vice-president, and among those on the committee of arrangements is Rev. Frank Fletcher.

PLAINS AND FANWOOD.

(Special Correspondence to The Daily Press.)

Scotch Plains, October 18.—The boys in the village are talking of organizing a boys' club and renting rooms in town so as they can have a place where they can meet every night. This is a very good idea if it is carried out and the club managed as it should be, for it will do what both pulpit and press have been trying to do for several years, that is, to stop the boys standing along the streets of the village blocking up the sidewalks and some of them even going so far as to make insulting remarks about passing women and children. It was thought by those who were interested in organizing the Public Library and having it open three evenings a week, would do away with this evil and give the boys a place to spend their evenings, but, to a certain degree, this seems to have failed, as a very few of them took advantage of the kind hospitality offered at the Library rooms. If the club is organized, and the headquarters used as a clubroom and not as a place for carousing all night and keeping open house on Sundays, it will no doubt receive the moral support of the whole town, and it may be found to be a remedy for what has been one of the greatest nuisances the people of the village have had to endure, especially the ladies.

Miss Lilia Hayes led the C. E. meeting in the Baptist church Sunday evening. No preaching service was held as the church united with the Methodist church in the harvest home service.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Putnam and child, of Plainfield, spent Sunday with Mrs. Putnam's parents, Mr. and Mrs. A. L. Frentz.

WESTFIELD.

(Special Correspondence of The Press.)

Westfield, Oct. 18.—Miss Tessie Scudder celebrated her sixteenth birthday Saturday evening by entertaining a large number of her young friends at her home on North Broad street. The guests were from Rahway, Springfield, Willow Grove and Westfield. The evening was spent in playing games and music. The guests from Rahway were Theodore Ludlow, Miss Emma Scisco and Mrs. James Avery, who gave some very fine music on the violin and piano after which refreshments were served and all went home having spent an evening thoroughly enjoyed. Miss Scudder received a number of handsome presents.

Mrs. Picton Scudder, the widow of the late Picton Scudder, a well-known politician, died at her home near this place early Sunday morning. Mrs. Scudder was born near here and had lived in Westfield and vicinity all her life of eighty-three years. She is survived by four sons, Mulford M. Scudder, Freeholder from Westfield township and ex-postmaster, George and Ephriam, who reside in the west, and John Scudder, who is business here, and two daughters, Mrs. Callaway and Miss Scudder. The funeral services will be held from her late residence this afternoon with Rev. N. W. Cadwell, pastor of the Presbyterian church, officiating.

During the trial of Lawrence Powers, the hotel keeper, who was charged with having committed an assault on William Kelly, several witnesses swore that they had been drinking in Powers' Hotel Sunday. The church people and the temperance department of the Y. P. S. C. E., it is expected, will take up the matter and ask that the courts revoke Powers license.

THE WOMAN IN BLACK

Traveling recently from Chicago to New York, I found in the morning, upon crawling out of my berth, that the train was standing stock still. The porter told me it had been standing thus for an hour and a half, while I had been sleeping the sleep of the just. I dressed and peeped out and saw that we were alongside the platform of a country station. I took a good breakfast in the dining car, and then went out to stroll up and down the platform.

In the cab sat the driver, or engineer as they call him, alone, waiting. With the natural fondness of an Englishman for machinery, I stopped and gossiped with him a moment about the engine.

Then I offered him a cigar, which he took with thanks, and asked me to come in. I swung myself into his cab.

The engineer, a bright, pleasant-faced man, about 40 years old, explained to me the uses of the numerous valves and levers about him. They were all as bright and shining as polish could make them, for an engineer is as proud of his engine as any housewife is of the neatness of her dwelling. I glanced at the two shining steam gauges with the clock between them, then I noticed what seemed to be an ordinary white moth, mounted in a gilt frame, hanging up against the wall of the cab.

"Is that for an ornament?" I asked, pointing to the moth.

The driver smiled. "Well, partly for an ornament," he said, "but a good deal more for sentiment. I put that moth there because it saved my life and the lives of 250 people as well."

"How in the world could an insect save human lives?" I asked.

"Well, I will tell you if you want to hear the story. I reckon there's time enough before we are able to get out of this."

I settled myself in the absent stoker's seat and prepared to listen. "It wasn't such a long time back," said the engineer, "only a year ago last spring. I was running this very train, and this very engine—old 449. My stoker was Jim Meade, the same fellow as I have got now. You can see him over there leaning up against the telegraph office.

"Jim's a good boy, but he's very superstitious; believes in ghosts, dreams and warnings. I used to laugh at his fancies, but I don't make so much fun of him as I did—not since we saw the 'Woman in Black.'

"We were timed to leave M—— about 1 o'clock in the morning, and to arrive in S—— about 6 o'clock. On the night when the thing took place a fearful storm of wind and rain had been raging since early evening, and was at the height of its fury when I started from the engine shed.

"It was about midnight and the wind seemed to sweep clear round and through the buildings. It was terribly dismal. Jim was there, and the engine was all ready, so, after getting my working clothes on, I ran the engine down to the station. Our train, the vestibule limited, was an hour late. I gave the engine a thorough oiling and made sure that all was in order.

"As we sat in the cab we could hear the storm raging outside, while the rain, driven by the gusts of wind, beat fiercely against the windows.

"'It's going to be a bad run, Frank,' Jim said. 'I wish we were in S——, safe and sound.'

"I laughed. 'What makes you feel so terribly glum, Jim?' I said.

"'Oh,' said he, 'I feel creepy, somehow. Seems like there's something terrible going to happen. I can feel it in my bones.'

"I laughed again. 'You got a little wet coming over, I guess, Jim,' said I. 'And now the sound of the wind isn't very encouraging, that's a fact.'

"To tell the truth, I was a little nervous myself, notwithstanding my easy way of treating Jim's notion.

"Presently our train came in, long and heavy, consisting mainly of sleepers. It used to make me nervous to know that the lives of hundreds of my fellow men were in my keeping, but now I think nothing of it. That night I was nervous. What if the frightful storm had made a signalman careless, or if a rail had been loosened by the settling of the track somewhere? On these fast trains a man must rely on the vigilance of the employees, for in order to keep to time he must run at such good speed that often he cannot see a signal before he is upon it.

"But I laughed at myself for my fears as I backed down and coupled on the train. I set the brakes, and found everything in good order.

"By and by the little gong above my head clanged sharply, and with a puff and hiss of escaping steam we were off into the night and storm, rattling over junctions, past signal lights, and between long lines of carriages till, with a roar and a rumble, we rushed over the long iron bridge and away through the hills, waking their slumbering echoes with our shrill whistle.

"Then I pulled the throttle wide open, and the clank and roar soon settled into a hum, for old 449 was doing her best, and we were making fifty miles an hour.

"The darkness was intense, save where the headlight, an electric device, cast its funnel of light and gloom. Jim had a big fire, and kept steam up to a high pressure, so that we fairly flew past sleeping hamlets and still farm houses.

At our first watering station I made sure that all was working smoothly, while Jim inspected the headlight. The station master handed out the orders, which showed that the line was clear as far as our next stopping place. On we went.

"The darkness grew more intense, if possible, while the wind shrieked by. The rain became more blinding, till nothing could be distinguished in the gray murk which enveloped us.

"Suddenly through the mist and rain I saw looming right up in front of us the gigantic figure of a woman wrapped in a long, black mantle, which seemed to flutter in the wind. She waved great spectral arms about in swift, twisting movements. As I stood looking in horror, the figure vanished with a final wave of the arms.

"I was too much astonished and stupefied even to make a movement of my hand toward the throttle. At that moment Jim had been bending over the fire. As he looked up he exclaimed:

"'Halloa, Frank. What's up? You look as though you had seen a ghost.'

"I did not answer. My mind was too full of the strange figure I had perceived.

"We were now nearing Rock Creek, where there is a bridge over a deep creek. I felt more nervous than ever. We dashed around the curve and whizzed by Rock Creek station, which is only a mile from the bridge. As we passed I glanced at the steam gauge for an instant. A cry from Jim caused me to turn quickly toward him. He sat rigid, his eyes large and staring. His jaw dropped, the very picture of terror. He pointed with a shaking finger out into the darkness. I turned and looked, and then I began myself to shake. There on the metals was the same hideous figure of a woman outlined on a background of light from the engine, now motionless, now whirling in a witch dance, but all the time motioning us back.

"'Frank,' gasped Jim, but scarcely above a whisper, 'don't go over the bridge. Don't go, for heaven's sake! Don't until you are sure it's safe.'

"I suppose I was pretty badly scared. At any rate, I put on the brake for all I was worth. I couldn't have resisted the impulse to stop the train.

"As we came to a stop I could hear the roar of the water in Rock Creek, just ahead. I stepped out of the cab, and met the guard coming up.

"'What's the matter? What's the matter?' he asked impatiently.

"I felt decidedly foolish. There was no gigantic woman to be seen now. Nothing could be made out more than a few feet away in the blinding storm.

"'Well,' said I, 'we've seen something. I don't know what it is—seemed like it was a great black ghost that was waving its arms and warning us not to go forward.'

"The guard looked at me curiously. 'Are you crazy, Frank?' he said. 'I should think you were. But we're so near the Bridge we'll take a look at it.'

"We took our lanterns and went ahead, leaving Jim with the engine. He looked frightened to death. But I tell you we hadn't gone five rods before we stopped in horror.

"There at our feet lay a black chasm, filled with the roar of the river, as swollen with the spring rains, it dashed down toward the lake. The bridge was washed away.

"Only a few splinters of wood and twisted iron clung to the abutment, while now, far out over the blackness, that awful black figure of a woman danced again on the thin air, relieved against the shaft of light that the headlight threw.

"It was flinging its arms about as if in wild glee. The guard stared at the chasm and then at me.

"'Was that the thing you saw when you stopped the train?' he asked.

"'Yes.'

"'Well, it's something more than luck that saved us to-night, Frank.'

"We went back slowly to the train, feeling very queer and thankful, too, I can assure you. Several passengers had come running forward by this time. Among them was a young fellow from Chicago, about 18 years old, who was smarter than the whole of us, as it turned out.

"When he was told of the woman in black he turned and looked at the locomotive headlight. Then he ran up toward it. I looked up as he did so, and I saw a peculiar spot on the glass.

"'There's your woman in black,' said the boy.

"And there it was, sure enough—that same moth miller that you see there in the frame. He was clinging to the inside of the glass. As I tapped on the glass the creature flew back and lighted on the reflector.

"That's the whole story, sir. The moth, by fluttering on the glass just in front of the illuminator, had produced a great black shadow like that of a cloaked woman darting in front of us, and when he flapped his wings in his vain attempt to sail out through the glass, he gave his mysterious shadow the appearance of waving the arms wildly.

"Then when he flew back out of the direct shine of the light, the figure disappeared, of course.

"We never knew just how he got in there, but no doubt it happened when Jim went to fix the light at the pumping station.

"Anyhow, he saved our lives by scaring us with that woman in black.

"So you see why I keep the moth in the frame. It's to remind me of the way we were saved that night. Yes, you may call it accidental, but I call it Providential."—Pearson's Weekly.

Care of Gold Fish.

Gold-fish should never be taken in the hand, but should be removed, when necessary, by means of a small net made of mosquito netting. They may be fed with anything that they will eat, but what they do not eat should be taken out of the water. They generally die from handling, starvation, or impure water.

Lokal-Nachrichten aus der alten Heimath.

Aus der Rheinpfalz.

Speyer. Ein dreijähriges Kind lief an der Rheinstation in einen rangirenden Güterzug und wurde von der Lokomotive zu Boden geworfen. Als der ganze Zug über das Kind hinweggelaufen war und die entsetzten Zuschauer einen zerfetzten Leichnam zu finden glaubten, stellte es sich heraus, daß das Kind außer einigen unbedeutenden Hautabschürfungen am Kopfe, die ihm der Aschenkasten der Lokomotive zugefügt hatte, keinen Schaden erlitten hatte.

Duttweiler. Hier wurden drei Landstreicher verhaftet, von denen einer bei einem Streithandel den anderen beschuldigte, er sei der Mörder Disques von Mannheim. Vor einigen Monaten wurde nämlich der junge Kaufmann Disque aus Mannheim im Walde bei Altlußheim von Landstreichern lebensgefährlich verletzt und ausgeplündert, doch ist derselbe glücklicher Weise jetzt wieder völlig hergestellt.

Württemberg.

Stuttgart. Die Frage des Rathhausneubaues hier ist nun endlich zu einem definitiven Abschluß gelangt, nachdem die bürgerlichen Kollegien einen Vertrag mit den ausführenden preisgekrönten Architekten Vollmer und Jassoy-Berlin abgeschlossen haben. Den getroffenen Vereinbarungen gemäß soll das neue Rathhaus am 1. Oktober 1903 vollständig dem Betriebe übergeben werden.—In der städtischen Gewerbehalle wurde dieser Tage eine internationale Katzenausstellung abgehalten.

Heilbronn. Neulich Nachts wurde der Posten am Pulvermagazin überfallen. Der Posten gab auf die Angreifer mehrere Schüsse ab, worauf sie die Flucht ergriffen. Zu gleicher Zeit wurde das in der Nähe befindliche Wachlokal von anderen Burschen mit Steinen beworfen, wie es scheint in der Absicht, die Aufmerksamkeit der Wachmannschaft von dem Angriff auf den Wachposten abzulenken.

Maulbronn. Das jetzt in eine evangelische Bildungsanstalt umgewandelte berühmte Kloster hat durch den Abbruch mehrerer unschöner neuerer Gebäude sowie durch stilgerechten Ausbau von Wohnungen und Gelassen eine überraschende Einheitlichkeit des Gesammtanblicks erhalten. Die Anbringung von elektrischem Licht in der Winterkirche ist ein entschuldbares und begreifliches Zugeständniß an die praktischen Anforderungen der Neuzeit.

Pfullingen. In Unterhausen ereignete sich beim Fabrikneubau der Gebrüder Burkhardt ein schweres Unglück. In Folge Erdrutsches wurden acht am Bau beschäftigte Männer theilweise verschüttet; zwei von Oberhausen gebürtige Familienväter wurden als Leichen hervorgezogen.

Ulm. In einer hiesigen Wirthschaft wurde der Unteroffizier Söfemann der 3. Kompagnie des hiesigen Fußartillerie-Bataillons Nr. 13, gebürtig aus Hannover, von einem Civilisten erstochen. Söfemann wollte bei Streithändeln abwehren. Er erhielt mehrere sehr gefährliche Stiche in den Unterleib und einen Stich in den Arm und ist im Militärlazareth seinen Verletzungen erlegen. Der Thäter, ein hiesiger Schreinergehilfe, wurde verhaftet. Auch der Wirth und ein Bauburſche wurden gestochen.

Baden.

Karlsruhe. Der Bürgerausschuß genehmigte einstimmig die Einführung der Schwemmkanalisation, mit einem Gesammtkostenaufwand von 1,159,000 Mark, die aus Anlehensmitteln bestritten werden.

Oberharmersbach. Der Landwirth Kornmaier hat seinen 12jährigen Stiefbruder Stephan Kern ermordet. Nach der That durchwühlte er verschiedene Zimmer des Wohnhauses, warf Alles durcheinander, um den Anschein zu erwecken, als sei ein Einbruch im Hause verübt worden, und um dadurch den Verdacht der Thäterschaft von sich abzulenken.

Offenburg. Ein Opfer der Submission ist der Glasermeister Luft in Freiburg geworden. Er hatte für den hiesigen Kasernenbau die Glaserarbeit zu solch' niederem Preise eingegeben und erhalten, daß er damit nach dem Urtheile jedes Sachverständigen nicht bestehen konnte. Vor wenigen Wochen hat nun Luft Konkurs gemacht und ist jetzt unter Zurücklassung seiner Familie nach Amerika geflüchtet.

Pforzheim. In dem benachbarten Brezingen sind 12 Wohngebäude und 8 Scheunen niedergebrannt. Mehrere Feuerwehrleute wurden verletzt.

Mr. John Lindsay, of 424 West Front street, says: "From the effects of a bad cold which I contracted some years ago, I have been troubled more or less with attacks of backache which has caused me a great deal of suffering. My work compels me to do a great deal of stooping and bending forward which aggravated the trouble. At night I had to keep changing about first from one position then to another trying to find some way that I could free myself from the pain but it remained the same no matter what position I assumed. Doan's Kidney Pills were reccommended to me by a friend who had used them and I got a box from L. W. Randolph's drug store. I found them just as represented and they relieved me in a short time. I can reccommend Doan's Kidney Pills to anyone wanting a safe, reliable and convenient medicine to act direct on the kidneys."

CHAPTER XII.

As Elizabeth travelled out of London with Feo that sunny June day, she felt her heart grow faint. She had overrated her courage, but then it had been to a great extent the courage of ignorance, for, as Bertha Peile had said so truly, the girl had lived so many years in one unvarying groove that change of any kind was likely, despite her youth, to prove a great undertaking to her. She had borne herself as calmly as she could in the interview with Mr. Saville; but her face had grown very pale when she bade farewell to the servants; and she had driven away from the shabby old house in Bloomsbury with a subdued sensation of regret that was something akin to the grief she gave so sincerely to her grandmother's memory.

Elizabeth had been grateful to Feo for her cheery presence. Though Feo had had only an occasional place in the old life, still she had been a small part of it, and the girl clung to every bit of the past, now that she was on the point of breaking with it. There was a pale, wistful, pathetic look on her face as she alighted at the entrance of Abbey Lodge, a square, comfortable, unpretentious house, its red brick walls partially covered with ivy, where Mrs. Procter lived and kept her school, and her heart sank still lower as she followed Feo in through the large doorway. Indications of home and the comfort of a home were, however, perceptible as soon as she passed into the house. Through a door that stood wide open Elizabeth saw a big garden full of trees and a smooth greensward, and sundry young figures flitting to and fro, while laughter and merry voices rang out on the summer air. The girl's own buried youth seemed to catch a fleeting contagion from the light-hearted gaiety that greeted her for the first time in her life; then she turned with a start. Two hands clasped her own, and two kind gray eyes looked into her shadowed young face as the music of a warm, low, motherly voice fell upon her ears.

"And this is my dear Margaret Druro's little girl? How glad I am to see you at last! How often I have wanted to have you with me!" The speaker, an old lady with silvered hair and a sweet, gracious manner, had drawn the girl's startled face towards her, and had kissed the trembling lips several times. "Welcome, Elizabeth, my dear," she said tenderly—"welcome to your home!"

The speaker's words, her sympathy, the quick comfort that seemed to pass from those old hands to her own, touched Elizabeth instantly. Her eyes were full of tears as she gave back the kiss of greeting—she could not speak; and Lady Feo had to rattle on merrily till the girl recovered her composure.

The strange, unexpected pleasure that came to Elizabeth in that moment of her first entrance into her new home deepened with each hour that passed. Indeed, she scarcely knew how the hours did pass, for Mrs. Procter at once took up the task of ministering to the girl's overwrought and sorrowful heart.

"Make her happy, if you can," Lady Feo said to the old school mistress, as at last she tore herself away from Elizabeth. "I believe you will succeed," Feo added; "already she seems to understand you. There is as much to be done to relieve the girl's heart as to comfort it. I am afraid I don't express myself very clearly; but at least I can assure you that, if you can give Elizabeth even a little of the brightness she ought to have, I shall bless the day she came to you!"

"I shall try to deserve your blessing, Lady Feodora," Mrs. Procter answered, with gentle quaintness; and Feo parted from Elizabeth greatly comforted, although her own disappointment had in no way abated.

The memory of that first evening she spent at Abbey Lodge School was one that remained with Elizabeth during all her after life. Mrs. Procter led her into the gardens and introduced her to the elder girls and to such of the governesses as were present; then she walked slowly under the trees with her arm within Elizabeth's, pointing out the many beauties of her flowers, and mentioning to the girl some of the little duties she would like her to perform.

"I am going to have you out in the air as much as possible," the wise old lady said presently, when the young people had left the gardens and she and Elizabeth sat alone under the trees. "I want to bring some color into your cheeks. And you are to eat heartily, if you please, Elizabeth, for I always pride myself on the plumpness of my pupils; and you are scarcely what I should call plump, you know!"

Elizabeth laughed and clasped one of her arms in its black sleeve. It was certainly very thin! She sat for a moment looking about her; and Mrs. Procter looked at her in silence and tried to keep the tears out of her eyes as she did so.

"Poor Charlotte!" she said to herself. "What a treasure she had close to her all these years! And how different life might have been to her and to this little girl had her anger with destiny been tempered with philosophy and justice!"

After a while Elizabeth again looked at the old lady; and there was something new in the girl's expression which made her very beautiful and brought a pang of remembrance to the kind old eyes fixed upon her. For, sitting there in her old black frock, with her great wistful eyes set in her delicate face like rare jewels, Elizabeth seemed to bring back again the beauty of the girl who had lived and sung and laughed under those same trees a score of years before—that very Margaret whose child she was, yet whose name brought a weight of sorrow to her daughter's heart.

From that first hour of her sojourn under Anne Proctor's roof the work of transformation was begun in Elizabeth's heart and mind. She passed from one day to the next in a calm, even way that yet had nothing of monotony in it. Indeed there was always something new, something interesting to meet her every day. She was a little shy at first at mingling with the girls; yet, as it was open to her to join any class that was being held, or to study with any of the special masters that came to the house, she gradually lost her shyness. There was something attractive to her in the busy routine of the day's work; and she only regretted that the term would shortly come to an end and the holidays begin.

Mrs. Proctor kept her as fully occupied as possible. At the same time she gave the girl every freedom; and her one delight was to turn Elizabeth out of the house, either for a long walk in the early morning hours before the sun was too hot, or for a turn in the rose-garden at even-time to minister to her beloved plants, and gather health and strength from the fragrant air and quiet communion with Nature in its sweetest hour.

Miss Peile came over immediately to see Elizabeth, and they instantly became friends.

"Feo told me I was to make you love me, but not too much," Bertha Peile said, with amazement in her short-sighted eyes as she peered from under her mushroom-hat at the beautiful young girl before her. She saw nothing of the shabby old gown; she saw only the face that was so young, so sweet, and so interesting. "I hope you will love me a little, Elizabeth!" she said half wistfully. "And you must come and see me very often. It is too far for you to walk, but I will send over for you. Anne Proctor will let you come to me, I am sure. I am nearly always alone, except when my boy runs down for half a day."

Elizabeth responded warmly to Miss Peile's friendly overtures; but she did not pay a visit to Speede for some time. She had a dread of meeting Richard Saville there or elsewhere.

"I must not pay visits now. I want to work as hard as I can," she explained to Mrs. Proctor.

Nevertheless she saw Bertha Peile constantly. The funny old-fashioned pony-carriage from Speede, with its fat gray pony, was always coming to a stand-still in front of Abbey Lodge; and, whenever Elizabeth made her way, at Mrs. Proctor's bidding, into the village High Street, she was sure to come across the plump little figure of Tony's aunt as she trotted about, with a cheery word for everybody, and something more substantial for such as were poor and suffering.

Feo, too, did not let a week pass before running down to pay a visit to Elizabeth, and Gregory had accompanied his wife. It was with as much amazement as pleasure that both noted the remarkable change in the girl.

"Why, you must be a fairy!" Lady Feo cried to Mrs. Proctor. "What have you done to Elizabeth? She looks another creature!"

There had been some little business for Gregory to transact with Elizabeth—business that Mr. Saville had handed over to him before leaving town; and something of the old pained look returned to Elizabeth's face as Gregory uttered Richard Saville's name, and she was reminded once again of all that had only too recently hurt her so much. But the shadow did not last, and her whole manner was so changed, so full of hopefulness and happiness, that Feodora Latimar returned to town with her mind at rest for the first time about Elizabeth. She was also full of suppressed excitement, for the girl had charged her with a commission, and all Feo's pent-up generous desires had at last a chance of being gratified.

"I want some clothes, Feo," Elizabeth had said as they sat together talking. "I find I ought to have bought several things before I left London. I—I am really hardly respectable; and, now that Gregory has paid me my money, I think I must spend some of it on clothes."

"And you want me to get them?" Feo asked, instantaneously delighted at such a prospect.

"If you don't mind being bothered. I would ask Mrs. Proctor to do it; but she is so busy, and—"

"And, if you asked any one but me, I would slay you!" Feo cried; and she plunged into the subject without further ado. "You must give me one of your old frocks for a pattern; and, Elizabeth, you must have something white this hot weather!"

"I want something thin," Elizabeth said. "You will please get cheap things, Feo dear; I can't afford more than ten pounds."

Lady Feo managed to restrain the feelings that threatened to overcome her upon hearing this statement.

"Very well," she said meekly; and forthwith hastened back to town.

For the following week or so Feo became so grave and preoccupied, and withal so mysterious, that Gregory was quite concerned about her.

"What are you trying to do, Feo?" he asked one day. And Feo, with a grave look, replied very solemnly—

"I am deceiving the innocent!" Her deception, as she went on to explain, took the form of buying an entire wardrobe for Elizabeth at the cost of ten pounds.

"It looks so much," she said to herself, when everything was ready and the things were put into a box. "I know she will never doubt me as far as the quality of the things goes; but the quantity is another matter. I must compress them somehow."

She arrived with a very large trunk at Abbey Lodge for her second visit, and was troubled with a certain amount of trepidation; but a brilliant idea came to her at last.

"I will say that they cost two pounds more!" she said to herself; and she felt triumphantly wicked.

Elizabeth accepted the statement absolutely; and Lady Feo pocketed the twelve pounds she received with a sigh of relief and a feeling of admiration for her own cleverness.

"You must wear that white gown on Aunt Bertha's birthday, the twenty-sixth of July. There are going to be grand doings at Speede, you know, Elizabeth. Tony will make speeches. By-the-way, you have never been to see Aunt Bertha yet! She is a dear old soul, and she adores you!"

"I am working very hard," Elizabeth said hurriedly. She did not want to speak of Richard Saville if she could possibly avoid doing so. "Feo, I wish I could be all my life as I am now; the work is so beautiful to me!"

Feo was sitting on the floor in front of the big trunk, watching Elizabeth arranging her possessions.

"And you are really happy, Elizabeth," she questioned gently—"really and truly happy?"

"I am really happy, Feo! Can you believe it? Does it not seem like a dream?" She hung up her dresses one by one, then came forward with a little of the old sadness in her eyes. "Does it seem cruel to grannie to say I am so happy now?" she asked wistfully.

"Cruel?" Lady Feo scrambled to her feet. Her opinion about old Mrs. Latimar had not been softened by death. "As if it could ever be possible for you to be cruel! Although Gregory would have me believe that Richard Saville thinks you are. Cruel? No! I will tell you what I believe, Elizabeth," Feo said, turning traitor to her convictions for the sake of so good a cause—"I firmly believe that if grannie could know you were so happy here, she would be glad—yes—glad! And, really, if one stops to think, it seems as if she had deliberately planned for you to come here, because she must have known it was the very place to make you happy!"

Elizabeth came up to Feo and kissed her eagerly.

"Feo, you have just said what I have said to myself. Since I have been with Mrs. Proctor I have felt this must be the truth. And, oh, Feo dear, it has given me so much comfort! Indeed," the girl added earnestly, "in everything that is around me now I see nothing to stand between me and a peaceful, happy life. I—I was afraid Mr. Saville would press that horrible business of the money; but—"

Feo's lip curled.

"Mr. Saville shall not trouble you—that I promise you. You know he has gone abroad; even Tony does not seem to know where he is."

With the waning of July the big old house would be empty, save for Mrs. Proctor and Elizabeth. Just before the end of the term a grand entertainment was organized by the pupils, in the arrangements for which Elizabeth was in great request. Her little feet took many a willing walk into the village, where she was by now quite a familiar figure. Most of the pupils already worshipped her with the enthusiasm that is peculiar to school-girls, and the result of daily, hourly contact with so many youthful natures was that Elizabeth herself was transformed almost into a child again.

It was on one of her many errands to the village that she at last saw Antony Peile; he was on horseback, talking to the blacksmith, when Elizabeth entered the little High Street, and she had passed him hurriedly in the sunshine without being seen. Her first impression was one of gladness at sight of him. How happy dear Miss Peile would be to have him once again at Speede! But, as he glanced backwards from under the screen of her sunshade, Elizabeth's pleasure soon died, for, though he was smiling as he talked to the old man, there was a worn, haggard look on his face which seemed accentuated by the bright summer light, and which was the look of one who was evidently very ill either in mind or body. Elizabeth found herself transacting her business rather mechanically. She was detained quite a quarter of an hour, and she did not expect to see the young Baronet again when at last she passed out of the small post-office.

Elizabeth's face flushed suddenly as she realized that she was to see Antony after all. He had dismounted, and was making his way through the little village street, having a smile or a word for every one he met, and stopping occasionally to shake an outstretched hand or speak kindly to a little child. He gave a great start as he suddenly looked up and saw Elizabeth. At first he could not realize that it was she; his last impression of her had been so sombre. Sweet, delicate, and beautiful she had been, but sad—so sad! Now she was quite different. Her eyes and lips were smiling, her cheeks were tinged with color, her hair shone in the sunlight with wondrous gleams of gold. In the thin white gown that clung about her lissom figure she looked as if she were part of the summer day itself—a vision that would vanish as the sun's rays passed away. Antony seized both her hands.

"Elizabeth!" he said, the name coming to his lips involuntarily. He was only aware that he was looking into her eyes once again, drinking in their sweet enchantment; he only knew that he was holding her hands in his, and that a wonderful joy had risen in his heart, thrusting out the dark phantom of trouble and remorse, and holding him in a spell so exquisite that a lifetime of happiness seemed to centre in that one short moment.

A MESMERIST'S TALE.

"Have you ever seen any trouble come of mesmerising," said big Tom Logan, when half-a-dozen of us were sitting around Signor Trepelli, the mesmerist, in the bar of the Woolpack.

"Yes," he said slowly, "I have once, and will tell you about it, if you will let me go then to write my letters."

"Good man, Signor! Say, boss! fill the Signor's glass, will you?" And so the mesmerist began his story:

It was in Mauritius, three years ago—or was it four?—last March. Anyhow, people went mad over my mesmerism, and everyone in La Savanne was practising or trying to cultivate mesmerism. Just at that time came the strange accident in which Paulo Roderique, the sole representative of the oldest Creole family in the island, saved the life of Colonel Lefevre's daughter. It appears he was sailing his little yacht outside the Grande Porte, when the colonel's yacht crossed his bow, and Miss Lefevre, in leaning over to reach a piece of seaweed, fell overboard by the side of the Creole's yacht. Paulo Roderique had sprung after her in an instant, and her safety seemed assured. The water there is as clear as crystal, and just as the Creole reached the surface, the colonel's party were horrified to see the long dark shadow of a shark close beside Miss Lefevre. Well, this is not my story anyhow, but Roderique had his hunting knife, and when he succeeded in pushing the French girl to within reach of her father's hands the water was crimson all round, and the shark's blunt nose was touching the Creole's foot. So he had to dive again, and before he was finally pulled aboard the launch they say he killed that 18-foot shark.

The Colonel was a stickler for laws of caste, but, on the other hand, the Roderiques had been the proudest family in the island, and Paulo was a splendid specimen of a man, besides being very wealthy and exceedingly popular. So when, a month after the accident, Paulo and the golden-haired French girl came to ask his consent to their betrothal, the Colonel had to forget the faint purple tinge in Paulo's finger nails, and welcome him as a son-in-law.

Then came the Comte Despard, fresh from Paris, on a visit to Colonel Lefevre's bungalow. Perhaps you guess what followed, and it is true enough. The Creole's fury grew deeper every day, and his servants said it was risky work to speak to him. It was Paris versus the sunny South, and Paris won.

The next afternoon I was engaged to supervise and manage a sort of hypnotism seance to be held at a garden party given by Madame Renee. The Colonel, his daughter, and Comte Despard were there, and it was known that Paulo Roderique had been invited. Under the circumstances, however, everyone was very much surprised to see him walking across the tennis lawn towards the terrace just as the party had assembled there for a few experiments in the popular craze of the day. There was an awkward pause as the handsome young Creole, with a black shadow on his face, bent over the hostess' chair to apologise for his late arrival.

"Madame, it is my fate to be late in most things, and tradition hath it that my family is prompt and certain in one thing only."

"And that, Monsieur——"

"Is the payment in full of debts of honor, Madame."

The atmosphere was becoming unbearable, yet the remark which next broke the nervous silence was a sadly unfortunate one. A young English girl from Port Louis said: "Are we not to have any thought-reading, Madame?"

So lots were drawn, as the custom was, and chance directed that Comte Despard should be the first subject; while Paulo Roderique and a young French resident were to act as directing mediums. The Comte having left the terrace, it was decided that Paulo and the young Frenchman should on his return cause him to pluck a certain lemon from a tree by the side of the terrace. Now the young Frenchman had no force of any kind about him, but Paulo, as I knew from previous experience, had, if he know how to direct it, far more magnetic power than myself.

Scarcely had the Creole's fingers touched the Comte's white forehead when I felt that something serious would happen. Paulo ignored the other medium, and with flashing eyes and nostrils distended, he pressed the fingers of both his trembling hands on his rival's head. Beads of perspiration rolled from both their faces, and the wondering guests stared in amazement to see the Comte Despard's knees bending and his body quivering, as though struggling with some unseen enemy. The Comte was enduring anguish, I knew, but I was not prepared for the piercing cry—half scream, half roar—which left his lips as he turned from the Creole and sprang towards Marie Lefevre. I caught one glimpse of a look of hateful triumph on Paulo's dark face, and then rushing forward, as a woman's cry rang out, I was just in time to receive the French girl's falling figure in my arms.

"Well?" gasped big Tom Logan, as the Signor stopped speaking.

"Ah, what would you?" rejoined the Italian, raising his glass. "She was dead, poor girl! He had stabbed her to the heart, and no one saw the knife pass from the Creole's hand to his. But Paulo's knife it was, and mesmerism has never been practised in Mauritius since, for the Comte died by his own hand that night, and Paulo Roderique, the proudest Creole in the island, went to penal servitude on his own confession."

SPORTING.

AROUND THE BASES.

The most exciting ball game of the season was played last Saturday between Stirling and Berkeley Heights for the championship of the Passaic Valley League. Both teams put up their best nines and played great ball. Stirling failed to connect with Rogers' curves, while Berkeley batted hard and won. The feature of the game was the three-base hit of McKenna. The batteries were Rogers and Block for Berkeley; Swain and Carrot for Stirling. Rogers struck out 10 and Swain 8.

The Freshman baseball nine at Princeton University this year is one of the strongest in the history of the institution. There were thirty-five candidates who tried for the team, among whom was Arthur W. Lederer, of this city. Lederer was one of the fortunate ones to be selected and played right field on the Freshman team in the contests with the other classes. The annual game with the Sophomores was played Wednesday afternoon and the Freshmen won by a score of 6 to 4. The Freshman team defeated the Juniors 8 to 3, and were defeated in turn by the Seniors 8 to 0. Lederer is now one of the candidates for the 'varsity team.

ON THE GRIDIRON.

The Alis team defeated the Westfield Juniors at Westfield Saturday morning by a score of 6 to 0. Fred Overton made the touchdown after a run of 50 yards. Roy Radford kicked the goal.

The eleven that will represent Plainfield's crack little junior organization, the Alis team, on the gridiron this year has practically been selected. The boys are practicing almost every afternoon and are getting in good shape for the season. Hal Phillips, brother of Roy T. Phillips, the organizer and captain of the original Alis team, is captain. Albert Finch, an old Alis player, is acting as manager and coach of the team. The make-up of the team is as follows: Right end, Herbert Cathcart; right tackle, LeRoy Radford; right guard, Charles Fisk; centre, Gus Fisk; left guard, Donald A. McGee; left tackle, John Phillips; left end, Ralph Schoonmaker; quarter back, Harold Phillips; right half back, Fred Overton; left half back, Harry Cuming; full back, Homer Smith.

Afterward Mr. Jones was given an ovation and taken out to dinner.

REED'S MAN FOR SHERIFF

A. Hegeman, Jr., was chosen chairman of the committee on resolutions.

It was evident that the Thompson people feared to risk a recess before the nominations were made, and so Lawyer Griggs, who acted as the spokesman for the Somerville leader, moved that the convention proceed at once to the nomination of candidates This was opposed by the Reed delegates, but they were defeated by one vote.

The nominations for the office of Sheriff were then called for. Bridgewater nominated Henry A. Green, Franklin C. V. N. Suydam, and Hillsboro H. P. V. VanDoren. Mr. Hegeman seconed the nomination of VanDoren in a rattling speech, and John C. Cooper, of Warren, seconded the nomination of Suydam. The voting will not be commenced till after the recess.

For the Assembly nomination Joshua Ludlow, of Bedminister, nominated C. McMichael, of Bernards, and Robert M. Clark, of North Plainfield, nominated E. E. Cooper, of Warren.

Lewis Reed, of Somerville, and Henry DeMott, of North Plainfield, were nominated for coroners, there being two of these officers to be chosen.

By this time it was 12:45 o'clock, and the convention adjourned to meet in Somerset hall at 2 o'clock, when the voting will be commenced.

During the recess there is all sorts of wire pulling taking place.

It is believed that Reed and Thompson have come to some kind of an understanding, and that VanDoren will be named for Sheriff and Cooper for the Assembly, and that the leadership of the county will be shared between Reed and Thompson.

A MATHEMATICAL MULE.

He Knew When He Had Made the Proper Number Of Trips.

A writer in Lippincott's Magazine tells a rather remarkable mule story. The animal in question was used to reinforce the regular teams, being hitched beside them on a certain steep incline on one of the Cincinnati street railroads.

The mule made a certain number of trips in the forenoon (I have forgotten the number, but will say fifty for the sake of convenience), and a like number in the afternoon, resting for an hour at noon. As soon as it completed its fiftieth trip it marched away to the stable without orders from the driver.

To show that it was not guided by the sound of the factory whistles and bells, the following remarkable action on the part of this animal is vouched for by the superintendent of the line:

On a certain occasion, during a musical festival, the mule was transferred to the night shift, and the very instant it completed its usual number of shifts it started for the stables. The combined efforts of several men were necessary to make it return to its duty.

At night there were no bells or whistles to inform the mule that "quitting time" had come; it had counted the trips, and having finished its quota, it thought that the time for rest and food had arrived.

How Peking is Lighted.

Peking is advanced. So at least one gathers from the Peking and Tientsin Times, which announces that a couple of gas lamps and three petroleum lamps now illuminate the capital of the Celestial kingdom. This unwonted departure, however, is not due to native enterprise. The gas lights are set up in front of the Russian embassy, while the three lesser luminaries shine for the benefit of the customers of the Russo-Chinese bank. Throughout the rest of the city wayfarers still have to follow their noses as soon as darkness sets in.

Not So Expensive After All.

"Golf is such an expensive game that I really can't afford to play," sighed Mrs. Johnson.

"That's where you make a great mistake," said Mrs. Bowser. "I found it a great economy. I don't have to keep a nurse any more, as the children are always on the links with me; we don't have any more doctors' bills; and besides all that, I don't have to buy any more expensive delicacies to tempt my husband's appetite. He talks so much about his game at dinner that he doesn't know what he's eating."—Harper's Bazar.

"George, Aunt Maria is very angry at you for saying that she eats too much."

"Dear, dear, I didn't say anything of the kind."

"What did you say, George?"

"All I said was that she had an appetite like a mud dredge."—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Some New Restrictions.

Last year's racing season was marked by a number of accidents to riders. As a consequence the latter feel that the Racing Board of the L. A. W., in its revision of the race rules, should restrict the number of riders in trial and final heats. It is admitted that some of the new tracks will admit of large fields, but a ruling on the number of starters should be made to conform with the size of the tracks. It is seldom that noted professional riders meet with accidents. The reason of this is apparent. They compete in open events, where the entries are small. It is in the novice and class races where mishaps are frequent. It is at local meets, where the entries are large and the fields of starters inexperienced, that chances of accidents are the greatest. So frequent was the list of casualties at some meetings last year that the promoters kept a physician present to look after injured riders. The possibility of accident, according to experienced riders, is comparatively small so long as there is no overcrowding in races, but the running of big fields on small tracks is a hazardous undertaking.

The N. C. U. of England intends to take a firm stand in relation to racing on public highways this year. A new rule has been formulated, as follows:

No licensed rider may race or pace in any contest upon the road, whether the race be open, club or local. The term "taking part in" applies to officials acting in connection with such a race, such as the starter, judge, timekeeper and checkers. By "pace record attempt" is meant any paced attempt at world's record, amateur record, place-to-place, club or any time record. The rules does not interfere with any rider or riders, (paced or unpaced) going for "standard medals," at certain distances, offered by their clubs. Any ride for standard medals must be for standard medals only; and if there be a special prize given to the first man of any such group of ostensible medal hunters starting on the same day the ride becomes a race, and is therefore an infringement of the rule. In case it should appear that an attempt is in any way being made to evade this rule, the committee will deal with each case on its merits, according to the spirit of the rule.

There is a general feeling that the L. A. W. could take similar steps, and earn the commendation of its members.

Lord Wolseley and the Bike.

Lord Wolseley, commander-in-chief of the British army, recently predicted that the day will come, and that shortly, when large bodies of cyclists will be recognized as integral parts of every army in the field. This being the opinion of an officer occupying so high a position it is not surprising that England is well provided with military cyclists. Colonel Savile, who was one of the leaders in the movement to introduce the wheel into the army, met with much discouragement when he first advocated the innovation, but his earnestness of purpose finally won his point and the experiment was made. Nearly every volunteer infantry battalion now has a cycling section. It is said a greater degree of excellence has been attained by the volunteers than among the men of the regular army. The bicycle was first introduced into the English army in 1881.

Experiments have been carried so far in Italy that tandems, triplets, and quads" are now being tried. High speed is desired for the courier service, and recent experiments under the eye of an officer convinced him that for long journeys in which speed was essential the "quad" was the machine best adapted for the work.

How a Home-Made Crate is Made.

An inexpensive crate for the protection of bicycles in transporation, whether in a baggage car or expressman's truck was recently brought out in England. Wheels are frequently objected to injuries in transportation, causing much annoyance, not on account of the cost of repairs, but because of the delay and inconvenience occasioned. To remedy this state of affairs as much as possible an Englishman built a homelike crate, so to speak, and it seemed to exactly fill the bill. It is described as follows: "It is made of light strips or battens of wood, so enlarged in the centre that the pedals are free to revolve. This enables the bicycle to be wheeled along—an important consideration—instead of being dragged and tossed about in the efforts to carry it. There is a block of wood fixed under the frame on either side, so that the machine can be left anywhere, resting in a nearly vertical position. The frame is hinged at one end, and is thus readily removed, and is supported on the bicycle by a couple of straps. For protection from the weather, a waterproof cover, as shown in an also be used."

MR. SERRELL WRITES OF COUNTY TROLLEY.

Holds It Up as a Monstrous Expense to Taxpayers.

KEAN HAS A GOOD BARGAIN.

DOESN'T MENTION THE PLAINFIELD STREET RAILWAY'S CHANCES.

He Wonders How it is That the Newspapers Have Been Hypnotized—Tries to Make a Comparison That Will Make Taxpayers Believe That They Are to Be Taxed to Death.

To the Editor of The Daily Press:—As the newspapers of Union county seem to be hypnotised by the size of John Kean's so-called munificent offer of $250,000 for a trolley franchise between Elizabeth and Plainfield, that they seem incapable of analyzing the same, and as the tax payers of Union county are likely to be led into error in judging of the merits of this offer through lack of knowledge upon the subject, it seems incumbent upon me at this time to advise them what it means.

Mr. Keans offer of $250,000 is for about 12 miles of road between Elizabeth and Plainfield, and to bring this matter home let us suppose that Mr. Kean applied the county act to Park avenue and that he would like to secure a franchise through Park avenue from Front street to the city line, this distance is about 1-10 the distance covered by his offer from Elizabeth to Plainfield, and he should offer the city of Plainfield $25,000 (a proporionate sum) in cash for a franchise upon Park avenue, upon the following terms and conditions.

The city shall widen Park avenue to a width of 100 feet. Shall at their own expense acquire all the land needed for this purpose, move all the buildings back, and pay all damages occasioned by this work. Shall leave the macadamized drive where it is; shall build a dirt driveway, or bridle path, a cycle path, curb the street and build in the centre a graded right of way through which the railway company can lay its tracks. When the city has accomplished all of the above work and are prepared to turn the road over to Mr. Kean completed from one end to the other, he will pay the city the sum of $25,000 upon the condition that the railway company shall thereafter be exempt from paying anything to the city for the use of the street. If the city fails to carry out this work complete from end to end then the railway company does not have to pay the city anything for the work it has done, unless it is so elect. Mr. Kean offer to the county is not different from this city.

The advantage to the Railway Company in having a graded right of way prepared for them and no paving of any kind to do will be fully $1.50 per lineal foot, which, in Mr. Kean's case, would save fully $100,000 in the cost of construction over a road laid in an ordinary highway.

Mr. Kean can well afford to make the offer he has, as the county cannot collect one cent from him unless they accomplish the entire work. It is not Mr. Kean's money the Freeholders spend, it comes from the pockets of the taxpayers, who must foot all bills until the entire work is completed, must pay all losses if the Freeholders fail to make good a delivery of any portion of the street so sold, and must pay all costs above $250,000. Mr. Kean has very kindly agreed to pay interest charges for ten years upon the cost of the work above $250,000, showing that he believes it will cost more, but the taxpayers must pay the principal. I do not believe the avenue can be widened for less than $500,000. The necessity of appointing commissioners to condemn land has already become apparent, and when lawyers get their hands into the county pocket there is no telling where the cost will stop.

And I believe that when the taxpayers find that they go down into their own pockets to pay for carrying out the scheme of Mr. Philanthropist Kean, there will be thousands of them join the Protective League, already formed in Cranford and Union townships, to fight the payment of these taxes and to hold the Freeholders personally responsible for all debts so incurred. Lemuel Wm. Serrell.

Arranging to Entertain.

A special meeting of Perseverance Lodge, No. 74, K. of P., was held last evening to make arrangements for the meeting next Friday evening, when New Brunswick Lodge, K. of P., will be their guests. At the meeting last evening the initiatory team practiced their work and a committee, of which Joseph Blimm is the chairman, was appointed to look after the details of the entertainment.

AN INDUSTRIAL CHANCE

A BIG FIRE ARMS FACTORY WOULD LOCATE HERE.

Proposition to be Made by the Board of Trade by Which 300 Skilled Mechanics Can be Brought to This City.

Charles H. Hand, chairman of the manufacturers' committee from the Board of Trade, has received a letter from a well-known firm of brokers and bankers doing business on Wall street, in which they state that they would like to consider propositions from the Board of Trade with an idea of locating a factory in this city.

They manufacture guns and fire arms of all descriptions and are desirious of locating their factory in a city where they can have good shipping facilities. At present their factory is located in one of the eastern states, but they are anxious to make a change.

It now remains with the Board of Trade as to whether this concern can be brought to this city. They employ about three hundred men of a good class. If the Board of Trade would interest themselves sufficiently there is no doubt but what this industry would come here. There will be a meeting of the Board of Trade this evening and this matter will be brought up at that time. It is hoped that there will be a large attendance of the members.

JUDGMENT REOPENED.

Further Legal Complications Over a Suit to Recover Wages.

Five times the case of John E. Naylor against Frederick O. Smith and Andrew R. Steven has been before the court and yet it does not seem to be any nearer settlement now than when first tried, several months ago. The suit is for $40.50 on a lien claim. Naylor is a painter and claims that amount is due him for work.

Naylor is represented by Counsellor W. S. Angleman, while Codington & Swackhamer and Charles J. McNabb are the defendants' counsel. Friday the last act in the legal squabble took place when Judge Magie agreed to open the judgment given some time ago if the defendants would pay the costs which now amount to more than the original claim.

The Judge agrred to re-open the judgment if the defendants will file their plea before November 1st, and be ready for trial during the December term.

HER LAST LESSON.

Miss Julia Shinn Will Soon Depart for Foreign Mission Fields.

The regular meeting of the Primary Teachers' Union was held in the Y. M. C. A. building Monday afternoon. The devotional exercises were conducted by Mrs. Powlison. Miss Julia Shinn taught the lesson which was on a missionary subject. Miss Shinn told the members of her intended departure to foreign lands about the first of next month, and she said that it would probably be the last time that she would teach the lesson in the union. After the lesson was taught Mrs. Baker led the discussion which was on a subject regarding Sunday-school library books. There was a large attendance at the meeting and great interest was evidenced.

A SERIES OF TEAS.

Rev. and Mrs. Downey, as well as the ladies of the committee, extend a cordial invitation to all well-wishers of the church.

Dunellen Man Missing.
(Special to The Daily Press.)

Dunellen, October 19—Allan Wilson, of this borough, has disappeared and his friends are wondering what has become of him. He was seen going towards Plainfield a week ago Saturday, but since then his whereabouts has remained a secret. Wilson had just been paid about $125 by the School Board for work done around the schoolhouse yards, and when last seen was on his way to Plainfield to cash the check. Foul play is suspected.

BAD BOY'S CLEVER FRAUD

BOUGHT MEAT AND HAD IT CHARGED TO WEALTHY PEOPLE.

Young Britton's Mother Gave Him Money to Buy Meat But by Working His Scheme He Was Able to Appropriate It.

A young lad named Britton residing with his parents on East Second street, was arrested this morning in Fred Endress' meat market on Front street. It appears that Britton's older brother has been in the habit of going to the market for meat for the house, and the contrived a scheme whereby he was able to appropriate the money for himself. He received money from his mother for meat, and then told his young brother to go to certain markets and get the meat and tell the proprietor it was for some well-to-do family. By doing this the meat would be charged up to the family named and the boys would keep the money.

Monday last the boys worked their scheme all right on Mr. Endress. The youngest brother got the meat and told the butcher it was for Mrs. Paul on Central avenue. The day afterward Mrs. Paul called to settle her bill and found several charges for meat which she had not received. It was then that the scheme was exploded, and a lookout was kept for the boy.

This morning the youngster went to Mr. Endress's market for the purpose of playing his trick, and he was caught. The mother of the boy was sent for, and she was able to make things satisfactory with Mr. Endress, but it is not likely that the boys will try the same scheme again.

NOT SUFFICIENT EVIDENCE.

Justice Mosher Could Not Hold Agnes Hall, Charged With Theft.

Justice Mosher did not hold Agnes Hall, the colored girl whom Mrs. Mary Sabert, of East Third street, accused of stealing $6 Sunday, as there was not sufficient evidence to warrant it. The examination was held yesterday, and then it was shown that Mrs. Sabert had opened her trunk and exhibited the money to her sixteen-year old daughter who soon afterwards disappeared.

The little girl has not been seen since, and the court is inclined to think that she is away having a good time on the money. Agnes Hall happened to be in the house at the time the money was shown, and Mrs. Sabert's suspicions fell upon her at once.

A HEAVY REGISTRATION.

Results of the First Day's Registration in the City.

There are promises of an unusual interest at the coming State election. One sign was the heavy registration in all the wards yesterday. It was the first day of the registration and a large number of voters were enrolled. The number in the different districts was as follows: First ward, first district, 493; second district, 212; Second ward, first district, 571; second district, 207; Third ward, first district, 535; second district, 165; Fourth ward, first district, 475; second district, 455; third district, 417.

The Boards of Registry met in the borough yesterday and there was a very large registry. In the first district 647 names were recorded.

DUAL LEADERSHIP IN SOMERSET G. O. P.

County Convention Divided the Honors Between Leaders.

NOW TO FIGHT DEMOCRATS.

AFTER LIVELY CONVENTION PARTY WILL ALL SUPPORT TICKET.

Details of the Battle Between the Reed and Thompson Factions—Rumors of a Compromise—The Balloting Was Lively. However—VanDoren Made a Good Run—Cooper Opposed for Assembly.

(By a Staff Representative.)

Somerville, October 19—The war in the ranks of the G. O. P. in Somerset county is over. By the array that he was able to muster, Senator Charles A. Reed, of North Plainfield, proved his right to be called a leader in county affairs. As the result, Supreme Court Clerk L. A. Thompson was compelled to concede the fact that Reed was no longer a lieutenant but a power of equal importance.

Senator Reed was on the ground early in the day and had something to say to everybody. Encouraging reports were brought in by his workers and it looked like a victory. There was a conference between the two factions. The Thompson faction had to admit that Reed was uncomfortably strong. Exactly what agreement was reached is not known. The rumor went forth, however, that Thompson had agreed to a dual leadership and had conceded the election of Reed's candidate for the nomination for Sheriff.

Senator Reed, in return, was to give up his man for the Assembly and support Thompson's candidate, Edward E. Cooper. Mr. Thompson did not appear until the last moment when he came in all bundled up, suffering from a heavy cold.

At the very start of the convention, it was evident that all the difficulties had not been smoothed over. Lawyer James L. Griggs, of Somerville, assumed the role of speaker for the Thompson faction at the convention, while Former Mayor B. A. Hegeman, Jr., of North Plainfield, took the lead among the friends of the present Senator.

A test of strength came at the choice of the temporary chairman. Mr. Hegeman, of North Plainfield, and Mr. Hope, of Raritan, were the candidates. The North Plainfielder was far better qualified to take the position, but Hope had the support of the Thompson men. The first ballot stood 22 to 22. Then another Thompson delegate came in and Hope was elected on the second ballot.

The two factions met again on the question of nominating the candidates before or after the recess and the Thompsonites won again. The nominations were made before.

After the recess, the convention settled down to business without delay. The reports of the committees were short and the balloting was begun without delap. On re-assembling, the convention had met at Somerset Hall.

Assemblyman VanDoren was well understood to be the choice of Senator Reed for shrevality nomination. Mr. Thompson's wishes in the matter were not so well understood. The rumor that he would support Reed's choice seemed well founded, but when the balloting came, Suydam, of Franklin, had a strong backing. He had been regarded as the Thompson candidate and must have had some support from the direction.

The vote for sheriff by townships was as follows:

	VanDoren.	Suydam.	Green.
Bedminster	3	2
Bernards	1	4
Branchburg	4	1
Bridgewater	1	3	1
Franklin	5
Hillsboro		5

After it was all over, it was evident that Senator Reed had won a partial victory, at least. From the very start

SPENCER'S SUCCESSOR.

J. G. MACLAUGHLIN NAMED FOR COUNTY COMMITTEE.

He Was the Choice of the North Plainfield Delegation to Represent Them on County Committee of G. O. P.

(By a Staff Representative.)

Somerville, October 19—One of the chief objects that the victorious faction of North Plainfield sought to obtain was the control of the delegation that was to represent the borough and township at the county convention held here yesterday. While every vote in the convention was needed, they particularly wished for the delegation, as the selection of the county committeeman from North Plainfield lay with the delegates.

It has long been an open secret that the Republicans in that borough who followed the lead of Senator Charles A. Reed have not been in harmony with Surrogate H. N. Spencer. Mr. Spencer has long been the committeeman from North Plainfield. This year his term expires and his friends made an effort looking toward his re-election. The other Republicans, however, opposed him for the office and advanced their candidate, Councilman John G. MacLaughlin. The battle was fought at the borough primaries last Friday night and resulted in the victory of Senator Reed's party.

Yesterday at the close of the county convention the call was made for the different members of the executive committee from different townships. North Plainfield responded and presented the name of Councilman MacLaughlin as the choice of the delegation. His appointment was regularly confirmed.

"T. K." LEAVES PLAINFIELD.

Mr. Keller Removes to New York to be Nearer His Business.

In the removal of T. H. Keller to New York, Plainfield loses one of its most energetic citizens. The demands of Mr. Keller's business in New York make it necessary for him to be nearer his place of business and consequently today he takes up his residence at 206 West One Hundred and Thirty-third street, New York. "T. K" as he is familarly known to many in the sporting world, has been closely identified with baseball, football and trap shooting for many years and his removal will be a distinct loss to the people with whom has been associated in these games. Mr. Keller has sold his East Front street residence to a New Market man.

Everyone Bound to Know It.

Yesterday afternoon after the marriage of Miss Mattie E. Hall, of New street, to George Smith Callard, of New Brunswick, the guests enjoyed themselves immensely. The carriage used by the bride and groom to go to the North Avenue station was attractively decorated, while a large sign "Just Married," occupied a prominent place. At the station the happy couple were showered with rice while waiting for the 2:29 train to take them to Scranton, Pa. The groom is a farmer and owns a large farm between New Brunswick and Stelton.

An Approaching Nuptial Event.

Mr. and Mrs. Abraham Sandberg, of New York, have issued invitations to the marriage of their daughter, Miss Sophie Sandberg, to Harry Drier, of this city. The wedding will take place next Sunday afternoon at 5 o'clock in Arlington Hall, Nos. 19, 21, 23 St. Mark's place, New York. A reception will follow. The bride and groom will reside on West Front street, corner of Madison avenue, after a honeymoon.

Two Weeks of Deer Shooting.

Samuel H. Edwards, of LaGrande avenue, left last evening for a two weeks' hunting trip in the Adirondacks. He will go up the Oswegatchie river country with a party of friends and several guides. Mr. Edwards spends his vacation in this way every year, and never fails to return with a good supply of venison.

He Walked Home.

A wheelman turning the corner of Park avenue and East Fourth street this morning caught his bicycle in the street car tracks and came to grief. He was thrown and when he got up his clothes were mud from head to foot. He walked the rest of the way.

DIDN'T HEED THE CHILD.

LAWYER BIRD SECURED THE PIANO CLAIMED BY ALICE WOOD.

Mr. and Mrs. William Fisher Claimed the Instrument, But While They Were Absent It Was Carted Away.

Sometime ago Alice Wood resided with her sister, Mrs. William Fisher, of West Third street, and included among her personal effects was a piano. When she decided to move away she wanted to take the piano with her, but Mrs. Fisher claimed that she had done so much for her sister that she would not let Alice have the instrument.

In the meantime Alice has been residing on West Third street, about a block from her sister's home. Yesterday she called on Lawyer Bird and to him related her troubles. She asked him if he could secure her piano. He replied that he could, and he immediately secured the services of Wm. Hand, and the two went to the home of the Fishers with a truck.

Mr. Bird went to the door and found that both Mr. Fisher and his wife were out and that no one was home but their little daughter. He asked the girl if there was a piano in the house. She replied that there was, but that her parents had told her not to let anybody touch it.

Mr. Bird did not heed the little girl's words but called Mr. Hand in and they immediately proceeded to remove the piano. The work had to be done quickly for it was not known what minute Mr. and Mrs. Fisher would return. When Mr. and Mrs. Fisher learned what had taken place they became indignant, and they now talk of taking steps to recover the piano.

SURPRISE FOR MISSES PRUDEN.

They Were Led to Think That the Surprise was for Another.

Last evening a few friends of the Misses Edith and Jessie Pruden, of East Second street, gave them a surprise party and the event was one of great pleasure. The guests assembled at the home of the Misses Pruden, and led them to suppose that it was Miss Jessie MacKillop whom they were going to surprise. Instead of that they remained where they assembled and spent an evening playing games and listening to vocal and instrumental music. Miss Mabelle Force favored the guests with instrumental music, which was a feature. At a late hour refreshments were served. Among those present were Miss Jessie MacKillop, Miss Edith Bond, Miss Charlotte Messersmith, Miss Mabelle Force, Mr. and Mrs. A. E. Hoagland, Miss Evelyn Searing, Miss Lizzie Bittenbender; James Stafford, Frank McDonald, Fred Ross and John Johnson.

HEARD HOW THEIR CHURCH WAS STARTED.

Organizer of the Dunellen Methodist Church at Anniversary.

PLEASANT REMINISCENCES.

REV. C. E. LITTLE TELLS WHO SPREAD METHODISM THERE.

The First Sermon was Preached to Gratify a Mr. Biglow Who Wanted to Hear a Methodist Sermon Before He Died—Abner Coriell Lent a Helping Hand and Money was Raised to Build a Church.

(Special to The Daily Press.)

Dunellen, October 19—The anniversary service of the Methodist church was continued again last night. The reunion with former pastors and friends was taken up. The service was particularly interesting to the old church members, because Rev. C. E. Little, D. D., of Jersey City, who was instrumental in organizing the Methodist society so many years ago, was one of the speakers.

Dr. Little, who is a pleasant gentleman with an interesting address, was the first speaker. In introducing him Rev. Dr. E. S. Jamison said that it is not often that a man who plants a seed is enabled to look upon the full-grown tree. But Dr. Little, who planted the seed of Methodism in New Market thirty-two years ago was permitted to look last night upon the established church which he had planted.

Dr. Little, as he looked over the gathering, could pick out a few people in the congregation whom he used to know. Dr. Little came to Dunellen for his health. When he came here he met a Mr. Biglow, eighty-three years old, who was a strict Methodist, and who expressed a desire to hear a good Methodist sermon again before he died. Dr. Little promised to preach one, but not knowing where to hold the service, Mr. Biglow made arrangements to hold it in the "Academy." It was held Sunday night and the little schoolhouse was packed. Methodistism was something new here.

The next Sunday night Dr. Little preached again, and at that service there was a decided Spiritual feeling, and before long about twenty were converted. Some of them joined the Baptist and Presbyterian churches. One day Abner Coriell, a staunch Presbyterian, said to Dr. Little "Why don't you Methodists build a church?" The answer was that they had no money. But Mr. Coriell offered to help, Presbyterian as he was, and he and Dr. Little drove about the country together, and through Mr. Coriell's efforts enough money was raised to build a church.

Dr. Little referred to various people in his address, (not by name) people who had been converted under his preaching, people who opposed the Methodists, and others who worked hard for the advancement of the church. After the service the members of the congregation stayed for a few words with the old pastor.

Following Dr. Little's remarks Smalley Corriell, of Bound Brook, who was the superintendent of the first Methodist Sunday-school here, was called to the platform by Dr. Jamison, who noticed him in the audience. Mr. Coriell shook hands with Dr. Little, and made a few remarks before taking his seat. Mr. Coriell is superintendent of the Presbyterian church at Bound Brook.

Rev. H. M. Simpson, D. D., of Hackensack, followed Mr. Coriell's remarks. Dr. Simpson was one of the later pastors. His remarks were of an encouraging nature. He spoke highly of the pastor and people who had the courage and faith to establish and organize a church in a new territory.

Rev. S. D. Jones, of Stony Point, entered upon his pastorate here about the time of the panic in 1874. The church was then laboring under difficulties trying to raise money to pay its debts, $600 of it being interest money. Rev. Mr. Jones related his experience in collecting this money, and the good success he had. The first "penny a day" society ever organized in this locality was established under Mr. Jones, and in various ways money was raised and eventually the church affairs came to be in a good condition again.

Rev. George Angleman, of Junction, was the next speaker. Mr. Angleman's grandfather was a great worker in the church years ago, and so as the elder Mr. Angleman was so well known, the remarks of his grandson were appreciated.

Tonight the exercises will close with a congratulatory meeting which will be addressed by the pastors of the churches of New Market and Dunellen. Rev. W. C. O'Donnell and a delegation from Plainfield will be present. While the offering was being taken Miss Mabel Jamison sang a solo which was very much enjoyed.

CHICAGO PEACE JUBILEE

A Great Meeting Held in the Auditorium.

8,000 PERSONS ATTENDED

Formal Opening of the Celebration. Several Mass Meetings in the Afternoon Addresses Given by President Peck, Judge Speer and Others.

Chicago, Oct. 19.—Eight thousand persons, packed within the walls of the Auditorium building yesterday, witnessed the formal opening exercises of the national peace jubilee.

All that had preceded this meeting was merely preliminary, and most of it had been in honor of the president personally.

The weather was cold and damp, with lowering skies, and a raw wind blowing off the lake. The crowd was closely packed around the building fully an hour before the doors were open. The people came rapidly, and long before the commencement of the exercises the great hall was filled from pit to dome.

The exercises opened with a short address by Chairman Charles Truax of the jubilee committee, at the conclusion of which he introduced the presiding officer, George R. Peck.

After Mr. Peck had finished his address he introduced Mayor Harrison of Chicago, who delivered the formal address of welcome to President McKinley and the strangers who had come to Chicago to witness the ceremonies of jubilee week.

The president, who received a most enthusiastic welcome as he entered the building, made no formal reply to the address of welcome, notwithstanding the loud calls for a speech.

Judge Emory Speer of Georgia delivered a long oration on the subject of the troubles which Spain had caused us as a neighbor, beginning with the meeting of Georgians and Spaniards at Bloody Marsh in 1742. He brought out the incompatibility of the temperament of the American and the Spaniard as a reason why they could not remain neighbors in peace.

The final passages of his oration were an impassioned arraignment of Spanish cruelty towards the Cubans, and treachery in the destruction of the Maine, and a portrayal of the terrible retribution administered by the arms of the United States at Manila and Santiago.

During the afternoon five meetings were held in different parts of the city. A large meeting at Studebaker Hall was addressed by Albert K. Beveridge of Indianapolis and President Cyrus Northrop of the University of Minnesota.

At the Columbia theatre Gen. Miles, General Duffield of Detroit and Booker T. Washington addressed an audience limited only by the size of the theatre.

At the First Regiment Armory Secretary Wilson and Mayor Rose of Milwaukee comprised the list of speakers.

Samuel Gompers, president of the American Federation of Labor, spoke at the Second Regiment Armory.

Charles Emory Smith delivered an address at the North Side Turner Hall.

The public schools, all of which were properly decorated, devoted the day to jubilee exercises and to hearing addresses by prominent educators and orators.

General Henry M. Duffield of Detroit made an address, in which he emphasized the point that the future of our military establishment should have the utmost intelligent study.

He discussed the questions: What shall be its personnel? How shall it be organized, instructed and disciplined? How shall it best be equipped, rationed and supplied in the field?

His suggestions, he said, were made without any intention to criticise or discredit the operations of the late war.

Interest centered in the ball at the Auditorium, where the president and representatives of the cabinet, the army and navy and the diplomatic corps were received.

The president also visited the blue jacket ball at Medinah Temple, and shook hands with the sailors who were there with their friends.

THE WAR INVESTIGATION.

Dr. Maus Says There Was No Suffering Among the Sick.

Jacksonville, Fla., Oct. 19.—The war investigating commission began the examination of witnesses at Jacksonville yesterday, using the office room of General Dodge's private car for the purpose.

Colonel Louis M. Maus, chief surgeon of the Seventh army corps, was the first witness sworn. He said there was only a small field hospital when he arrived in May, and there were very few sick men. Sickness developed very slowly and there was very little of it until July. When the order came for the establishment of division hospitals there was some delay in getting supplies, such as tents. There was no suffering among the sick. Still they did not have the luxuries that they did at the beginning of the war.

"Nor,' added the doctor, "do I think that the history of the world has ever seen a parallel to our present care of the sick."

Taking up the present condition of the hospitals he said there were three hundred trained nurses now at work here. He said the employment of these nurses had proven satisfactory.

Replying to a question, Dr. Maus said that after the first few days there had been no refusal of supplies and that all requisitions had been filled with exceptional promptitude. He had never seen such an utter disregard of expense in caring for sick soldiers. As a matter of fact the troops had a greater allowance of rations than they could use or dispose of in any way.

He also said that the Red Cross Society had given so much that it was often unnecessary to ask the government for supplies. There had been no restriction in the matter of fitting out the camps.

He thought typhoid had been introduced to the camp by Mississippi and Virginia troops. Shallow wells and surface drainage had done much to increase the scourge, but he was confident that the regular water supply of the city had not been in any way responsible for it.

He also thought the flies had done much to disseminate fever. From the beginning very strict attention had been given to the sinks. He had never in his life seen such attention given to sanitation in a camp, but despite this care typhoid did break out and had become the principal sickness here.

Dr. Maus said that he had found it difficult to prevail upon surgeons in the volunteer service to learn the duties of their position. As a matter of fact these duties were extremely onerous, and for this reason the volunteer physicians were not so efficient as they should have been.

Later on sanitation became the principal duty of everybody about the camp. Much trouble has been experienced in keeping the public from the hospitals. In many cases they had surreptitiously carried food to the sick. Mr. Maus also dwelt upon the newspaper reports of the sufferings in the camp, saying that they had generally grown out of exaggerated statements from the men themselves.

The Yellow Fever Epidemic.

Washington, D. C., Oct. 19.—A dispatch to the marine hospital service from Franklin, La., reports seven new cases of yellow fever there.

Jackson, Miss., Oct. 19.—Jackson's report of new cases of yellow fever yesterday was unusually large, the total being fifteen.

There were no deaths. The board of health's official latest report for the state is as follows:

Madison—One new case and one death.
Poplarville—Four new cases.
Starksville—No new cases in four days.
Taylors—No new cases.
Harrison—Three new cases.
Yazoo City—Five cases and two suspicious.
Natchez—Two cases.
Meridan—Two cases.
Canton—One case.
Hattiesburg—Four new cases and one death.
Waveland—One new case.

The board has issued an order rescinding the order dated August 17, quarantining Mississippi against Key West, Fla.

Spain Claims Damages

Madrid, Oct. 19.—The Heraldo says that the minister of marine has taken preliminary steps to claim damages from the Creusot gun foundries of France for not delivering within time certain war material ordered from them.

Damages will also be claimed from the Placenia arms factory for the same reasons, and the British firm of Thompsons, the Clydebank shipbuilders, will be asked to pay damages upon the ground that the torpedo boat destroyers built in their yards for Spain failed to develop the speed required by the terms of the contract.

A Leave of Absence Ruling

Washington, Oct. 19.—An order which will greatly relieve the minds of the families of ocers detailed to duty in the Philippines is bulletined whereby leaves of absence granted to such officers are to date from the day of their arrival in the United States, and will be considered as terminating on the date of departure from this country to return to their commands.

Any other rule, of course, would greatly limit such leaves of absence, as the time spent on the ocean voyage each way would have to be deducted from the total period allowed.

Gov. Voorhees' Resignation

Trenton, N. J., Oct. 19.—Acting governor Voorhees yesterday sent a telegram from Philadelphia, saying that his resignation as senator from Union county is on the way to the office of the secretary of state.

Speaker Watkins, who will become acting governor when the formal resignation of Mr. Voorhees shall have been received, came to Trenton to take the oath of office.

Reward of 20,000 Offered.

Paris, Oct. 19.—The Dowager Duchess of Sutherland has offered a reward of $20,000 for the recovery of the jewels, said to be valued at $150,000, contained in a satchel which she lost on board a train bound for Calais while on her way to London.

The jewelry includes a necklace valued at $22,000.

PORTO RICO OURS NOW

Stars and Stripes Unfurled at San Juan.

GEN. BROOKE IS GOVERNOR

National Salute Fired in Honor of Island's Formal Occupation. Eight Thousand Inhabitants Lose Their Spanish Citizenship.

Washington, Oct. 19.—The Stars and Stripes are now flying over Porto Rico, and the United States is in formal as well as actual possession of the island. The news was brought to this city in the following dispatch received at the war department from General Brooke, chairman of the evacuation commission:

San Juan, Porto Rico, Oct. 18.
Secretary of War, Washington:

Flags have been raised on public buildings and forts in this city and saluted with national salute. The occupation of the island is now complete.

BROOKE,
Chairman.

No new instructions have been issued by General Brooke to guide him in governing the new island possession of the United States.

He will make as little change as possible in the existing government until President McKinley returns to Washington and approves a plan of administration of affairs there.

General Brooke's authority will be supreme for the present. He is to all intents and purposes the governor of the island, but nominally he is the major general commanding the military department of Porto Rico.

His powers will be similar to those exercised by Brigadier General Leonard Wood at Santiago.

The collection of revenue, the preservation of the public health, the issue of privileges and all such civil matters will be included in his duties, and in addition he will have control of all the United States troops.

The Porto Ricans will be made to feel the military control of the island as little as possible, and it is intended by the administration that civil affairs shall proceed without disturbance except where it is necessary to correct abuses that existed under the Spanish regime.

In view of the fact that with the acquisition of Porto Rico by the United States, about eight hundred thousand inhabitants of that island lost their Spanish citizenship, the question as to what shall become of these people politically, becomes of great importance at this time.

Madrid advices report that leading citizens in Porto Rico have already taken steps to become naturalized, as United States citizens, is an error, for existing laws provide no way in which this change in citizenship can be effected by the residents of the island. There is no United States court there before which a declaration of intention can be filed, and in fact no machinery at all which can be put in motion to change citizenship.

Long Voyage from Manila.

New York, Oct. 19.—The American clipper ship Great Admiral, Captain Sterling, arrived from Manila via Hong Kong, and anchored at Quarantine to await the visit of the health officer.

Prior to the breaking out of hostilities, Captain Sterling says that his ship was lying in the harbor of Manila, and every effort was made to stow away the cargo in order to sail for home.

A record of six days had been made in stowing 8,630 bales of hemp, when orders came for the vessel to sail, as war had broken out.

Twenty-four hours' notice was given, although at first the authorities tried to hold the ship.

The Great Admiral got to sea April 24, but was overtaken next day by the Spanish gunboat Manila, but Captain Sterling had a letter from the Spanish port admiral permitting him to proceed, and the gunboat could not act under 24 hours.

"I hoisted the flag," said the captain, "and gave him the slip during the night, and made Hong Kong, where I remained until it was evident that I could not sail for home with safety."

Afrikander Bund's Policy.

London, Oct. 19.—A dispatch to the Times from Cape Town says that Mr. W. P. Schreiner, the new premier and leader of the Afrikander Bund, made a statement of the policy of the new colonial government in the Cape Assembly yesterday.

The government, he said, would recognize the independence of the South African republic and work harmoniously with them, leaving external relationships with them to be dealt with by the British high commissioner, whom the government would support in the development of South Africa.

The government would also carry forward a bill for a new customs convention with the South African republics and introduce a proposal for a contribution on the part of the colony to the British navy.

Gales Sweep the British Coast.

London, Oct. 19.—Fierce equinoctial gales are raging along the coasts of Great Britain, and causing considerable havoc among shipping.

The Dover and Calais packets were stopped yesterday. Several schooners have ben wrecked, but their crews were saved by life boats.

The vessels of the Northern coast line have been damaged considerably by the gales.

The violence of the gale on the Haddingtonshire coast of Scotland has not been equalled since 1881.

Life boats are in readiness and few lives have been lost.

Seized by Bailiffs.

Berlin, Oct. 19.—The German steam yacht Heligoland, having on board the members of Herr Theodor Lerner's Arctic expedition, which recently returned from Spitzbergen after a search for the missing aeronaut, Herr Andree, has reached Geestemunde, where bailiffs seized the whole outfit, including the scientific collections made during the voyage, on account of an unpaid debt of the firm which fitted out the vessel.

THE EPISCOPAL CONVENTION.

The Marriage and Divorce Questions. The Standard Bible.

Washington, Oct. 19.—In the Episcopal convention yesterday Bishop Doane presiding officer of the house of bishops, and the Rev. Dr. Morgan Dix, presiding officer of the house of deputies, joined in directing the services of a joint session at which all the bishops and deputies united in a national prayer concerning Porto Rico.

At the business session of the deputies the standard Bible came up for discussion, and steps were taken to guard this standard by constitutional provision.

The Rev. Dr. Fuller of Philadelphia had submitted a series of queries as to the existence of a standard Bible, to which a committee reported that the church had a standard, namely, that published in 1812 and adopted in general convention in 1823, that no alterations had been made since then, and that the exclusive use of the standard Bible was obligatory.

In view of the report a resolution was adopted directing the preparation of a suitable constitutional provision establishing the standard Bible and fixing the manner of its alteration.

Another phase of the marriage and divorce question was presented in a resolution by the Rev. Mr. Fulton, which was placed on the calendar, providing for a committee of thirteen deputies to report six months prior to the next triennial council on the subject of marriage and divorce.

Murdered 45 Days Ago.

Great Neck, N. Y., Oct. 19.—At last steps have been taken to run down the murderers of old Patrick Smith, who was found dead in his house at Port Washington on September 4, covered with blood and cuts, after he had spent the night in drinking with four companions.

Detectives have been working on the case and yesterday Justice O'Leary of this place issued warrants for the arrest of Solomon Wanser, William Wanser, Richard Fitzsimmons and John Fitzsimmons. The warrants were issued after depositions had been made by County Detectives Sullivan and Downing, alleging that the four men were guilty of manslaughter. It is expected that the men wil be arrested to-day.

It was only lately that the case was brought to the knowledge ofth e county authorities. Negligence on the part of Coroner Skinner to report it to the district attorney is said o be responsible for the delay.

Citizens' Nomination Regular.

Albany, N. Y., Oct. 19.—Secretary of State Palmer, at the conclusion of a hearing yesterday on the protest against the legality of the certificate filed by the members of the Citizens' Union and other independents, nominating an independent state ticket, decided that the certificate was regular and that the independen organization had the right to use the name "Citizens' Union" and the emblem "Statue of Liberty."

The hearing on the protest, which was made by Colonel Lovell Jerome of New York city, a member of the Citizens' Union, started at ten o'clock and was of only an hour's duration.

Colonel Jerome appeared for himself and the Citizens' Union was represented by Isaac H. Klein and John J. Chapman, members of the Citizens' Union, and A. T. Bulkley and C. C. Van Kirk of this city, as counsel.

Traffic on the Lakes.

Ishpeming, Mich., Oct. 19.—Vessel men here are enjoying the novel sensation of being sought after instead of seeking customers.

The expansion of the lumber trade, the great crops of cereals to be moved eastward, and the millions of tons of iron ore to be transported have all combined to make lake traffic larger than it has ever been before.

On top of this comes the chartering of fifty lake vessels, and their removal to salt water, thereby removing from competition lake craft having about fifty thousand tons gross capacity.

These factors together have put the vessel owners in a position to dictate terms to a considerable extent. They have not, however, attempted to raise iron ore charters to an unreasonable figure.

Chinese Villages Flooded

San Francisco, Oct. 19.—Advices from Shantung, received by steamship, give terrible details of the Yellow River floods. Dikes were broken near Chatung City, and the lowlands for a width of twenty miles are swept by floods.

Over two hundred villages are under water and the wretched people have fled to the southern border of the great valley, where they are subsisting on charity.

Thousands of them will die of starvation unless the government comes to their aid.

Mersey Lock Gates Broken

Liverpool, Oct. 19.—An unmanageable steamship stove in the Mersey lock gates yesterday and the great volume of water thus released swept the vessel and several lighters down the river.

The hawsers of the White Star freight steamship Nomadic were broken by the strain and she also was borne along in the roaring torrent.

The lighters were sunk, but their crews, with the exception of one man, were saved.

Volunteer Succumbs.

Boston, Oct. 19.—S. W. Wheeler of Philadelphia, formerly of the Harvard 'Varsity football eleven, died at the Massachusetts General Hospital yesterday. He went to Porto Rico in the Philadelphia City Troop and contracted typhoid fever there. He had been ill since his return.

Marchand's Withdrawal.

Paris, Oct. 19.—It is semi-officially announced that France will withdraw the Marchand expedition from Fashoda as soon as the special messenger now on the way from General Marchand arrives here.

The Chinese Emperor's Illness

Pekin, Oct. 19.—The physician attached to the French legation here visited the Emperor of China yesterday for the purpose of making a medical examination.

CUBAN DEBT PROBLEM

Our Peace Commissioners Argue Against Spanish Claim.

PARIS PAPER'S STATEMENT

Spain Means to Give Up Cuba and Porto Rico Without Debate, but She Maintains that All Precedent of International Law Requires that We Assume the Debt of Territory We Take.

Paris, Oct. 19.—The Gaulois yesterday reviewed the work of the joint peace commission, and, referring to the delay caused by the difference in the language spoken by the commissioners, adds:

"But, according to the Spaniards, the main cause of the difficulty encountered in the negotiations comes from the lack of conciliation in the attitude of the American commissioners. It is known in regard to Porto Rico and Cuba that the articles of the Protocol are absolutely positive—Spain cedes Porto Rico to the United States and relinquishes (abandons) sovereignty over Cuba. These two points are definitely settled and are not open to discussion. Besides, the Spaniards make it a point of honor to scrupulously abide by their engagements toward their conquerors.

"The question of the Cuban debt remains. Upon which power should the onerous obligation of guaranteeing the debt rest? Here is where the two commissions differ in their views and neither is inclined to yield. The Spaniards agree on the following lines: When a power annees territory it is implied that it assumes all the obligations of such territory. It is international law, sanctioned by usage, and which has always been complied with. Thus, when France anneed Savoy, she assumed all the debts contracted by the latter while still an Italian province.

Lastly, they remind their opponents that Cuba is virtually the key of the Gulf of Mexico, a strategic position of the first order to the United States, and an immense advantage, which calls for some sacrifice upon the part of the Americans.

"To this the latter replied at first that they could not listen to any discussion of the matter of the debt, being under formal instructions from their government. But, on the Spanish commission insisting, and in the presence of its very firm attitude, the Americans have taken a more conciliatory attitude, not that they entertain the intention of yielding to Spain's injunctions, but they consent to argue against the Spanish position. These arguments may be briefly summed up as follows:

"The Americans insist upon the fact that the money raised by the Cuban loans was not applied to the requirements or interests of the island, but was chiefly borrowed to the end of improving the financial condition of Spain and to procure funds which she could no longer raise in the Peninsula, and that the debt, therefore, is personal to Spain.

"On the other hand, the Americans say that America has no intention of annexing Cuba and could not, therefore, assume such obligations.

"Finally, it is held that, owing to the fabulous cost of the late war, the American people would not concede the right to assume such obligations.

"These are, approximately, the grounds on which the present discussions are conducted. What will the outcome be?

"Certain newspapers have considered the possibility of referring the difference to the arbitration of a continental power. Neither commission has yet suggested such a solution, but, on the other hand, we have good grounds to believe that, even were the suggestion acceptable to Spain, it would have no chance of being agreed to by the Americans."

Instruction from Madrid.

Madrid, Oct. 19.—The premier, Senor Sagasta, having to prepare a long dispatch to Senor Montero Rios, president of the Spanish peace commission, the cabinet council did not meet yesterday.

Hobson Coming Home.

Washington, Oct. 19.—Lieutenant Hobson has sailed from Caimanera for the United States by way of Jamaica. He comes primarily to Philadelphia to obtain a number of appliances required for his wrecking operations.

But another purpose is to redeem a promise made by Secretary Long to have Hobson and the little body of men who sunk the Merrimac present in Philadelphia during the peace jubilee.

He should arrive in Philadelphia by the beginning of next week, and it is said at the navy department that he will return to Santiago as soon as he has secured the material he wants.

Meanwhile, it is understood, the work of raising the Colon will proceed, as well as the wrecking of the other sunken Spanish ships, which work has yielded profitable returns in the shape of ordnance and other valuable ship equipment secured.

Reubina Walworth Dies.

New York, Oct. 19.—Miss Reubina Walworth, the heroic nurse at Montauk Point, died at the Presbyterian hospital yesterday morning after a five weeks' illness of typhoid fever.

Miss Walworth was a Vassar graduate. When the war with Spain was declared she left a school she was teaching and took a course in nursing. When the camp at Montauk Point was established she went there as a nurse and devoted herself assiduously to the care of the sick and wounded soldiers. When not nursing, she, with her mother, distributed the supplies of the Relief Association.

She worked so zealously and self-sacrificingly that she broke down. No arrangements have yet been made for the funeral.

Public Hearing on Dreyfus' Application.

Paris, Oct. 19.—The Rappel says that the hearing before the criminal section of the court of cassation upon the admissability of Mme. Dreyfus's application for a revision of her husband's trial will be in public session.

KAISER AT CONSTANTINOPLE.

Berlin Police Official Dispatched to the Orient to Protect the Ruler.

Constantinople, Oct. 19.—The Emperor and Empress of Germany arrived yesterday.

The Hohenzollern anchored off Dolmabagtche Palace, with the German warships Hertha and Hela above and below her. Soon afterwards the emperor and empress entered the Hohenzollern's long boat and were rowed to the palace, where they were received by the Sultan of Turkey, who was surrounded by a brilliant suite.

The German warships and a hundred guns from the batteries fired salutes.

The long boat of the Hohenzollern, on its way to the landing stage, had to steer clear of hundreds of boats, caiques and launches, containing officials, policemen or spectators. The scene was most animated.

The meeting between the sultan and his guests was most cordial.

Berlin, Oct. 19.—Police Detective Commissioner Witmer has been dispatched to the Orient for the special protection of Emperor William of Germany.

A number of German newspapers demand that special measures be taken against Anarchists in Germany in consequence of the discovery at Alexandria of the plot to assassinate Emperor William and King Humbert of Italy.

London, Oct. 19.—The Alexandria correspondent of the Daily Mail denounces the inaction of the Italian consul there, who has jurisdiction over the Italian Anarchists now under arrest and charged with a conspiracy against the life of Emperor William.

The consul has impounded all the documents and referred the conspiracy to Rome, thus blocking the police, who are anxious to ferret it out.

The correspondent says that Ugo Parrini, the cafe keeper and leader of the Anarchist gang, desperately attacked the Italian consul when arraigned and was with difficulty overpowered.

Free Entry of Supplies.

Havana, Oct. 19.—Senor Benitez, assistant secretary to the Spanish evacuation commission, delivered to the American commissioners five notes, four treating of the fortifications of the island.

The fifth note asserted that Captain General Blanco formally acceded to the request of the American commission to permit the free entry of Red Cross supplies at the ports of Havana, Cardenas, Cienfuegos, Sagua la Grande, Caibarien, Bahia Honda and others of less importance.

Colonel Waring has cabled a report to President McKinley of the sanitary condition of Havana informing him that at present it is not necessarily dangerous to public health, but that the effective work of sanitation would cost a large sum of money.

Regla had a sensation Monday. On the Havana train stopping at the Cuban camp of Rafael de Cardenas several hundred passengers were picked up. Many who boarded the train displayed Cuban insignia.

A Spanish colonel, who was also a passenger, objected to this, and tore the badges from the breasts of the wearers, at the same time giving orders to the Civil Guard accompanying the train to arrest the engineer and conductor if they dared to stop again at a Cuban camp.

The President's Tour

Washington, D. C., Oct. 19.—It is reported here that the administration is so well pleased with the reception the president is receiving at all points in the West, that he is to extend his tour somewhat and return to Washington by a northern route, taking in a large number of towns in Illinois, New York and New Jersey.

It is understood to be his intention to make the most of his present opportunities and deliver addresses at as many places as possible.

According to a statement of an administration official, the president will make a number of speeches in New York and New Jersey.

The original itinerary, if carried out, would bring the presidential party back to Washington on Friday of this week, but it is said that they will not return for several days later.

The Industrial Commission

Washington, Oct. 19.—The government industrial commission organized yesterday by electing Senator Kyle as chairman; ex-Representative Phillips of Pennsylvania first vice chairman; Representative Gardner of New Jersey second vice chairman and J. M. Farquhar of Buffalo temporary secretary.

It was decided to adjourn until the middle of November, and the Bliss building of this city was selected as headquarters for the commission.

The War Bond Issues

Washington, Oct. 19.—The progress of sending out bonds of the war issue is getting slower as the work nears its end. Up to date $165,000,000 worth of the bonds out of the total issue of $200,000,000 have been sent to the subscribers or their assignees.

The multitude of assignments, the diversity of the partial payments made on account, etc., have made the work very intricate at this late stage, and it may be some time yet before the remaining thirty-five million are out of the way.

Future Use of Montauk Point

Washington, Oct. 19.—Montauk Point will not be deserted by the United States army merely because it is to be broken up as a summer camp and temporary hospital station.

The purpose of the war department now is to make a post of it, for the present at least, and a battery of artillery will be kept there all winter, with a small detachment of the Signal Corps to keep the electric plant in running order.

Indians to Surrender.

Washington, Oct. 19.—Indian Commissioner Jones reported yesterday from Walker, Minn., that all but one of the Pillager Indians wanted by United States marshals would surrender Wednesday.

Other Indians will assist the marshal in capturing this renegade.

Mr. Serrell's Letter.

Presumably Lemuel William Serrell, Jr., wrote the communication concerning the cost of the county trolley project, published in another column of today's Press, for the purpose of influencing public sentiment in reference to the franchise which the Plainfield Street Railway Company wants the city to grant them for an eastern extension of their lines. Mr. Serrell doesn't mention the local franchise in his article, but inasmuch as he is the representative of the Plainfield Street Railway Company who has thus far conducted the negotiations of terms with the Common Council, it is reasonable to suppose that his communication is written for the purpose of making a comparison that will look favorable to the capitalists and enterprise he is associated with.

What Mr. Serrell writes of the probable cost (from his point of view) of the county trolley project is totally immaterial to the consideration of the franchise proposed to be given to the Plainfield Street Railway Company. The only way in which the county trolley project has been brought into the discussion by The Daily Press has been simply to show what value one shrewd business man has placed upon the right to draw business from a certain territory, irrespective of what the governing body controling the privilege does with the money that is paid for it. John Kean has agreed to pay $250,000 for the right to construct a railway between Plainfield and Elizabeth. He pays that sum of money not with a view of being simply allowed to build his track upon a county road, but because he believes and knows that there are enough people living adjacent to the route to warrant sufficient traffic upon the street railway to make it pay him to give at the outset $250,000 for the privilege of catering to that patronage.

Now technically the Common Council is dealing with the Plainfield Street Railway Company for a local franchise. Practically it amounts to a county line, inasmuch as it is the pivotal point in the plans of the capitalists in opposition to the county project. Mr. Serrell does not attempt to deny that this is not the case. This being the case, the Common Council should hold this pivotal link in worth to the city proportionate to what it is worth to those who are striving to secure it. There is no reason to grant it on the terms proposed in the pending ordinance because they are better than conditions for similar things in the past have been. The value of this franchise to the city should be gauged by what its worth is going to be to the capitalists owning the Plainfield Street Railway Company. And what its worth is to them is proven without doubt by the offer that John Kean has made to the Board of Freeholders.

All of the talk and estimates of cost and other disagreeable features that are brought up about the county trolley project to frighten taxpayers, are done purposely to blind people as to the real value of the proposed city franchise to the Plainfield Street Railway Company.

It will not work, and Mr. Serrell's communication is not worth the paper it is printed on as bearing seriously on the present discussion in Plainfield. The Daily Press, however, takes pleasure in publishing it because it demonstrates what flimsy arguments the private capitalists have to offer why they should not be made to pay a fair price for the most valuable concession that they have yet asked for from Plainfield.

LORD SALISBURY.

For several weeks the strained relations between Great Britain and France over the Fashoda affair have been apparent, and close observers have prophesied a crisis at an early day. Lord Salisbury is a man of positive character, [illegible] equal stubbornness on the part of the French government can bring but one result—war.

A New Governor.

After having been expected on several different occasions within the last few weeks, the resignation of Foster Voorhees as Acting-Governor reached the State House at Trenton yesterday and today we are under the administration of the third chief executive that the capitol has quartered in less than a year. Of course, men may come and men may go, but New Jersey is never without a Governor by some hook or crook. Thus the ship of State is always kept in the channel that leads on into time unforeseen.

Political exigincies was the cause of the seating of a third occupant in the Gubernatorial chair within a year. The change in chief executives was expected and while no serious complications in the administrative machinery of the State is expected as a result, it is not an official practice that would be condoned often by the people of the State.

The induction of the new Governor was accomplished under distressing circumstances. Speaker Watkins, who by virtue of his office becomes Acting Governor, had gone to Trenton early in the morning on the receipt of a telegram from Mr. Voorhees saying that he had sent his resignation to the Secretary of State, but through a delay somewhere the resignation did not reach the State House until 9 o'clock at night, and then only after a special messenger had been sent from Trenton to Somerville to personally secure a duplicate.

Acting-Governor Watkins is 36 years old, and was re-elected to the Assembly for a second term a year ago, and was made Speaker with little opposition. He is a lawyer of ability, and is the youngest man that ever filled the office of Governor in this State.

The Press And The Trolley.

The Daily Press is being abused by a certain class of people who say that the progress of the town is being retarded because we are insisting that the Common Council secure better terms from the Plainfield Street Railway Company for the franchise for its eastern extension.

The Daily Press is and always has been strongly in favor of extension of the trolley roads in all directions out of the city, believing that they will do more for the development of the territory through which they pass than any other class of improvements, but we also most emphatically believe that the Plainfield Street Railway Company should pay a fair price for the privileges that they are asking for, and that they can be brought to better terms at a not very distant day.

The Elizabeth Journal says that the three men who are working hardest to secure the Republican Senatorial nomination in this county are former Mayor Rankin, of Elizabeth, Charles N. Codding, of Westfield, and J. Martin Roll, of Springfield. At the same time that the Journal appeared with this political opinion, the Newark News came out with a statement from Mr. Codding saying that he was not a candidate, which shows that either The Journal doesn't know what it is talking about or else Mr. Codding is playing 'possum. In discussing the situation The Journal is very frank in saying that whoever the Republicans nominate it will not be a walkover in the election.

In having his say about the Bergen county trolley project today, we hope that Mr. Serrell will not fail to tell us something about the private enterprise that is striving its hardest to defeat the Bergen scheme out of pure love for the taxpaying publice. Of course, we all know that the private capitalists are simply in the trolley business out of philanthropic consideration for the dear public, and it certainly would be gratifying to know something of their admirable qualities in respect to their treatment of the people.

New Brunswick is about to undergo an improvement carried out in Plainfield some time ago—the construction of underground conduits for the telephone wires. Unfortunately for the telephone company in Plainfield the wires have not as yet been put in the conduits, and the big fire Sunday morning caused several hundred dollars worth of damage and interrupted service for two days to a great majority of the subscribers as a result of the cables being burned on North avenue. With the wires underground nothing but an earthquake will disturb them.

The following from the Copy Hook is a trifle late in arriving, but it is none the less appreciated:

The Plainfield, (N. J.) Daily Press, which has just installed a new Scott press and added a column to each page, has begun a German news department, where the large German population of Plainfield may find the news in their native language. Though common in parts of the west, this feature is rare in the east, though it would seem desirable where German population would warrant such enterprise.

The responsibilities of journalism fall lightly upon the head of the editor of the Roselle Star, which failed to twinkle one week. The following week the editor excused his dereliction by announcing that he was sick the previous week. However, he promises that the Star will not fail to twinkle hereafter.

The telephone company boasts that it handled 998,000,000 conversations last year. No record is kept of the number of times that "busy" is given to irate and persistent callers.—New York Press.

How true, how true the comment.

The present attitude of the New York Sun towards Tammany Hall only emphasizes the song that says something about "the best of friends must part."

It is now just plain Mr. Voorhees, but he has hopes.

PASSING COMMENT

Things that Are Not Exactly News but Just as Interesting.

An amusing incident is related of a certain popular clerk in one of Plainfield's dry goods stores. Recently one of the women clerks approached him and asked for a sufficient amount of cheese cloth to make a duster. He refused the young woman's petition, and she promptly reported the matter to the proprietor of the store. The latter admonished the young man and told him that whenever anyone asked for cheese cloth to give it to them. An hour or so later a customer appeared at the young man's counter and asked for ten yards of cheese cloth. The clerk measured it off and wrapped it up, and when the customer asked the price the clerk remarked, 'Oh, that will be all right, we are giving cheese cloth away now." It is needless to say that the clerk was set right by his employer.

DUNELLEN.

(Special Correspondence of The Press.)

Dunellen, Oct. 19.—A young woman living along the line of the trolley has called the attention of The Daily Press to the fact that in travelling between Plainfield and Dunellen she has been unable to get the conductors on the cars to stop and let her off at the corner of North and Washington avenues, but they persist in carrying her as far as Dr. Brakeley's drug store. She has repeatedly requested that they allow her to get off at the above named point, but they tell her that they are not allowed to stop there. In disagreeable rainy weather it is a matter of great convenience for her to get off the car at the corner, and she wants to know through the columns of this paper whether she is obliged to be carried a half block beyond her destination. She says that the conductors stop at the corner to let men off and on, but will not do so for ladies.

The Great Gotham Stock Company gave another clever performance in Music Hall in "Ups and Downs of Life." The comedy element was a feature of the piece. Fred Warren and Alice Magill portrayed characters that were laugh provokers Miss Magill appeared in the role of an Irish servant girl and made favor with the audience by her piquant manner. She made her part entertaining without being boisterous. Fred Warren seems to have the faculty of raising the risibilities of an audience everytime he opens his mouth. In the heavier roles Frederick Kensil, R. Fulton Russell and Miss Gertrude Dion Magill, all did excellent work. The matinee performance yesterday afternoon was especially attractive for ladies and children. They will be continued through the week. Tonight the "Inside Track" is produced.

REST.

Let us rest ourselves a bit,
Worry? Wave your hand to it;
Kiss your finger tips and smile
It farewell a little while.

Weary of the weary way
We have come since yesterday,
Let it fret us not, in dread
Of the weary way ahead.

While we vet look down—not up—
To seek out the buttercup
And the daisy, where they wave
O'er the green home of the grave.

Let us launch us smoothly on
Listless billows of the lawn,
And drift out across the main
Of our childish dreams again.

Voyage off, beneath the trees,
O'er the field's enchanted seas,
Where the lilies are our sails,
And our seagulls, nightingales.

Where no wilder storm shall beat
Than the wind that waves the wheat
And no tempests burst above
The old laughs we used to love.

Lose all troubles—gain release,
Languor and exceeding peace,
Cruising idly o'er the vast
Calm mid-ocean of the past.

Let us rest ourselves a bit,
Worry? Wave your hand to it—
Kiss yourfinger-tips and smile
It farewell a little while.

THE OTHER GIRL.

On my arrival at the station, Lady Mannington, Molly and the French maid had collected their chattels and stood round the immense heap in attitudes denoting various degrees of impatience. I apologized.

"It's of no consequence," said Lady Mannington, in a tone signifying it was of the greatest. Molly shook her head at me and smiled. I looked at the two ladies and the French maid and then I looked at the miniature conveyance.

"The brougham is only seated for two," I hinted.

"Celeste can walk," said Lady Mannington.

"I should prefer to walk, mamma," said Molly, with an air of much good nature.

"Perhaps that will be best," Lady Mannington conceded reluctantly.

"I am sure of it," I indorsed heartily

"If only your aunt had sent the omnibus"—Lady Mannington began aggrievedly.

"It was most careless of her," I admitted instantly. I caught Molly's eye. She has a curious way of smiling at nothing.

So Molly and I started to walk over the crisp snow. Just outside the station I helped her over the stile. "We may as well take the short cut," I observed; "it is not so very much longer, and I have so much to say to you."

"What about?" asked Molly.

I hesitated. "It is about a friend of mine," I replied at length.

"Oh!"

"He is in the deuce of a mess," I began, confidentially, "I want your help."

"What can I do?" asked Molly, opening her eyes.

"You can advise me," I replied, taking courage. "A womans' wit—"

Molly was pleased. "Go on, Mr. Trevor."

"I fear you will think my friend particularly foolish," I said, sorrowfully.

"Very likely," replied Molly, indifferently.

"I assure he has many good points. But it happened a girl wanted to marry him."

"What!" exclaimed Molly.

"I can't think what she saw in him," I replied, uncomfortably.

"She could not have been quite nice," said Molly, decisively.

I stopped to test the strength of the ice over the pool.

"I have seen her look quite nice," I remarked, thoughtfully.

"You know her?" asked Molly, quickly.

"Oh, yes. It wasn't really the girl who wanted to marry my friend; it was her mother. I mean the mother wanted the girl to marry my friend. I hope I make myself clear?"

"I don't think that improves matters," retorted Molly.

"My friend was in love with another girl—a really nice girl. In fact, a quite splendid girl. One of the very best," I said, kindling.

"You know that girl, too?" asked Molly a little coldly.

"Ye-es."

"Well?"

"My friend was staying at a country house, and so were both the girls and her mother, and she—"

"Who?" asked Molly.

"The girl whose mother wanted her to marry him. I do hope I am clear. She got him into a quiet corner, and somehow or other my friend found out she had hold of his hand. I don't know how it happened. It just occurred."

"How clever of your friend to find it out," said Molly, sarcastically.

I went on hastily. "And then he saw her head coming nearer and nearer his shoulder, and he didn't know what to do."

"I wonder," said Molly, "he did not call for help."

"You see," I went on, "he was afraid she would propose, or—or—the mother might come. He guessed the mother was pretty near. Then he thought of the other girl, and he got into a dreadful panic. In fact he lost his head."

"It could not have been a great loss," observed Molly disdainfully.

"No-o. But it was the only one he had, and he was accustomed to it. He didn't know what to do. So he said he was already engaged."

"Did he say 'already?'"

"Yes." It was a cold day, but I mopped my brow with my handkerchief.

Molly uttered a peal of silvery laughter. "I am really almost sorry for that girl, but it served her right."

"The girl didn't turn a hair. She simply straightened herself up and asked to whom he was engaged."

"Well?"

"He blurted out the name of the other girl. He couldn't think of any other name."

"To whom, of course, he is not engaged?"

"No. And I don't suppose she would have him."

"Is that your whole story?"

"Very nearly. The girl went away and told her mother, who came up gushingly and congratulated him. She is a true sportswoman. Afterward she went about telling everybody of the engagement, and my friend has had to receive congratulations ever since."

"How awkward!" said Molly, meditatively. "Has the other girl heard of it?"

"Not yet. This all happened yesterday."

"Yesterday?"

I nodded. "And the worst is the other girl is expected to arrive at the Towers almost immediately."

"Dear me," said Molly. "And your friend is at the Towers now?"

"I didn't mean to let it out," I replied, a little abashed.

Molly began to laugh. "It is most amusing; but why did you tell me about it?"

"I want your advice."

"Who is the other girl?" asked Molly, curiously."

"Please don't ask for names," I implored.

"What," I asked, with elaborate indifference, "would you do if you were the other girl?"

Molly stopped and broke off a spring of red berries. They were not so red as her lips. "Of course," she said, "I should be very annoyed."

"Ah, of course," said I, forlornly.

"At any rate, I should pretend to be very annoyed."

"But, really—" I began, delighted.

"Oh that would depend on the man."

"Supposing, for the sake of illustration," said I, surveying the white expanse of a neighboring field, "I was the man?"

"This is nosense," said Molly. "We can't make believe to that extent."

"Why can't we?"

"You could never be so foolish."

"But if—"

"Let us talk about some thing sensible," said Molly with decision.

"But my poor friend is depending on me for advice."

She thought. "Of course, your friend must get away from the Towers before the other girl arrives."

"You are quite clear he ought to go away?" I asked mournfully.

"There can be no doubt about that. Just fancy everybody rushing to congratulate the other girl, and your friend being present at the time. There might be a dreadful scene."

"I can picture it," I said, repressing a groan.

We had arrived at the entrance to the avenue. I stopped and held out my hand.

"Good-bye," I said.

"What do you mean?" she exclaimed.

"I—I am going away. I am the man."

I do not think I am mistaken. The color faded slightly from her face.

"And the other girl?" she queried faintly.

"You are the other girl."

The red replaced the white. She stood quite still, with her eyes bent downward; and then she began to trace figures in the snow with the toe of her tiny boot.

"Good-bye," I repeated.

She looked up. "Of course, I am very angry," she said. And then she smiled and held out her hand. I took it humbly and forgot to relinquish it.

"Mamma will be getting anxious," she remarked. "We must hurry."

But we did not hurry.—Pick-Me-Up.

The Governor's Regard for Sunday.

"It was during the administration of Governor Albion K. Parris," says the Kennebec (Me.) Journal, "that General Lafayette made his memorable tour of the United States, and paid his visit to Maine. It was a Sunday that the General concluded that visit and proposed leaving the State from Portland. Governor Parris remonstrated with him for taking his departure on that day and said: 'If you will postpone your trip until Monday I will myself escort you to the State line with all the military honors.' But Lafayette, accustomed to the Continental Sabbath, insisted on not altering his plans, and left Maine on Sunday, while the Sabbath-honoring Governor of a God-fearing State attended his church service as was his habit."

Hand Painted Shoe Soles.

If you want to be in style, as Paris sees it, have your boot soles illustrated.

Cupids, landscapes, poster girls, actresses, anything, in fact, that Americans can prop up in club windows, and show the passing throng.

This illustrated footwear is now to be seen in the show windows of all the fashionable shoe shops on the Paris boulevard and in the Rue de la Paix.

These figures are hand painted. The wealthier the customer, the higher priced the painter.

A Chinese philosopher has been found in the kitchen in one of our Western college presidents who makes this distinction between the Orient and the Occident: "In China the men boss the women; in America the women boss the men." "Do I 'boss' President Blank?" inquired Mme. President. "No, you no boss him," rejoined the astute Chinaman, "but he do what you say."—Chicago Advance.

The workmen employed are experienced and capable and possess the knack of producing neat products. The prices are reasonable. When work is promised for a certain time the customer gets it without the aggravating delay common to many printeries.

YOU'RE READING THIS?

CERTAINLY!

Well, Mr. Merchant-who-thinks-of-advertising, this is only one of the many corners in THE DAILY PRESS—it isn't the best located one, either; we can give you better—and if this attracts your attention in our endeavor to tell you how good advertising will get you a hearing before the purchasing public, doesn't common sense teach you that if you were having people reading your trade story instead of you're reading our argument about it, that it would be better for your business.

THE DAILY PRESS reaches the purchasing public that makes the profits for the merchant.

We can give you big or little space—but in advertising it is'nt always economy to be sparing in your appropriation.

CHAPTER XIII.

Elizabeth and Sir Antony were still exchanging greetings, the girl shy, glad, and dimly conscious of some new thrilling emotion within her, and Antony lost in the ecstasy of happiness at sight of her, when Bertha Peile came briskly round a corner. She was very busy. The preparations for the dinner party to celebrate her birthday were hourly becoming more extensive.

"Another letter from Feo, Tony," she cried as she greeted Elizabeth with a tender kiss, noting with fresh admiration the girl's delicate loveliness, "and a lot more directions! We are to have a small impromptu dance after dinner. She is going to bring down one or two people to stay at Speede. Here is her letter; you had better read it, because there are at least a dozen messages for you."

"Feo is in her element now," Antony laughed. He took the letter, but though he saw the words clearly enough, he could discover no meaning in them, nothing tangible, while Elizabeth stood there so close to him. "She will be content, aunt Bertha, only when she has turned your dear, neat old home topsy-turvy."

Bertha Peile laughed too.

"She's welcome to do what she likes," she said. "Feo is one of those little creatures who must have excitement of some sort. Gaiety is part of her existence; and, as her London season has necessarily had to come to an end, she wants to work off her superfluous energies down here."

As she spoke, Bertha Peile slipped her hand within Elizabeth's arm, and all three sauntered down the street, to where the old lady's unpretentious little pony carriage was waiting.

"I am glad to know that Feo is going to enjoy herself," Elizabeth said softly.

A dream-like sensation stole over Antony. He could not fully realize that what was happening was not one of those vague visions that came to him so frequently now. The sight of his aunt and this girl so close together and so united stirred him strangely. He did not dare let his eyes rest too long upon Elizabeth. Yet, even in that moment of dreamy ecstasy, he was quick to note her added charms. It had been a great source of pleasure to him to hear of the marvelous benefit that Elizabeth derived from her association with Mrs. Procter. To see her as she was that morning, moving gracefully beside him, lily-like in her straight soft white gown, to hear her speaking to aunt Bertha, to catch her pretty laugh, not only thrilled him with admiration and wonder—it gave him a gladdened sense of peace and lifted a heavy burden from his heart.

"You are coming to our festivities, I hope, Miss Druro?" he said to her hurriedly, waking out of his dreams, as they reached the end of the street.

"Coming! Of course she is coming!" his aunt broke in. "I have just had a few minutes' chat with Anne Procter, and she declares that nothing will do her so much good as to listen to you making a speech, Tony; and where Mrs. Procter goes I am sure Elizabeth will go too!"

"I do not know how to dance, and I have never been to a dinner party in all my life," Elizabeth said; and though she smiled, her lips quivered, and there came into her face an expression which told her the man watching her so intently that, despite her new happiness, her thoughts had not wholly given up their allegiance to the dead.

"You will do just as you deem best," he said very gently.

With lingering hands he put Elizabeth into the little carriage—for Miss Peile had decided to drive her back from the village.

"Tony is dying to come with us," she remarked, with a twinkle in her eyes as she seated herself beside Elizbeth and took the reins from his hand. "He is simply consumed with curiosity, Elizabeth, to see the inside of your old-fashioned school! Mrs. Procter always invited him to tea in the holidays; but, as there were no girls—"

"You had better be careful," Antony said, with one of his old laughs. "You know I am strong, and I can easily upset you into the ditch, Peter and carriage and all, if I feel inclined!"

"I always tell the truth," Bertha Peile observed gravely, "even if it is painful, and you know I am telling the truth now. Whenever he was missing, Elizabeth, I used to be quite sure of knowing where to find him; he was certain to be caught sauntering around the walls of the Abbey Lodge grounds, just to get a glimpse of the fairies within. I don't believe he ever saw one!"

Antony smiled at his aunt's nonsense, and a little color stole into his cheeks.

There was more truth in Bertha Peile's laughing words than she had any knowledge of. More than once during the last few days since he had been at Speede, when the summer light had faded into dusk, Antony had sauntered across the lawn to where the country road lay that led to Stonebury, and, once outside the gates, he had walked slowly on till he had reached the house where Elizabeth now lived; there he would stand, and look through the trees to where the windows glistened in the moonlight, while the soft hush of the summer night rested upon him as though some gentle hand were touching him. He had always returned home soothed by these little pilgrimages, and his sleep during those nights was invariably less broken, less miserable. But they had been stolen pleasures, and his aunt's jesting words had therefore much significance for him.

Elizabeth's pale face took a tinge of color also; the expression of Sir Antony's eyes was hidden from her, but she realized that each word or movement of this man's had a power to attract her, to draw her sympathy.

"You ought to come to the school entertainment this afternoon, Sir Antony," she said, half shyly; "then you would see the 'fairies' all in their best frocks."

"Don't tempt him, Elizabeth. He has all his day's work cut out. Feo will be down here in the evening, and if she does not find everything ready, there will be a tremendous bother." Miss Peile gave a encouraging little touch to her fat pony to make a start, then she checked him again; she motioned to her nephew to come nearer to her. "I fancy that man over there is going to beg from you, Tony," she said. "I have noticed that he has been watching you most attentively for the last few minutes. I saw him in the village yesterday. Don't encourage him," Miss Peile added; "he looks lazy and disreputable."

Tony glanced at the man indicated, a rather seedy-looking individual, with an unshaven chin and the unmistakable air of a London loafer. As soon as he caught Sir Antony's eye, he put his hand to his cap with a military gesture, and the involuntary way in which he straightened his slouching figure seemed to proclaim some former acquaintance with the drill-sergeant. Sir Antony laughed a little at his aunt's words.

"He looks like one of the unemployed. Poor chap! A shilling may as well go to him as to any one else, dear old love!" he said good-humoredly.

Miss Peile however, was not satisfied.

"I don't like his looks," she said. "I can never understand why people of that class come down here. We are prosperous certainly, but we are not rich enough to support beggars!"

"There's a tyrant for you!" exclaimed Antony with a laugh, glancing at Elizabeth.

The young man's haggard look vanished as he smiled. Elizabeth was glad to have such a remembrance of him as the little carriage rolled away at last.

Sir Antony was waiting in the stable yard when his aunt drove in. The shabby-looking man whom her quick eyes had discerned in the village was standing at a little distance. He had evidently been brought there by Sir Antony.

"You are going to give that man work here, Tony?" Miss Peile asked quickly, and with but little satisfaction.

Sir Antony nodded his head.

"I really hadn't the heart to refuse him, aunt Bertha. He asked me for work, not money; and I believe I am doing a real charity in giving him something to do."

Miss Peile walked slowly down the yard beside her nephew. She was one of the kindest-hearted women in the world, but she had one detestation—she could not endure the lazy tramps that in summer-time infested the road that led from London to Stonebury. She decided that they must all be thieves; and she was always afraid lest they should bring fever or some infectious disease to the people with whom she mingled every day of her life.

"What are going to give him to do?" she asked. "There is no vacancy in the house, Tony."

"Oh, I have spoken to Baines! There is always some extra work in the grounds or in the stables. Don't be too hard on the poor wretch, mammy Bertha!" Tony said good-humoredly. "I know he is not as clean as he might be, but a good scrub and a shave will make a difference. At all events, I have promised to let him earn a week's wage; and I thought that, with so much additional work as there will be during the next few days, he might be useful in one way or another. He tells me he has just come out of the hospital. No—not small-pox," Tony added, with a laugh, as Miss Peile gave a little scream—"or any sort of fever. He had a bad accident, I feel sorry for him, and I should like to give him some work, if you don't mind, dear old love!"

Miss Peile responded instantly to the kindness of the words and tone.

"My dearest, is if there were any need to ask me what you may do in your own home! I am a silly old creature, but I am always nervous regarding strange faces, as you know. I invariably imagine that the poor creatures who leave London to find work in the country must be dangerous burglars, or something of that sort."

"Baines will look after him pretty closely," Sir Antony said, as they went into the house; "and, if by the end of the week he does not give a good account of himself, we will pack him off. Somehow I could not refuse him. The truth is, dear, the knowledge of all my money and possessions comes to me as a sort of reproach some-Times." Antony has thrown himself into a chair in the hall, and his face wore a new expression as he spoke. "I ask myself frequently what I have ever done that I should have so very much, while other fellow-creatures—that poor beggar outside, for example—should never know from one day to another where they are to obtain food and lodging. Aunt Bertha, wealth is a great responsibility."

Miss Peile looked at him gravely.

"We can always try to be worthy of our responsibilities, Tony, dear," she said a little wistfully. The tenor of her life had been so ultra-Conservative that these vague suggestions of Socialism from Tony were disquieting, even if not quite comprehensible to her.

The young man steadily met her gaze, then turned away.

"Suppose," he said, his voice still grave—"suppose we are not worthy—suppose we fail all our lives—what then?"

Before Miss Peile could frame a reply, a footman approached her with a telegram.

"From Feo, of course!" Tony cried, reminding himself in time that it would be wise to check a discussion which could only end in real unhappiness to his aunt.

"Read it! I haven't my spectacles," Bertha Peile said. Her hands were trembling. Tony's words and manner had startled her a little.

Sir Antony read out the telegram—

"'Am bringing down two more people. Don't forget all I have told you.—FEO.'"

"By this time tomorrow, mammy Bertha," he said laughingly, "Feo's party will be increased to a hundred. I wonder who these people are whom she is going to bring down?"

"They must be young, or I suppose she would not have suggested a dance."

"That is by no means a sine qua non," said Tony drily—"at least, if a glance now and then at a London ball-room is any criterion. Mammy Bertha I hope you are going to be very smart on this occasion?"

Miss Peile laughed rather ruefully.

"Oh, Feo is managing that too! She took all my measurements with her, and the result will be a gown two sizes too small, which I shall have to wear for her sake."

"Poor little mammy!" Antony laughed. "I suppose there will also be something that I shall have to endure for Feo's sake. I only hope she won't expect me to propose to each of the girls she is bringing down!"

"Feo certainly chooses a new wife for you every ten minutes," Miss Peile said.

She hurried away as she spoke, summoned to settle some household matter, and Antony sat looking straight before him, his face, immediately that he knew he was alone, becoming rigid in expression.

"My wife," he said to himself—and a black veil seemed to rise before his eyes, shutting out the fair summer scene that lay beyond the open door—"my wife! Oh, Heaven, the mockery of the word! Oh, the bitterness—the never-ending despair!"

A WORD OF KINDNESS.

A Comfort to the Old Lady to Know the Lord Had Made the Capitalist.

"Don't take on so about it, Elihu" Mrs. Geehaw was saying. "I don't see ez it's any personal concern of our'n, even ef these her monopolists an' corporationrs do go ahead an' make money. It's a big country an' it's gotter be developed. An' when a man makes a lot o' money 'tain't no good ter 'im onless he spends it, an' so it keeps circ'latin' an' circ'latin' an' doin' bus'ness an' helpin' along."

"That's jus' like your talk. Ye jes' seem ter inj'y bein' under the grindin' heel of these here Wall street fellers."

"I ain't heard o' these Wall street fellers doin' anythin' ter prevent our scratchin' up the groun' weth a plow an' plantin' corn, an' feedin' it ter the hogs an' eatin' the proceeds ef so be we felt hungry."

"Course. Ye always did take sides agin' me, an' I suppose ye allus will. Ye jes' like ter git right down under the iron hoof of despotism and grovel. Thems fellers is responsible for all our misery."

"But, Elihu, we ain't miserable."

"That jes' shows yer foolishness agin. We're so run down an' pushed an' jostled an' crowded that we kin hardly say our souls are our own. You don't realize it 'cause ye ain't heard the folks thet go through the country talkin' about it, same ez I have. I don't blame ye so much fer not realizin' thet we're miserable. I sometimes get ter feelin' kinder comfortable myself when I let my mind wander off o' what these men hez been a-sayin'. But I do blame ye fer stickin' up fur them capitalists."

"But they don't want ter see the country go ter smash any more'n you do. Leastways, ef they do, I don't see what makes 'em."

"It can't be anythin' but pure cussedness. An' I'm agin 'em. Ye kin talk all day, but ye can't find anythin' thet'll make me feel any better towards 'em."

"There's one thing you fergit. They must have their use in this world."

"I don't see it."

"I'm sure of it. I used ter feel kind o' hard towards 'em, tell I got ter thinkin' about 'em in a proper frame o' mind. Whatever ye hear about 'em an' think about 'em an' say about 'em, they's one fact, Elihu, thet ye can't git over; an' thet is, thet the Lord made 'em."—Detroit Free Press.

A Responsive Hearer.

Guests had arrived unexpectedly at the country parsonage on Sunday morning. The weekly supply of butter had run short, so the hospitable host dispatched old Joe, the colored man, to his neighbor, Mr. Paul, whose dairy always boasted a surplus. The parson proceeded to the church with his well-prepared sermon on some of the best sayings of the great apostle, and was well under way with it when old Joe, returning empty-handed, concluded he would quietly slip in and hear his master preach. Just as he entered, the preacher stretched forth his hand in a most impressive interrogation of voice and manner, and called out: "And what did Paul say?" Distinctly sounded through the church old Joe's reply: "He say, Marster, he ain't goin' to let you have no more butter till you pay for dat last you got."

"This is the fourth time you have asked me to marry you," said Miss Cayenne, rather impatiently. "How often do you wish me to refuse you?"

"Well," replied Willie Wishington, "I think three times quite sufficient."

THE TAR'S DAUGHTER

"I was 'shipmates' for six years with old Tom Ravenwood, one of the best known of the knotty, hard-swearing and heard-fighting gunners' mates of the old navy," said a man who put in a long stretch as a ship's writer in the navy.

"Tom couldn't read or write, and, as my billet in the navy was a clerical one, I used to attend to his correspondence for him. His correspondence consisted entirely of letters to his daughter, who was in a convent in Mississippi. The child was about fourteen years old when I first became a shipmate of Tom's and began to write his letters to her, and he had not then seen her for over six years.

"On the foreign stations old Tom used to come aft to my office on the berth deck, after an American mail had arrived and been distributed to the men aboard, and get me to read to him the little bundle of letters that always reached him from his little girl. I found it interesting to trace the development of the child's mind as exhibited in these letters. At first they were childishly bland and commonplace, but as the years went on they grew more womanly and clever and filled with the thoughtfulness of a tender nature, and after awhile, as the girl passed into womanhood, they became simply beautiful specimens of the epistolary art—sweet and frank, and filled with affection for the rough old tar, and longing to see him—for she barely remembered him.

"The girl was bitterly disappointed when, three years after I began to write her father's letters to her, he announced that he'd shipped over, as he had, for another three-year cruise, and that he wouldn't see her for three years more; and, he added, he would then for certain, sure. We switched to the Mediterranean station for that three-years' cruise, and the time passed rapidly enough. The young woman had been sent to another educational institution, and she looked forward to the day when she could clap eyes upon her old blue-jacket father. About a year before the wind-up of the cruise the old man asked her to send him a photograph of herself, but she begged off, saying she wanted, when she met him, to see if he would know her.

"'Mayhap,' said the old man to me, 'th' little one's growed up a bit plain like and don't want to send the pictur of a plain gal to her old dad—as if that 'ud make any difference to me.'

"Well, our ship pulled up at the Brooklyn navy yard just two days before the old man's time was out. His daughter was to meet him across the way in New York. There was a big crowd of the relatives of the officers and men aboard at the yard dock when we pulled alongside. When the plank was thrown out they flocked aboard. Old Tom Ravenwood and I stood at the break of the fo'c'sle, watching the people coming aboard, neither of us expecting anybody. A tall and very lovely young woman of about twenty stepped lightly up the gangway. She was such a thoroughbred in appearance, and so singularly beautiful besides, that the officer of the deck bowed and scraped to her, thinking she was come aboard to see one of the officers aft. The young woman looked about in a bewildered sort of way, and then her eyes caught sight of old Tom, with his sleeves rolled up, showing the tattooed crucifixion on one knotted forearm and a Japanese dragon on the other. The girl had had a tintype, taken years ago, of her father. Well, it was surely enough an affecting thing to see the light that leaped into the eyes of that superb young woman, and to see her glide like a flash up forward—to the surprise of the officer of the deck—into the lump-muscled arms of old Tom Ravenwood, gunners' mate. The scene broke all hands up, I can tell you that. The fellows standing around all coughed foolishly and in a choked sort of way and looked off in the other direction. As for the old man, after he had held his daughter in his arms for a minute or so—looking as embarrassed, and yet happy, as a man could look—said to me, knuckling at his clear old eyes and trying to pry himself loose:

"'Look a-here, mate, jest you keep an eye on this bit o' cargo for me fur half a minit, will ye, ontil I lay below an' see about them amunition hists?'

"But the 'ammunition hoists' were too thin a subterfuge. The old man didn't want to make a show of himself."—Washington Star.

How He Made Himself Get Up.

The Duke of Wellington slept on an iron camp bedstead eighteen inches wide, and argued that "when a man wants to turn over it is time to turn out." Edward Everett Hale quotes this remark of the Duke in the "Ten Times One Record," and takes issue with him. "The principle is well enough," says Dr. Hale, "but I think the detail is wrong. Sleep is far too important to be made uncomfortable." Dr. Hale goes on to tell of various ingenious devices for automatically waking a sleeper. A friend of his fixed his alarm so that at the foreordained moment the bedclothes were dragged from the bed. The same gentleman found another contrivance which worked better. "The alarm struck a match, which lighted the lamp which boiled the water for Rossiter's shaving. If Rossiter stayed in bed too long the water boiled over upon his razor and clean shirt and the prayer-book his mother gave him and Coleridge's autograph and his open pocket-book and all the other precious things he could put in a basin under each when he went to bed, so he had to get up before that moment came."—Chicago Inter-Ocean.

SPORTING.

GOLF.

Next Saturday afternoon the regular monthly handicap play will be resumed on the Hillside Tennis and Golf Club links.

There seems to be grave doubts as to whether Senator Reed really did make the Park Golf Club course in 45. Anyone who doubts this score can accompany the Senator on his next trip around the course and be convinced.

STRIKES AND SPARES.

Interest in bowling is picking up at the Park Club. Last night a team of five were bowling on the alleys and in one game rolled 853 and in the second 876. Among the bowlers was "Doc" Thiers, who started the season last night by making a score of 194.

G.O.P DUAL LEADERSHIP

he has been backing VanDoren strongly and his selection by the convention meant that Reed had accomplished his purpose. It seems likely, however, that the story of the compromise was true to a limited extent for Cooper, the Thompson candidate for the Assembly, was chosen. It will be noticed, however, by examining the foregoing votes, that McMichaels' support came chiefly from the townships in which Senator Reed was the strongest. It may have been a coincidence but it looked peculiar,

Summed up, briefly, the convention put Reed and Thompson on a nearly equal footing in relation to county affairs for each secured one candidate's nomination. It may not be all over yet and the contest for the leadership may result in a split in the county committee. The ticket, as selected, however, will be undoubtedly given the strong support of both factions.

TO SAVE ROESEL.

His Counsel Will Appeal to United States Court.

(Special To The Daily Press.)

Elizabeth, Oct. 19.—There is little likelihood that Louis Roesel will be hanged Oct. 28th for the murder of Farmer James Pitts, of Summit. Roesel is now under sentence of death, and it is understood that all preliminary arrangements have been made for the execution, but his counsel have another step in view that will probably stay the execution for another period.

It is stated that Lawyer Frank Bergen will make application to the United States circuit court for a writ of habeas corpus on the grounds that Roesel is illegally detained. Should the writ be granted it will bring the entire case before the court for review, and it is very improbable that the review could be made before November.

If the writ is refused then an appeal will be taken to the United States supreme court, and that will act as a stay in the case, and the execution will not take place.

UNENVIABLE AFGHAN WOMEN.

The High Caste Mothers Have a Lonely Time of It.

If there are any women in the world who have a right to die of ennui, it is those poor creatures of Afghanistan, the upper-class dames. They spend their days doing absolutely nothing, for they disdain sewing, cooking and general household duties; they leave the care of their children to slaves, and they can neither read nor write.

Generally in a rich house there is one chief slave, a sort of housekeeper, rather a grand person, whom it is always wise to conciliate if you intend having many dealings with that establishment. In summer she is always dressed in purest white; in winter, velvets and brocades are not beyond her reach. She is generally an elderly person, with considerable influence and a good deal of authority.

Then there is another who is a sort of maid to the lady of the house; she is another person with whom it is not wise to quarrel; she is always very much in evidence. She it is who prepares everything for her mistress' toilet, as also for her master's. It is the wife's special duty and privilege, however, when the things are prepared, to wait upon her husband, when he is dressing, to pour the water over his hands and feet, during his religious washings, to spread his prayer carpet, to put his favorite dish before him, and so on.

It is difficult to appreciate the exact position of these Afghan women until one sees the way in which mothers are treated by their sons. They may nurse them when they are sick, tend them when they are young, but let the boys grow to be eleven or twelve years old, and you will hear them tell their mother to "chup sho" (shut up), send them to fetch their caps and expect to be addressed by the mothers as "agha gul," or "agha jon," which means, "my precious master," "master dear."

Cabul mothers seldom have much affection for their children or their children for them; they do not nurse them as babies, and their babyhood is a particularly long one, for they are very backward. They belong to their nurses more than to their mothers till they are two and a half years old, and after that it is their father who notices them and not their mother. —Philadelphia Press.

AN ARTIST IN A LION'S DEN.

A French Painter Sketches the King of Beasts at the Chicago Zoo.

M. Rene Chateau, Frenchman, painter and vocalist, charmed the wild animals at the Zoo the other day, with his rich tenor, and sketched a lion on canvas.

Chateau doesn't profess to be a tamer of the king of beasts, yet he climbed into the lions' den with Mlle. Plauka, dragged his paints in after him, and, gazing with impunity into the open jaws of five man-eaters, began to mix his colors. Mlle. Plauka, with a whip and a .32-calibre revolver, quelled the beasts.

There was some commotion in the cage when the artist came in with his easel. Old Nero, the boss of the den, was an unwilling model. He was not pleased with the idea of going into history in yellow ochre, and he made his displeasure evident by a series of long and loud roars. Then the painter began to sing to the accompaniment of the piano on the stage. Nero joined in the chorus for a while, and then lapsed into silence, keeping his eyes critically on the artists work. Chateau sang "The Palms" through twice in French, and by that time his sketch was completed.

Nero's four companions made very little trouble. Mlle. Plauka's whip was not used once, as the sight of it was enough to command silence. Then, again, the artist's voice seemed to please them, for during his song they lay quietly at his feet, apparently less uneasy than when they were alone. —Chicago Inter-Ocean.

SHE MADE A SHORT CIRCUIT.

Stopped the Electric Current By Putting a Seat Across the Wires.

A little 13-year-old Pawnee county miss, Bertha Leonard, has lately given the Western Union and Postal Telegraph companies an unlimited amount of trouble in a most unique and peculiar way. Bertha's daily duty was to herd and watch a large drove of her father's cattle, whose range was near the Western Union and postal telegraph lines.

For some time past at irregular intervals during almost every day these lines absolutely failed to work, and the trouble seemed to be somewhere in the vicinity of where this girl ranged her father's cattle, but, try as the line repairers would it could not be definitely located. Finally it was discovered that Bertha, in order to get a better view of the herd, had driven railroad spikes into a telegraph pole, so that she could climb it, and that she would, whenever she got weary watching the cattle from the ground, climb the pole, pull up a board by means of a cord, place it across the wires, seat herself on the board, and spend an hour or two watching the herd from her uniquely improvised elevated station. Whenever the board happened to be damp or wet, and the frequent rains this year have kept the board wet most all the time, it destroyed the electric circuit and practically cut off all communication between Denver and Kansas City.

When discovered and informed of the damage she was doing to the business of the telegraph lines, Bertha was greatly surprised, and was apparently utterly ignorant of the fact that her seat on the wires interfered in the slightest degree with the working of the lines.—Kansas City Times.

HE DESIRED AN EASIER JOB.

Thirty-Six Years As a Prisoner Preferable To Two Hours Hiding.

The writer remembers once riding out of San Francisco over the Southern Pacific in a day coach that was like the land of fire, the month being August. At an outer station of the city of Oakland a man who looked poor but not proud, came aboard, and making down the aisle, ducked under two seats which were set back to back.

"Some poor devil who is broke and wants to beat his way out of this burning country," one of the other passengers said. "Let's help him."

So when the conductor came in every one of us found something wrong with his ticket and kept the official angrily busy for half an hour longer than his usual time, so that he had to bolt without wasting a moment in looking for stowaways. At Port Costa we began to hear labored breathing under the seat and twenty miles further there was an eruption and out of the volcano of overturned cushions came our hidden protege.

"Gentlemen," he said, "when I was sentenced to forty years at San Quentin I thought it was tough, and at the first chance I broke. If I could only reach Sacramento I would be all right, for I have friends there. But, gentlemen, without consulting the map, I believe I am safe in saying that Sacramento is at least two hours distant. I have only a mere bagatelle of thirty-six years to put in at the prison, and I think that, after all, considering the weather and two more hours under them seats, I'll just sit up here like a gentleman and meet Sheriff Bill Brice when he comes aboard and go back to the easy job. I prefer the thirty-six years to the two hours."—Chicago Record.

BRILLIANT WEDDING AT TRINITY CHURCH

Marriage of Miss Laura L. Emmons and Gilbert B. Fletcher.

RECEPTION AT PARK CLUB.

PRETTY CEREMONY PERFORMED AT 7 O'CLOCK LAST EVENING.

Charming Young Woman From North Plainfield Wedded to Son of Pastor of New Market Baptist Church—Beautiful Gowns of Bridal Party—Ceremony Performed by Groom's Father.

In the presence of many well wishing relatives and friends, Miss Laura Louise Emmons, eldest daughter of former Councilman and Mrs. Peter A. Emmons, of Jackson avenue, and Gilbert Boughton Fletcher, of New York, son of Rev. Frank Fletcher, of Dunellen, plighted their troth last evening at 7 o'clock in the Trinity Reformed church. It was one of the prettiest church weddings of the autumnal season and passed off without aught to mar the beauty of the occasion.

The church presented a most charming appearance. Palms and potted plants were grouped about the pulpit and platform in artistic array. Green and white were the predominent colors. The front of the platform and desk were hidden by plants arranged in pyramidical effect.

Long before the hour set for the ceremony, the guests began to gather, the ladies in their delicate-hued evening gowns and the men in the conventional evening dress. The first pews were marked off by a cordon of ribbons for the relatives of the couple. Half hidden behind the floral bower, W. E. MacClymont presided at the organ and rendered a programme of well-chosen selections until the hour of seven came. Then the majestic strains of the Lohengrin wedding march rang out.

The four bridemaids, all gowned in white organdie over yellow taffeta, and carrying handsome bouquets of yellow chrysanthemums, descended from the choir loft and walked slowly up the centre aisle to the entrance. There they turned and made their way to the front of the church, followed by the bride leaning on the arm of her father. The bride looked very beautiful in a gown of white satin, en train, with chiffon trimming. She wore a tulle veil, caught up with a bunch of orange blossoms. She carried a shower bouquet of white roses and lilies-of-the-valley. After the bride was the maid of honor, Miss Grace Dunham, of New York, who was gowned in organdie over white taffeta. Her bouquet was of white chrysanthemums.

The bridemaids were Miss Hester Holman, of New Brunswick; Miss Effie VanAnglen, of New Brunswick; Miss Priscilla Beatrice Emmons, of this city, all cousins of the bride, and Miss Grace Emmons, sister of the bride.

As the bridal procession started down the central aisle the four ushers—John G. MacLaughlin and William Slape, of this city; George Harrison, of Flushing, and Edward Maxson, of Jersey City—kept apace on the side aisles, two on either side. Then the groom, accompanied by the best man, his brother, Loren Fletcher, of Boston, entered the sanctuary from one of the side doors, near the pulpit, while the officiating clergyman made his appearance from the other side. He was Rev. Frank Fletcher, pastor of the New Market Baptist church, and father of the groom.

The converging processions met and grouped about a white gate decorated with smylax, behind which the clergyman stood. Then the marriage of the Dutch Reformed church was performed and the couple were united with the ring. After the closing blessing, the music, which had continued through the service but so low as not to interupt the ceremony, broke forth into the exultant strains of the Mendelssohn wedding march.

Mr. and Mrs. Fletcher led the bridal party up the aisle followed by the maid of honor and the best man, the bridemaids and the ushers.

From the church, the wedding party went to the clubhouse of the Park Club, on Washington avenue where the reception was held. There were 150 guests present consisting of the relatives and more intimate friends of the couple, together with the out-of-town guests. The building was artistically decorated, the prevailing colors were green and white. The decorations at both church and club house were in charge of Mrs. Denton.

After the newly married couple had received the congratulations of their many friends, the wedding supper

POPULAR COUPLE WED.

MARRIAGE OF MISS KOLLER AND T. A. KURZHALS, JR., LAST NIGHT.

Held at the Home of the Bride on Lincoln Place—Ceremony Performed by Rev. J. O. McKelvey Under Floral Bell.

A pretty wedding of last evening was that of Miss Louise Koller, daughter of Michael Koller, of No. 27 Lincoln place, in the borough, to Theodore A. Kurzhals, Jr., of West Second street, this city. The wedding took place at 8 o'clock at the home of the bride in the presence of the relatives and near friends of the contracting parties. The officiating clergyman was Rev. Joseph O. McKelvey, pastor of Warren chapel.

The bride was gowned in white satin trimmed with lace and ribbons, and she carried a bouquet of bridal roses. She was attended by her sister, Miss Mamie Koller, as bridemaid, who was also gowned in white and carried pink roses. The best man was E. H. Clevely, of this city.

The marriage was performed beneath a floral bell of roses, which was suspended from an arch of evergreen and autumn leaves. The effect of the decorations was very pretty. In the several rooms there were decorations of white and green.

Following the congratulations which were showered upon the popular couple, a reception was held, during which a sumptuous supper was served to the guests.

During the early part of the evening Mr. and Mrs. Kurzhals left their friends and departed for the North Avenue station, where they boarded a train for New York. They will be absent about one week and will visit many points of interest in New York State. In their departure they did not escape a shower of rice and old shoes. It was generally believed by their many friends that they were going directly to their new home at 430 West Sixth street, but they didn't.

The large collection of costly presents of both a useful and ornamental nature evidenced the high esteem held by many for the recipients. The bride is very popular among a large circle of friends, and is an active worker in Warren chapel. The groom is also exceedingly popular and he has a host of friends. He has furnished his new home at 430 West Sixth street, and he and his wife will reside there on their return.

SERVICES AT DUNELLEN M. E. CHURCH ENDED LAST NIGHT.

Tonight the Supper and Entertainment Will Bring the Affair to a Close—Congratulatory Speeches Last Evening.

(Special To The Daily Press.)

Dunellen, Oct. 20—The last of the anniversary exercises of the Methodist church were held last night and now, after the supper and entertainment tonight, the anniversary will be a thing of the past.

A. I. Martine, of the Presbyterian church; Rev. Frank Fletcher, of the Baptist church; Rev. F. E. Peterson, of the Seventh-Day Baptist church; Rev. W. C. O'Donnell, of the Monroe Avenue M. E. church, Plainfield; Rev. G. W. Smith, D. D., presiding elder of the district, and James McGee, of Plainfield.

The addresses were all interesting, and in them the church members were congratulated upon the splendid work they have done in the past. Mr. McGee at one time was a great help to the church, financially and otherwise.

SAYS WILLIAMS IS IN THE LAND OF LIVING.

Reported as Dead, But in Reality He is Alive.

TRICK TO GET INSURANCE.

STRANGE STORY TOLD BY PETITION FILED IN ORPHANS' COURT.

J. Fred MacDonald Asks That the Administrator's Papers Issued to Him to Settle Williams' Estate be Revoked, as He Has Strong Belief That Williams is Alive—Story of Disappearance.

Ever since last summer when Walter Gordon Williams, the lawyer, suddenly left town and was next heard from while on his way to the Klondike gold fields, it has been generally suspicioned that Harry B. Williams, his brother, who was reported as being drowned by falling from a steamer in Nantucket Sound Dec. 8th last, was alive and well in the western states, where he had gone in some surreptitious way in the effort to hoax the insurance companies into paying several thousand dollars' worth of property.

The feeling that Williams was alive was confirmed officially yesterday when in the Orphan's Court at Elizabeth a petition was filed from J. Fred MacDonald asking that his appointment as administrator of the estate of Harry B. Williams, late of Plainfield, be revoked, and Mr. MacDonald's bond, given by him to the court, be returned and cancelled.

This action is taken on the ground that Williams, instead of being dead, is to the best of the administrator's knowledge and belief in the land of the living. The petition sets forth that on December 8th, 1897, young Williams was supposed to have been drowned in Nantucket Sound, and, having died intestate, an application was made to the Surrogate on January 4th, 1898, by Walter E. Williams, the young man's father; Sarah E. Williams, his mother, Walter G. Williams, his brother, all being nearest of kin, for the appointment of James MacDonald as administrator, and letters to that effect were issued by the Orphan's Court on that date.

On May 10th last Mr. MacDonald collected from the Standard Life Insurance Company of Detroit, Mich., $1,500, being an insurance that Harry B. Williams has on his life. On September 23d last Administrator MacDonald was notified by counsel for the insurance company that Williams was alive and that the company wanted this money refunded

MacDonald further avers in his petition that the mother of the supposed dead man had written a letter to a party, and which was shown to MacDonald. In this letter, Mrs. Williams states that her son is alive.

MacDonald further states to the court that upon information and belief he is satisfied that Williams was alive on January 4th last, when the letters of administration were granted.

The administrator further sets forth that on December 31, 1897, both the father and brother of Harry B. Williams conveyed to Sarah E. Williams, his mother, all their right, title and interest in his estate, and that she is now the sole legatee.

Judge Vail, after the petition was read, made an order summoning Sarah E. Williams to appear before the Orphan's Court November 2d, and show cause why the appointment of James MacDonald as administrator should not be revoked, in accordance with the application.

Craig A. Marsh represented Administrator MacDonald in the matter.

The disappearance and alleged death of Williams is well remembered in this city. Together with his brother, Walter, and two other young men, Williams started for Maine ostensibly on a hunting trip and possibly to look into some mica mines that Walter had previously investigated. The morning that it was alleged that he was drowned, Williams was said to have been suddelny taken sick and to have gone on deck to get some fresh air. While there he was seized with a vomiting spell, and while leaning over the side rail of the steamer it was claimed by his brother, Walter, who said he was a witness of the affair, that the sick man lost his balance and fell into the sea. It was not yet daylight at the time the drowning was alleged to have taken place. The cry of man overboard was sent to the officers of the ship, and the ship was stopped and a boat lowered and the surrounding expanse of water searched for half an hour afterwards in the endeavor to rescue Williams. He could not be found, however, and the steamer resumed its course to Portland, Me.,

HER DUTY IS WITH DONS

MISS WEBB TELLS OF MISSIONARY WORK IN SPAIN.

The Government Works Hand in Hand With the Jesuit Priests and Aim to Retard the Progress of Protestantism.

The evening session of the twenty-eighth annual meeting of the Philadelphia Branch of the Woman's Board of Missions in the Congregational church was opened last night with devotional exercises led by Rev. C. L. Goodrich, pastor of the church. A quartette, composed of Miss Minnie G. Morse, Miss Charlotte Messersmith, M. C. VanArsdale and Wyatt Barnes, sang an anthem before the order of services was taken up again.

A statement of the work, as it was called, was given by two prominent ladies of the branch, Miss Emma L. Bridges, of Westfield, president of the Philadelphia Branch, and Mrs. C. A. Savage, of Orange Valley, who took the place of Mrs. A. H. Bradford, president of the Woman's Home Missionary Union.

Miss Bridges, the first speaker, is an easy talker, and described the work done by the missionaries in foreign lands, Japan, Turkey and India. Miss Bridges' talk was upon foreign missions, while Mrs. Savage devoted her time to describing the work being done at home.

Miss Anna F. Webb, who is a missionary to Spain, but who has been in this country since the late war, gave an address upon that country. Miss Webb has spent many years in Spain.

She said that within the past three years religious persecutions have begun again, and today the Protestant Christians are having a hard time of it. There are two reasons for this. One is that the queen is a bigoted Catholic, and is giving more encouragement to the Jesuit priests than ever. Another reason is that the priests are aware that the Protestant missionaries are awake and alert. They are beginning to use their efforts to thwart them in their work. An earnest worker, Rev. Mr. Gulick, has been in this country for two years trying to collect money to build a school. He was having fair success until the war broke out, when the American people began to say, "What, give money to build a school in Spain? O, no."

Miss Webb described the girls' schools in which a great part of the work was done, and the opposition she had to encounter from the professors, the faculties, etc. Work was progressing nicely when the war broke out, and the work had to be given up for the time. But Miss Webb and her assistants and coworkers are only waiting, many of them in France, for the treaty to be signed. Miss Webb, in closing, referred to a vase of red and yellow flowers which were placed side by side with "Old Glory," and spoke feelingly of the colors of her adopted country.

Mrs. I. V. Woodbury, of Boston, delivered the address of the evening, and spoke on home missions. In introducing Mrs. Woodbury, Mr. Goodrich said although he had never met her, she was his sister, for it seems that his sister and Mrs. Woodbury had married brothers.

While the offering was being taken, Miss Messersmith rendered a pleasing solo.

This morning and afternoon the sessions were continued. The principal speakers this morning were Mrs. I. V. Woodbury, of the American Missionary Association; Miss M. Dean Moffatt, of the Congregational Home Missionary Association; and Miss Adelene Moffatt, of Northampton, Mass.

The election of officers for the Philadelphia Branch took place yesterday afternoon and resulted as follows: President, Miss Emma L. Bridges, of Westfield; vice presidents, Miss Susan Hayes Ward, of Newark, Mrs. Amory H. Bradford, of Montclair, Mrs. C. H. Richards, of Philadelphia, Mrs. S. M. Neuman, of Washington, D. C., Mrs. M. E. Dwight, of Plainfield, and Mrs. F. W. Baldwin, of East Orange; recording secretary, Mrs. Robert Johnston, of Westfield; foreign secretary, Mrs. I. H. Demorest, of Closter; home secretaries, Miss Mabel Brown, of Newark, and Mrs. W. L. Clift, of Washington, D. C; Junior secretaries, Mrs. Martin Welles, of Westfield and Miss Ella J. Morrison, of Washington, D. C.; treasurer, Miss Emma Flarell, of Paterson; auditor, Mrs. A. L. White, of Paterson.

THE BOARD OF TRADE TALKS OF TROLLEY.

Resolution Passed Favoring the Present Trolley Ordinance.

ONLY FEW VOTED, THOUGH.

ALL SORTS OF OPINIONS EXPRESSED BY MEMBERS.

Mr. Woolston Couldn't See Great Value of Franchise—C. W. Runyon Offered a Resolution—Ex-Mayor Hegeman Favored City Getting as Much as Possible.—Newspapers Criticised for Opposing Ordinance.

The Board of Trade at its regular meeting last evening suffered a severe attack of "trolleyosis," and what at first appeared to be a tame meeting ended in a discussion such as has not been heard since this distinguished organization grappled with the celebrated building ordinance. Mr. Woolston started the ball rolling by asking if there was any one present who knew the value of a franchise. As for himself, he said, he could not see but what the City Council is doing the best for the interests of the city, and he could not see where the value of the franchise comes in. "We need the trolley out Arlington avenue toward the cemetery, and it's a great mistake holding on hoping to secure more from the trolley," continued Mr. Woolston.

Manager Charles Runyon, of the telephone company, was the next speaker. He said: "I am not like Mr. Kinsman who says that he is the only one in Plainfield who knows what a trolley franchise is worth, and after reading Mr. Serrell's article I cannot understand his argument. The trolley is just as valuable to the city as it is to the railroad. It cost the present company a good deal to locate here and they deserve some consideration. The Keas trolley scheme has nothing to do with the questions that now confront us." Mr. Runyon later in the evening offered a resolution which was adopted, that the Board of Trade favor an extension of the trolley to Scotch Plains according to the present ordinance. Many of the members present would not vote at all and so it was carried by a few.

R. A. Meeker spoke somewhat in favor of the extension on the present terms and stated that if the city decided to asphalt any of the streets on the line of the road the company would have to pay their share, and on Front street the company would have to pay one half where there are double tracks. He thought the city would gain much by increased value of property.

Elston French favored the present arrangement, but thought in addition that it should be made for a term of ten, twenty or thirty years, and that low fares should be secured during certain hours of the day.

Harry C. Runyon spoke at some length on the subject and stated that while he did not know the value of a franchise he did know what consents are worth. In every case where people now have the trolley they are delighted and would not have it taken away. He was afraid that if the Council should hold out too long the city would be the loser,

B. A. Hegeman, Jr., talked as follows: "The granting of a trolley franchise is a delicate matter. The trolley company came to North Plainfield and asked the Council for our main highway. We knew it would drive business away from that street, which it did. We in the Council at that time were sworn to protect the people, but the people thought it a crime to refuse the franchise. They attended the meetings and forced us to grant it, while a representative of the company stood there laughing at us. The trolley is a benefit and they are a profitable investment. The great question is to settle on an equitable amount to be asked by the city. Steam railroads are forced to buy every inch of land and trolley roads come along and parallel them by getting a franchise for nothing. Today one can ride from the Market Street station, Newark, to Glen Ridge for six cents. That is one result of the trolley. This Board should strive to help the Council in its actions. Let us get as much as we can in fairness."

President Lounsbury made a few remarks in which he thought the Plainfield papers had overlooked the property owners' interest. They oppose the granting of the trolley franchise, he said, when the Council know more than the papers what can be secured. No one has shown any interest in this matter except Mr. Kinsman. The papers seem to be doing it all.

Mr. Woolston stated that Mr. Bar-

CHARGES NOT PROVEN.

MRS. OHL'S ASSAULT CASE AGAINST ADAM BLAIR WAS DISMISSED.

She Alleged That He Treated Her Brutally, But Couldn't Sustain the Allegations—Blair's Story Was Corroborated.

Mrs. Caroline J. Ohl, of Central avenue, was not able to sustain her charge against Adam Blair, the liveryman, for assault and battery yesterday afternoon when the examination was held. The defendent was therefore discharged.

It was a strange tale that Mrs. Ohl told, and if it could have been proven it must have made Blair out a brute. But the charges were reputed by Blair who was able also to produce a witness of such infallibility that the court was obliged to ignore Mrs. Ohl's statements, and dismiss the complaint.

Mrs Ohl's story was that she had heard of Mr. Blair's circulating stories about her horses being half starved and riden to death. So Monday afternoon Mrs. Ohl says she rode up to the stable and demanded to be shown a horse belonging to Andrew J. Hope, of the Revere House, that she had been instrumental in selling to Mr. Hope a few days before and which was included in Blair's category.

Mrs. Ohl said that while she was in the stall patting the horse Blair rushed up, seized her roughly, pushed her against the side of the stall, struck her in the face, pushed her out of the stall, threw her down and struck her again. Mrs. Ohl said that when Blair first laid hands on her she raised the riding whip she carried and struck him two sharp blows with it.

Blair's story was different. He said that Mr. Hope, the owner of the horse in question, had left orders with him not to allow any one to see the animal. These instructions Mr. Blair said he tried to follow out, so when Mrs. Ohl appeared in the stable Monday and went into the stall beside the horse, he warned her several times to go away, and then when she refused to obey, he walked up to her, laid his hand on her shoulder, and ejected her as gently as possible, she all the time struggling and striking out with her riding whip.

Jacob Guyn, one of Blair's workmen, swore that he stood near and saw the whole affair and corroborated his employer's story in detail. Although Justice Nash cross-questioned him closely about his story, Jakey stuck to it, and wasn't at all embarrassed.

GIANT PRESSES BUILT.

GREAT ACTIVITY AT WALTER SCOTT PRESS WORKS NOW.

Works Running Every Night Until 10 o'Clock—Good Prospect For the Future—Big Press For New York Times.

The wave of prosperity has struck the Walter Scott Printing Machine Works and the shop is now run every night until 10 o'clock. There seems to be plenty of all kinds of work and from present indications it is likely that the shop will be run day and night during the coming winter. The company has recently erected for the New York Times a large printing and folding machine which prints papers of different sizes up to thirty-two pages. It prints upon four rolls of paper simultaneously and associates the products in one paper. It is driven by an electric motor forty-horse power attached to the main driving shaft of the press. The motor was made by the American Engine Works at Bound Brook.

The company has recently shipped the largest lithographic printing press ever constructed. It prints from two stones sheets of 45x70 inches in two colors. The machine weighs twenty-two tons. In its construction Mr. Scott has introduced several new mechanical movements.

DEMOCRATS MEET IN OLD SOMERSET.

No Lively Contests For County Nominations.

THE COUNTY CONVENTION.

S. S. CHILDS, OF BERNARDSVILLE, TO RUN FOR ASSEMBLY.

Selah Schoonmaker, of Millstone, Will Be Democratic Candidate For Sheriff—Convention Held at Somerset Hall—Temporary Organization — A Rather Quiet Gathering—Leaders Are Present.

(By a Staff Represen'ative.)

Somerville, Oct. 20, 2:45 p. m.—After the convention reassembled the reports of the committees were received. Nominations for sheriff were then called.

John Groendike, of Hillsboro, nominated Selah Schoonmaker, of South Somerville. There were no other candidates and Mr. Schoonmaker was regularly nominated by acclamation.

The nomination of the candidate for the Assembly was next announced. Samuel S. Childs, of Bernards, was nominated by the chairman of that delegation. James Trewin, of North Plainfield, seconded it.

Peter Hall, of Neshanic, nominated M. Mount Corle, of Branchburg, and made an eloquent speech, saying that the county wanted a resident, not a "rooster," to represent it in the Assembly.

The ballot was taken and resulted in a vote of 40 to 22 in favor of Childs. The vote was then made unanimous.

For the two coroners, the vote was as follows: John M. Brady, of Raritan, 63; Dr. D. C. Adams, of North Plainfield, 34; Dr. J. F. Robinson, of South Bound Brook, 24.

The first two were declared the nominees and their election was made unanimous.

Mr. Childs and Mr. Schoonmaker were then escorted to the platform and thanked the convention for the favors bestowed.

Somerville, October 20.—Today it is the turn of the Democrats from Somerset county to gather here for the county convention. There is the usual gathering of the leaders and the customary button-holing of the delegates. So far, there have been no startling developments. There are several candidates in line for each nomination, but in both instances there is one whose support is so strong as to leave the others in the shade.

Selah Schoonmaker, of Millstone, appears to be almost sure of the shrievalty nomination. He is a general favorite and is considered a strong man for the place. His fellow-townsman, Adam Hummer, is also in line but his boom is not gigantic. The name of Calvin McMurtry, of Somerville, has been used but he refuses to run under any circumstances.

S. S. Childs, of Bernards, is the popular man for Assemblyman. He is the Childs of restaurant fame in New York but lives in Bernardsville. He will agree to run if there is no fight but refuses to make any contest for the nomination. That may mean that the others will be asked to give up even before the nominations are made and allow Mr. Childs to be nominated by acclamation. A little boom sprang up this morning for T. P. Gallagher, of Raritan, but it may be squelched.

As court was in session the convention was called to order by Dr. Taylor, of Millstone, at Somerset Hall at 11 o'clock. W. J. Logan, of Bridgewater, was made temporary chairman and Horace Coddington, of Warren, secretary. The latter was elected by ballot over E. V. Cruiser, of Montgomery, by a vote of 20 to 17.

There are 62 delegates entitled to sit in the convention and most of them are present. The reports of the convention officers from the different townships were made. The North Plainfield delegates reported that Richard McCullough had been made chairman of the delegation. The committeemen chosen were L. B. Bodine on permanent organization; W. M. Demler on resolutions; L. M. Bird on rules, and Andrew Love, Sr., on credentials. The convention then adjourned to meet at 1:30 o'clock.

The committees met in the hall for organization. Horace Coddington, of Warren, was chosen chairman of the committee on resolutions, and W. J. Tunison, of Somerville, as secretary. A platform was drawn up endorsing

EVACUATION OF CUBA.

Progress of the Embarkation of Spanish Troops.

Washington, Oct. 20.—General Wade, president of the American evacuation commission in Cuba, has telegraphed the war department that six thousand Spanish soldiers had been embarked already for Spain and that arrangements had been completed, of which the American commissioners had been duly notified, by the Spanish commissioners, for the embarkation of 40,000 more in the near future.

On the whole, this rate of progress, in view of the limited resources of Spain, is believed to be reasonable. It is realized that the Spanish government is not able to command unlimited transport service, if for no other reason than for lack of cash, obliging it to rely entirely upon the government-aided Compagnie Transatlantique, whose stock of vessels already has been heavily drawn upon, under the exigencies of the war.

So long as a disposition is exhibited to carry out in good faith the evacuation of the island, our government is not likely to make complaint, and the statement that the American commissioners at Havana delivered themselves of a formal ultimatum on the subject is said to be erroneous.

This conclusion, however, does not apply to the transfer of sovereignty, and while permitting the presence of Spanish troops in Cuba on and after December 1, it is the present purpose of the war department to take complete possession of the entire civil establishment of the island on the date mentioned, just as General Wood did in Santiago province.

This may happen even while the Spanish commissioners at Paris are still desperately striving to secure consideration by the joint commission of questions affecting the Cuban debt.

Harold Frederic Dead.

London, Oct. 20.—Harold Frederic, the London correspondent of the New York Times, died yesterday morning from heart disease.

He had been in poor health for two months, but was supposed to be recovering until unfavorable symptoms developed Tuesday. He only recently revised the press sheets of his story, "Gloria Mundi," and just previous to his illness completed the manuscript of his latest work, "The Market Place."

Harold Frederic was born at Utica on August 19, 1856, and was graduated from Hamilton College when he was 20 years old. He joined the staff of the Utica Herald in 1876, and four years later became editor of that paper.

He was the editor of the Albany Journal from 1882 to 1884, when he went to London as the correspondent of the Times.

He was the author of several novels, the best known of which are "Seth's Brother's Wife" and "The Damnation of Theron Ware."

Retirement of Gen. Jacob F. Kent

Washington, Oct. 20.—Major General Jacob F. Kent, who was last week promoted to the rank of Brigadier general in the regular army from colonel of the Twenty-fourth infantry, has been retired at his own request, in accordance with the law which permits an officer who has served more than forty years to retire if he wishes.

This does not affect General Kent's rank and status in the volunteers. He is sixty-three years of age, and would have been retired for age next year. He commanded a division at Santiago.

Guarding Against Leprosy

Sacramento, Cal., Oct. 20.—The state board of health has appointed Dr. C. A. Ruggles, president of the board, to visit the Hawaiian islands to learn the extent of the presence of leprosy, and to report measures to prevent its introduction into the state of California. Since the annexation of Hawaii the inhabitants are free to come to these ports, and it is the intention of the board of healthh to prepare a report for submission to the coming legislature which will suggest safeguards against the spread of the disease to these shores.

To Check Gov. Tanner

Springfield, Ill., Oct. 20.—Certificates of the election and inauguration of Governor Tanner have been obtained of the secretary of state by a representative of the Chicago-Virden Coal Company, and it is supposed that they will be used in injunction proceedings against Governor Tanner for his interference with the unloading of negro miners at Virden.

Premier Brisson said to Wish to Retire.

GEN. LAWTON RETURNS

Major-General Discusses the Situation in Eastern Cuba.

DEAD HEROES SENT HOME

Says That the Existence of the Cuban Army Retards the Solution of the Problem, but That He Expect to See the Troops Disbanded. Bodies Brought on the Transport Michigan.

New York, Oct. 20.—Brigadier General H. W. Lawton of the military department of Eastern Cuba, has arrived in this city accompanied by his aides. The general, who has received a leave of absence for sixty days on account of ill health, looked fairly well, and said that the voyage had done him a great deal of good.

Speaking of the condition of affairs in Santiago and other portions of eastern Cuba, General Lawton had the following to say:

"The general situation is good, and General Wood, who is now in charge, is rushing the sundry work to completion as fast as possible. The people down there claim that in the history of Santiago the city was never so clean as it is at the present time. Business is reviving also, and confidence among business men is almost completely restored. At first they were afraid that the United States government would not afford them sufficient protection, but that apprehension has disappeared and capitalists are now investing money and naturally business prospects are booming. The people have accepted the United States government with the utmost confidence."

When asked as to the feeling in general about annexation, the general looked quizzically at his questioner and said that he was not prepared to talk about the matter just now.

Continuing to talk generally, the general said:

"The great trouble is that the Cubans have an army. However, the great majority of the Cuban troops are anxious to disband. I was fortunate in having portions of the Cuban army under me, and was on intimate and most friendly terms with General Calixto Garcia. This friendship brought about a very much better state of feeling between the American troops and those in Garcia's command than had existed before. No serious breach of the peace and no robberies have been reported as having occurred in eastern Cuba. It is unlike Porto Rico, as the inhabitants acknowledge civil jurisdiction. The percentage of fever among the inhabitants is lower than in Porto Rico, and with improved sewerage and more perfect sanitary arrangements the danger of fever must be considerably lessened. As I said before, a good many of the Cuban soldiers are gradually leaving the army and going to their plantations or returning to their civil occupations. I will make a full report of the existing conditions in Cuba, but further than what I have said I do not wish to make any forecast just now."

The transport Michigan, which brought General Lawton's party, had one hundred and ninety passengers on board, among whom were several convalescents and discharged soldiers. There were also some sick men on board, all but two of whom were able to go to their homes.

These two are Private Charles W. Jones, Company G, Fifth infantry, and Private Levy Marshall, Company M of the same regiment.

Both men were transferred to the Long Island College Hospital, Brooklyn, where they will be cared for until they have recovered from the effects of the fever from which they are suffering.

The dead bodies of two officers and two privates were brought from Santiago.

That of Colonel Charles A. Wikoff of the Twenty-second infantry, who was killed during the first day of the attack on Santiago, was taken to Governor's island, whence it will be taken to Easton, Pa., and after the funeral services have been held there, the body will be buried at Arlington, Va.

The body of Captain A. M. Wetherell of Company A, Sixth cavalry, who was killed in the charge on San Juan hill, was taken to the city, but arrangements for the funeral have not yet been made.

The other two bodies were those of Private William E. Cheever, Company I, Seventy-first regiment, and Private Louis V. Skinner of Chester, N. J., who belonged to Company B, Seventy-first regiment.

These bodies were also brought to this city, and will be taken care of by local undertakers.

Dewey Will Not Leave Yet.

Washington, Oct. 20.—Secretary Long says that the reports that Admiral Dewey would return to the United States were erroneous, as the navy department had no such information.

It has been suggested to Admiral Dewey several times that he go to Paris to advise the American peace commission on the situation in the Philippines, but he has adhered to his purpose to remain at Manila until the Philippine question has been settled, or all danger of trouble there has passed.

Fire Destroys a Boat House.

Boston, Oct. 20.—The boat house of the Shawmut Rowing Association was gutted by fire yesterday morning. All the rowing shells, wherries and the eight-oared boats owned by the club were destroyed.

The cause of the fire is unknown. The loss is estimated to be $2,000, probably covered by insurance.

President's Congratulations.

Washington, Oct. 20.—The following cable message has been sent to General Brooke at San Juan, Porto Rico:

"Yourself and your associates of the commission have my sincere congratulations.

"WILLIAM McKINLEY."

Offer to Bet on Roosevelt's Plurality.

New York, Oct. 20.—In Wall street yesterday an offer to bet $100 to $400 was made that Roosevelt beats Van Wyck by 50,000 plurality.

CHICAGO'S BIG PARADE.

Bad Weather Does Not Interfere With Chicago's Peace Jubilee.

Chicago, Ill., Oct. 20.—The spectacular and crowning glory of the week of jubilee was yesterday's great street parade. It started from the corner of Michigan avenue and Congress street promptly at the time scheduled and for four hours it moved swiftly and with scarcely a single halt through the principal streets in the business portion of the city.

The one drawback was the weather. The ill fortune which has attended the jubilee in this respect since the commencement of the ceremonies still continued.

The storm of the last three days marred in sime instances the beauty of the decorations, but these had been repaired as far as possible, and it was through streets gay with fluttering streamers and tossing banners, under arches brilliant with bunting and bright coors that the parade moved on its way.

It is estimated that fully twenty-five thousand people witnessed the parade from these stands alone. The sidewalks were packed. The police arrangements were perfect. The streets throughout the entire business section of the city, from the river on the north to Van Buren street on the south, from the river on the west to the lake on the east, were swept clear of vehicles of every description.

President McKinley reviewed the parade from the grand stand erected in front of the Union League Club on Jackson street.

On the stand with him were General Miles, General Shafter, General Chaffee, Secretary Wilson, Judge Emory Speer, the Chinese and Corean ministers and a host of other lesser dignitaries.

Many of the men of the First infantry showed in their faces and in their walk the traces of the disease that has been with them since leaving Santiago. The Seventh Illinois infantry and the members of the Naval Reserve, many of whom were with Clark on the Oregon, evoked cheer after cheer as their broad collars and flapping trousers came down the center of Jackson boulevard. About thirty thousand men were in line.

English Marine Disasters.

London, Oct. 20.—The Norwegian bark Frivold, of 379 tons, from Boston, England, for Arendal, her home port, stranded while trying to make the harbor of Spurn Head.

The Kilnsea rocket brigade established communication with her, but before the crew was able to secure it the vessel was overwhelmed by a terrific sea which swept the seven members of her crew overboard, drowning two of them.

The survivors succeeded in reaching the shore on parts of the wreckage. The vessel broke up immediately.

The Norwegian brigantine Augvald, of 227 tons, hailing from Hagesund, bound from Portsmouth to Norway has been wrecked at the mouth of Gourdon harbor. Two of her crew were saved and six drowned.

The Russian three-masted schooner Wilhelm, of 221 tons, from Boston, England, for Memel, has been wrecked on the St. Andrews islands.

Five of her crew were saved and one man was drowned.

The Norwegian bark Adelgande of 821 tons, Captain Olsen, which arrived here on August 29 from Paspebiac, and which hails from Tonsberg, went ashore at Bolmer while on her way to Christiania and is likely to prove a total wreck. Eleven of her crew were saved and one man was drowned.

Smallpox at Dawson City.

Port Townsend, Wash., Oct. 20.—According to a report received from persons arriving from Dawson on the steam schooner Diriago, smallpox has developed in the capital of the Klondike.

J. C. McCloud of Seattle, who left Dawson on September 25, says that on the night he left it was reported that there were three cases of smallpox in town.

The patients were quietly removed to a temporary pest house.

The police had inaugurated a thorough search, and were taking sanitary measures to prevent a spread of the contagion.

Two hundred and fifty mounted Canadian police were met at Fort Selkirk on their way to Dawson, where they will be stationed for the winter.

Several lives are reported to have been lost in the struggle to reach the coast from the interior. The last party to cross the glacier lost two, whose names have not been ascertained. One broke through the snow into a crevasse. The other slid into a chasm hundreds of feet deep.

French Naval Activity.

Paris, Oct. 20.—In spite of semi-official denials, the Echo de Paris asserts that the embarkation of war material and supplies continues at Toulon, and that extraordinary activity reigns at the arsenal there.

Besides the ironclads Admiral Trehouart, Bouvines, Jemmapes and Valmy, the cruisers Alger, Levrier and Caiman, it claims, are getting ready for service, embarking ammunition and war materials.

The transports Bien-hoa and Gironde are almost ready for sea.

All the French naval officers on leave of absence have been ordered to return to their vessels. The naval officers at Toulon are very reticent.

A dispatch to the Petit Parisien from Toulon confirms the reports of the Echo de Paris and says the greatest activity prevails in the navy yard, where work is proceeding with feverish speed day and night.

Yellow Fever Abating.

Washington, Oct. 20.—Information received at the Marine Hospital bureau is that there was a single new case of yellow fever at Franklin, La., yesterday.

The appearance of frost at that place as well as at many other towns in the South, taken in connection with the fact that the number of new cases and deaths has fallen to the minimum leads officials to believe that the epidemic is now near an end.

The train inspection service is being gradually abated, and the expectation is that all now in force will be declared off in a few days.

SPANISH ASK FOR TIME

Commission Has Not Received Expected Advices From Madrid.

JOINT SESSION POSTPONED

Request for Adjournment Until Friday Granted. Delay by Spaniards Regarded as Significant. Some of Their Cherished Hopes Vanish The Evacuation of Cuba.

Paris, Oct. 20.—At the request of the Spanish peace commissioners the meeting of the two commissions which was to have taken pdace yesterday has been deferred until to-morrow.

Judge Day, president of the American commission, received a communication from Senor Montero Rios, president of the Spanish commission, saying that advices expected, but not received, from Madrid, made it necessary for himself and his colleagues to request a postponement of any further conferences until to-morrow. A courteous reply was returned by Secretary Moore, in behalf of the American commissioners, granting an extension of the time of the next meeting as requested.

While the deferring of any one conference for two days is not in itself an important request, the delay by the Spaniards at this juncture is something more than significant.

The game of diplomacy now progressing here has reached a stage which makes it necessary that the next move be made by the Spanish commissioners.

They are confronted by the plain fact of their protocol agreement to relinquish and evacuate Cuba without "ifs," "ands," or "buts."

It has become clear here that the Spaniards cherished the hope that they could unconditionally covenant to follow a given path and ultimately wander elsewhere and do less or more than named in the protocol compact.

The American commissioners, however, have firmly adhered to the boundary lines already mutually established and within which they insist the Spaniards as well as themselves shall duly proceed. It is not too much to say that Spain now has more light than ever before on the integrity and steadfastness in word and purpose of the United States. Nor is it wide of the fact to say that the Spaniards are now initially appreciating that the United States did not make war on Spain to acquire Cuba as a conquest proviso.

Of this the Spaniards may not let be wholly convinced, but the firm refusal of Judge Day and his colleagues to assume the Cuban debt, because the United States will not take over the sovereignty, has widened Spanish perceptions and has unquestionably hastened their convictions. Wherefore it may in a sense be true that for the first time they have a feeling that American pledges and American performances are co-equal terms, the Spaniards now are practically on the threshold of properly lighted negotiations.

When Spain approached these negotiations she was confronted by a wall of past agreement, which she, however, regarded as possible to break or puncture at the point of Castilian diplomacy. Thus she poised and has launched against the protocol structure of seeming solidity the keen lances of her finesse.

They have fallen broken at her feet. The wall of American purpose and mutual compact have proved not only apparent, but real and now Spain's commissioners give pause to their attack on the Cuban angle and ask time to assure themselves of their previous misjudgment and also to reform their lines or arrange new ones.

The assigned reason for the request for delay is believed to have been to allow an interchange of communication with Madrid and to formulate a final attitude on the Cuban matter. This attitude of the Spaniards, to be developed on Friday, will be watched with no little interest. Their alternatives are few but pregnant. They may accede to the American attitude, themselves assume the Cuban debt and go forward to consider the next protocol point, of Porto Rico and the choice by the United States of an island in the Ladrones group; or they may at this juncture, formally ask for arbitration; or as an extremity which is not likely, may retire from further negotiation.

Western Coal Miners on Strike.

Van Buren, Ark., Oct. 20.—The works of the Western Coal and Mining Company, operating three shafts at Jenny Lind and employing six hundred men, have been shut down, the men refusing to work.

The miners demand the reinstatement of two men discharged for negligence, resulting in the death of a mule. It is feared that the strike will extend to Greenwood and Coal Hill, in this state, and Krebe, Hachsborne and all other points in Indian Territory.

The Indian Troubles.

Walker, Minn., Oct. 20.—An agent of the interior department has been directed to make a thorough investigation of the reservation timber question. He says Commissioner Hermann of the general land office is in earnest about seeking the cause of trouble over this question, with a view to satisfying the Indians.

He says he is satisfied that no more timber contracts will be let until the present troubles are settled.

The Ohmaha Exposition.

Omaha, Oct. 20.—The Trans-Missouri exposition will close on Monday, October 31, and arrangements are under way to make Omaha Day a fitting culmination of the enterprise. City and county officials, the commercial clubs, the Knights of Sarben, and other local organizations will co-operate with the management to make Omaha Day a general holiday, on which the stores, the schools, public buildings and other establishments will be closed.

Tod Sloane Coming Home.

London, Oct. 20.—Tod Sloane will return to the United States at the end of next week, after riding the Prince of Wales's four-year-old bay filly Nonsuch in the Cambridgeshire stakes at the Houghton meeting on Wednesday next.

FILIPINO PACT DENIED.

Says Independence Would Result in Disastrous Fighting Between Leaders.

London, Oct. 20.—The Globe publishes an interview which a correspondent had with Agoncillo, the representative of Aguinaldo, before the former left Hong Kong for San Francisco, on his way to Washington and Paris.

Agoncillo, in this interview, is quoted as declaring that the insurgents had a formal agreement with Rear Admiral Dewey, whereby absolute freedom was promised to them in return for their assistance.

When Agoncillo was asked if the agreement was in writing he said:

"No; we do not regard the United States as a grasping power and felt that a verbal agreement was sufficient."

Major General Wesley Merritt, who has arrived in London from Paris, where he has been giving the United States peace commission the benefit of his observations as commander of the American forces at Manila, in an interview discredited the statement attributed to Agoncillo.

The general added: "If the Filipinos were allowed independence now, it would result in fighting between the leaders, which would be more disastrous than any revolution which has hitherto broken out. Aguinaldo's following is slim, and if there was an election to-day I do not believe he would be president."

Race Across the Atlantic.

New York, Oct. 20.—The North German Lloyd steamship Kaiser Friedrich and the White Star liner Teutonic arrived at Quarantine yesterday afternoon after an exciting race across the Atlantic.

The Teutonic left Liverpool on October 12, carrying 437 cabin and 757 steerage passengers. The Kaiser Friedrich left Bremen on October 11, and on October 12 sailed from Southampton with 498 cabin passengers and 519 in the steerage.

On Sunday morning the White Star liner sighted the German vessel dead ahead about fifteen miles. All steam was put on in the effort to overtake her.

The German recognized her pursuer and then a lively trans-Atlantic race was begun.

The seas were rough and the vessels were buffeted by heavy northwest gales, but they ploughed along with all possible speed.

The Teutonic clung to her rival splendidly, and never once let her out of her sight. She gained slowly on the German, and when the Kaiser Friedrich passed Sandy Hook light the White Star liner was but five miles behind her.

The German vessel made the passage in six days, fourteen hours and fifty minutes.

The Teutonic's trip was made in six days and three hours.

The St. Louis Warmly Welcomed.

Southampton, Oct. 20.—The American line steamer St. Louis, Capt. Randle, which left New York on October 12, arrived here yesterday afternoon and received a very hearty greeting, this being her first trip across the Atlantic as a passenger steamer since she entered the service of the United States government as an auxiliary cruiser on the outbreak of the war with Spain.

American flags were flying from all the public buildings here, the church bells were rung, large crowds assembled on the quays, and the United States consul, representatives of the American line and delegations from the various public bodies of Southampton met the steamer on board a tender.

One of the delegations was from the Chamber of Commerce of Southampton, and its members were the bearers of a congratulatory address from the chamber, which was read to Captain Randle and his officers.

The Riot at Phoebus.

Fort Monroe, Va., Oct. 20.—Everything is quiet to-day at Phoebus, the riotous soldiers having been dispersed. The man killed in Tuesday night's row was Private John Gorman of Company E, Fourth artillery.

It is alleged that Pat Eagan, the saloon keeper, shot him as Gorman and other artillery men were attacking the saloon.

The more seriously wounded are David Williams, private of Company I, Sixth artillery, shot through the left shoulder; Private William Foley, Company K, Sixth artillery, struck in the forehead by spent bullet; Joseph Merusky, Company B, Third artillery, shot through jaw and lower maxillary shattered. All of the men are recruits.

An investigation of the affair is in progress.

Pittsburg Bank Closed.

Pittsburg, Pa., Oct. 20.—Notwithstanding the rumors that have been afloat for some time concerning the financial straits of the German National Bank of this city, the announcement made yesterday that the bank had gone into voluntary liquidation caused great surprise, and many depositors hurried to the bank to find the doors closed.

Outside a small crowd had assembled but there was no excitement.

The suspension of the bank can be traced directly to two causes, the carrying of too many securities of the Natalie Coal and Coke company and large loans on insufficient collateral security.

The German National Bank was organized in 1864.

Gave Up Andree to Seek Gold.

Vancouver, B. C., Oct. 20.—The projected trip of the French scientists who were to look for Explorer Andree in a balloon, starting from Skaguay, will not take place.

The eminent scientists' greed for gold it is said overcame their ambition to find Andree. Leaving their balloon in the Canadian Pacific sheds, they left for St. Michaels.

The latest news is that all of them made good strikes and are returning rich.

Bubonic Plague in Vienna.

Vienna, Oct. 20.—The death of a man from bubonic plague, contracted in the culture of plague bacillus, has occurred at the Central Hospital in this place.

DEWEY CAPTURES FLEET

Long Expected Clash With Aguinaldo Occurs.

MADRID RECEIVES ADVICES

Losses on Both Sides. Rebels' Refusal to Obey American Admiral's Orders Results in the Conflict. Fear That Filipinos on Land May Seize Opportunity to Revolt, but End Not in Doubt.

London, Oct. 20.—The Madrid correspondent of the Times says:

"Captain Aunon, the minister of marine, has received a dispatch from Manila, announcing a naval engagement between the Americans and the rebels in consequence of Admiral Dewey forbidding the insurgents to fly the rebel flag from their ships.

"The dispatch adds that there were losses on both sides, but that the Americans captured the rebel ships.

"The scene of the engagement is not stated, but it is supposed to have been Manila Bay."

The cabinet has decided to forward to the Spanish peace commissioners at Paris the official dispatch received from Manila reporting an engagement between the American and insurgent warships.

At last accounts the insurgent navy consisted of six steamers, but on September 13 Madrid heard that five of them had been sunk by Spanish gunboats. As the report was never confirmed it undoubtedly was false. One of the insurgent vessels was captured by Dewey after landing a lot or rifles for Aguinaldo. It probably was turned over to its officers again with a warning.

So far as known the largest vessel controlled by the insurgents was of 600 tons. All except one were Spanish gunboats which had been captured by the insurgents.

It always has been Dewey's policy to ignore the insurgents as much as possible, and if communications passed they were full of advice on the admiral's part. He well knew that the insurgents at sea on vessels flying their flag unrecognized by any nation, were practically pirates. But so long as they confined their operations to sailing around for amusement, the admiral did not interfere.

Any bold strike by them was sure to have the result told of in the dispatches.

There is great probability of a clash on land when Aguinaldo hears of the fate of his nautical adherents.

For some time the self-proclaimed dictator has imagined his forces were strong enough to drive the Spanish and Americans—should he so decide—into the sea.

The fact remains that the rebels were not strong enough to capture Manila, and would have been annihilated in attacking the suburbs had not Dewey destroyed the Spanish fleet.

Prize Fight Probably Fatal.

Omaha, Oct. 20.—Billy Walker, the pugilist who was knocked out by Andy Dupont of Kansas City on Monday evening, is still unconscious and will probably die.

The physicians have given up all hopes of saving his life, for the blow that knocked him out was delivered as an uppercut on the point of the jaw, and fractured the skull in several places.

No arrests have been made as all the participants in the case have disappeared. The fight was witnessed by all the city officials of South Omaha and they will be arrested, it is expected, as the Nebraska law makes all witnesses of a prize fight actual participants and liable to penitentiary sentences.

Fears for the Wiesbaden.

London, Oct. 20.—Reports of serious losses by the terrific storms which have swept the coasts continue to come in. The coasting vessel Augonald has been wrecked off Gourdon, Kincardineshire, Scotland, and six of her crew drowned.

Three vessels are ashore near Dunbar, Haddingtonshire, and other wrecks are reported along the coast.

A telegram from Stonehaven, Kincardineshire, says that the lights of a large steamship were seen off Gourdon and later two buoys and a quantity of wreckage were washed ashore.

The buoys were marked "Wiesbaden," the name of a large German steamer, which it is feared has been lost.

Dr. Huidekoper Discharged.

Washington, D. C., Oct. 20.—The war department has announced the discharge from the army of Lieutenant Colonel Rush Huidekoper, the veterinarian who was in charge at Chickamauga. He was furnished travel to his home.

Major Louis L. Seaman, the surgeon, who was examined by the investigating commission last week, was ordered to proceed to New York and there await the arrival of his regiment.

Captain S. Schieffelin Stebbins and Captain J. H. Claiborne of the Twelfth New York volunteers, and First Lieutenant William J. Graham of the Two Hundred and First New York volunteers were honorably discharged from the army.

Collision During a Gale.

London, Oct. 20.—The German bark Heinrich Botel, 478 tons, Captain Stehr, which arrived at Hull on September 22 from Savannah, and which subsequently left there for Hamburg, her home port, was in collision Tuesday during the gale in the Grimsby roads with the Norwegian bark Concordia, hailing from Dranimen.

Both of the vessels were considerably damaged and were towed into Hull Roads.

To Court Martial Alvin Kitchen.

Lexington, Oct. 20.—Provost Guard Alvin Kitchen of the Third Kentucky, who killed Private Edward Mygren of the Twelfth New York, has been turned over by the city authorities to the military powers, and his trial will be by court martial.

A Healthy Example.

There has just ended in Summit a bitter contest between the township officials and the New York and New Jersey Telephone Company that is highly instructive to the people and the Common Council of Plainfield in view of the present negotiations with the Plainfield Street Railway Company for the extension of its line to the eastern limits of the city. The telephone company was in very much the same position and mood in Summit as the street railway company is in Plainfield, while the position of the two towns in respect to negotiations with the corporations is almost identical and affords an opportune and effective example for the members of the Council who have been and are now inclined to accept the company's own terms.

For three years the telephone company has been endeavoring to secure a franchise to establish a plant in Summit. They appeared before the Township Committee in exactly the same humor as the trolley capitalists appear in Plainfield. The terms of the franchise had been practically agreed upon when suddenly the telephone company declined to allow the compensation particularly asked for by the officials—in this case, eight free telephones for the municipality.

After dilly-dallying over the terms for some time, the telephone company took the same position that the trolley capitalists threaten to take in Plainfield—abandon their plans entirely and leave the place without the contemplated improvements To give their threats a semblance of resolute purpose the company actually did withdraw what telephones they had within Summit and totally cut it off from telephonic communication with the outside world. Thereat the Township Committee assumed the very proper attitude that if the telephone company could stand such a course of events, the town certainly could, even though it did for the time being inconvenience some of the residents who made service of the telephone.

What the town had to give the company was so much more valuable in every respect that the officials knew down in their hearts that it would not be long before the telephone company would come to them And so it proved. The telephone company very soon realized that their action was truthfully described in the old adage of "biting off one's nose to spite the face," and they changed their tactics The result is that Tuesday night the Township Committee granted the franchise to the telephone company on the terms that are but slightly different from those demanded all along.

The result affords a healthy lesson to Plainfield. The city has a very valuable right to confer upon the trolley capitalists, far greater in every way than the beneficiaries can return to the city in proportion to what the capitalists will make out of the deal, and if a proper spirit is shown the Plainfield Street Railway Company can be brought to proper terms just the same as the telephone company finally submitted to the demands of the Summit officials.

OUR INTERESTS IN CHINA.

Edwin Hurd Conger, United States Minister to China, will be assisted by the cruiser Baltimore and the gunboat Petrel in protecting American interests during the troublous times in the Flowery Kingdom. Owing to her draft the Baltimore will be unable to approach near to Pekin, but the Petrel, being lighter, may go as far as Tien-Tsin, which is 80 miles below Pekin.

Crane to be Heard Here.

According to the schedule arranged for the campaign tour of Candidate Crane, Plainfield is to come in for a speech from the Democratic candidate. On Saturday, November 5th, Mr. Crane will "swing around the circle" in Union county, with a meeting in both Elizabeth and Plainfield in the evening. It was reported that Mr. Crane was to speak in Somerset county, but according to the schedule given out at the headquarters of the Democratic State committee that county won't have a chance to hear and see the man who is doing political battle against Voorhees.

The trials and tribulations of the newspaperman are here presented truthfully, graphically and humorously:

The edi or riseth in the morning and knoweth not what the day may bring forth. If he telleth all the news he runneth a great risk of having a tin ear put on him, and if he telleth not the news the people say he is N. G., and there is no joy in it. The crafty man cajolete him into giving him a 50 cent puff for a 5 cent cigar, and all fond mothers frown on him if he fails to flatter their freckled face broods. And all his ways are ways of woe, and his days are full of sorrow. The insurance man setteth snares for him, and on the whole he has a deuce of a time.

Though "Farmer Orator" James E. Martine has not been heard to any great extent in political circles thus far in the State campaign, his clarion voice and enthusiastice manner will soon grace the Democratic stump. Mr. Martine has received an invitation from the State committee to deliver a number of campaign speeches and he will soon commence the aggressive work for which he is noted throughout New Jersey.

Notwithstanding the aversion of some people to losing so much saliva in wetting the new style of postage stamps, Postmaster Bird has already disposed of over 25,000 of them since they have been on sale in Plainfield. You have to take whatever Uncle Sam offers you or else stop trading with him altogether. The old fellow don't ask odds of anyone either in war or business.

The Democratic county conventon of Somerset is being held today at Somerville, and from present indications the candidates will not be named with the idea of leading a forlorn hope, but to get right in for a hustling campaign and a victory over the G. O. P. if such a thing is possible.

The news that the printing machine works of Walter Scott are working until 10 o'clock every night and will probably continue to do so the greater part of the winter is the sort of news that is gratifying to the business interests of the city.

One of the last things the Foster Voorhees did before sending in his resignation as Acting Governor was to appoint an old friend and neighbor, William B. Tucker, of Elizabeth, as deputy factory inspector for this district.

Every citizen who has the interests of the city at heart should attend the hearing to be given by the Common Council next Monday night on the ordinance granting a franchise to the Plainfield Street Railway Company.

WHAT THE SHEARS FIND.

Editorial Comment From Other Papers of Interest in Plainfield.

Harmony reigns among the Republicans of Somerset county. Senator Reed and ex-Senator Thompson have buried the hatchet, and are pulling together enthusiastically to elect the ticket nominated in Somerville last Tuesday.—Tribune.

—The bedding factory and store just around the corner on Somerset street not only manufacture and sell all kinds of bedding but they carry a complete stock of springs and iron beds.

THEATRICAL.

Current Dramatic Attractions That Plainfielders Can Witness.

It is very evident by this time that the visit of Byron's Great Gotham Stock Company to the Stillman Music Hall is a great success. The continuation of the large crowds that filled the house last evening demonstrated the fact. "Inside Track" was the drama selected for last evening's performance and its production was very meritorious. The happy-go-lucky hero, the stern uncle, the unscrupulous villian, and the fair heroine faithful to her lover under the most trying circumstances, were all dramatically depicted by the various members of the company. The picture of slum life in London was startlingly realistic. A fire scene, that differed from the usual spectacular scene in that it looked decidedly real, was used with effect as a climax to the fourth act. Tonight, "The Plunger" will be presented. Tomorrow afternoon, Miss Gertrude Magill will be seen as "Camille," a character to which she is said to be excellent beyond description for so young an artist.

About Robert A. Baxter.

To the Editor of The Daily Press:—I do not know from what source was obtained the information regarding Mr. Baxter which was embodied in an article in the Courier-News of Monday, but it was so entirely erroneous that I feel compelled to correct it.

The gentlemen whom we have had the great sorrow to lose was not John C. Baxter, but a younger brother, Robert A. Baxter, of Reigate Surrey, England. He came from England early last autumn to pass some months in my family, and was on his way to us for the same purpose when he met his most terrible fate. He was a singularly retiring home-loving man, not in very robust health, and during his stay in Plainfield he never formed any acquaintances whatever, out of the family he came to visit: certainly never visited in any house but mine.

It is true, however, that some years ago during the settling up of the Baxter estate in Surrey, Mr. McClure attended to a legal matter in this State, of interest to the family in England.

John C. Baxter is a retired captain in the British Army, and has never visited America.

Very respectfully
K. D. Lawrence.

TOWER FOR COOLING WATER.

Extensive Improvements Being Made at Electric Light Plant.

The Plainfield Electric Light Company is making a number of improvements about their property on West Second street. The house formerly occupied by Mr. Krymer and family is being remodeled and put in shape for the increasing needs of the company. On the rear of the lot close to the station a tower to be about forty feet high is being erected. This tower is filed with pipes and will be used to cool water from the steam condenser. By this scheme the water can be used over and over again and it diminishes the amount of water used. All of these improvements are being made with a view to handling more business in the near future.

THINGS THAT INTEREST SCOTCH PLAINS AND DUNELLEN.

Brief and Terse Observations Gathered by Alert Press Reporters to be Perused at the Supper Table at Your Leisure

DUNELLEN.

(Special Correspondence of The Press.)

Dunllen, October 20—Only a few names were added to the registry list Tuesday.

A large attendance is desired to-night at the supper to be given by the ladies of the Methodist church. This is one of the ways the expenses of the anniversary exercises are to be paid, and the larger the attendance at the supper the more will be made. The Junior League are to have a tree at the supper, and by paying so much will be entitled to a gift from off it.

Abner Coriell, who was so active in collecting funds to start the Methodist church thirty-two years ago, and whom Dr. Little paid a glowing tribute Tuesday night, still has the list on which are the names of all those who subscribed towards the church.

Isaac J. Stites, the blacksmith, is still suffering from the effects of being stepped on by a horse while shoeing the animal a few days ago. Yesterday the doctor told him to go home and stay for a couple of days, and thus give the foot a chance to heal.

Now that the trolley has finally entered Dunellen, there are out-of-town people who are looking for chances to purchase and rent property.

The Junior League of the Methodist church will meet tomorrow afternoon.

Class meeting will be held in the Methodist church tomorrow night.

The first ball of the season will be in Apgar's Hall tomorrow night.

Rev Frank Fletcher was out of town Tuesday on business.

A BRILLIANT WEDDING

was served. Then dancing was the order of the evening and continued until midnight.

The couple were the recipients of a handsome array of presents that included many of value and beauty, combined with useful features.

The gift of the groom to the bride was a magnificent gold ring, set with diamonds and sapphires. The bride gave to each of her bridemaids beautiful stick pins, set with pearls and amethists. The groom presented the ushers with gold clover-leaf pins, with a diamond set in the centre.

The groom formerly lived with his father in Dunellen and has a large circle of friends there and in this city where he frequently visited. Of late, he has been making his home in New York. He is employed by Lowenstein Brothers, of New York, as a traveling salesman. The couple left last night for Philadelphia and will then take a southern trip. On their return, they will reside at 673 Vanderbilt avenue, Brooklyn.

During the supper, the bridal party was seated in the alcove to the ballroom, near the door. After it was over, they quietly departed and drove to the bride's home where they prepared for their journey and then departed quietly by the back way. There was no throwing of rice or old shoes to mark their departure.

During the reception P. Ludwig Conde rendered a number of selections.

The programme of music rendered by Organist W. E. MacClymont previous to the arrival of the bridal party at the church was as follows:

Overture La Muette di Portici	Auber
Shepherd's Song	Schuloff
Grand Chorus	Cavallo
Bell Rondo	Morandi
Berceuse "Jocelyn"	Godard
Polonaise Militaire	Chopin

SAYS WILLIAMS IS ALIVE

where on its arrival Walter Williams reported the alleged death. The officers of the steamer signed a statement that a man supposed to have been Harry Williams was said to have been lost overboard. They declined to make a positive statement in reference to the alleged death. A couple of days after that Walter Williams arrived home, expressing deep sorrow over the alleged drowning of his brother.

Shortly after the family of the alleged dead man commenced proceedings to collect the insurance. The Prudential Life Insurance Company held an industrial policy for $150 and just before leaving on the trip William had paid the first premium on a $5,000 policy but up to the time of his alleged death the policy had not been accepted by the Prudential Company. He also held a $5,000 accident policy that he had taken out just before sailing from New York. The insurance companies commenced investigating the case and immediately concluded that the young man was not dead at all. Detectives were put on the case and, it is alleged, secured pictures of Williams while he was working in a western State under an assumed name. The industrial policy, however, was paid by the Prudential, the amount involved being so small.

Matters evidently became too warm for Walter Williams to remain in town and he suddenly disappeared early in the summer, leaving his business to be adjusted as best it could through the courts.

THE BOARD OF TRADE.

rows has worked hard night after night on this trolley ordinance, and now the papers had come out and talked as though the Council knew nothing about it. What the Council wants, he said, is the confidence of the people. Other remarks were made by Charles Hand and others. The president appointed C. W. Runyon, R. A. Meeker and W. A. Woodruff a committee to present the resolution to the Council.

B. A Hegeman, Jr., reported progress as chairman of the committee on transportation, regarding the securing of a ten-trip ticket between here and New York. Charles H. Hand reported on the matter regarding the letter received from a concern that would like to locate a factory in this city to make fire-arms. He was authorized to reply to the letter and offer the company a strip of land 200x300 along the Jersey Central Railroad. Ira L LaRue was elected a member of the Board and S. S. Swacknamer resigned. Hereafter the Board will meet the third Monday of each month instead of the third Wednesday.

GOOD OLD PROFESSOR.

His Knowledge Rather Unpleasant to Have Around at All Times.

It has never ceased to be a cause of regret to the good Mrs. Parvenu that she had the professor at her little gathering of local literary lights.

"There's a teapot that was used by William the Conqueror," she announced, with pride, as all the visitors gathered about and discussed the prize in hushed tones of voice.

"But, dear madam," said the professor, with whom truth is given preference to every other consideration, "they never brewed tea in England until some years after William I. came to these shores."

Mrs. Parvenu ignored the interruption, but the teapot was soon put away, and now it has another history.

"Here is a pipe that one of the Caesars smoked in the ninth century," she declared, triumphantly, and she looked severely at the professor.

"But, my good woman," he declared, "tobacco was unknown then, and for centuries after. Someone must have imposed upon you."

The pipe was put away with a slam, and from beneath a pile of silk patches in a sewing bag the angered lady produced a book.

"There," she nnounced, in strident tones, "is a Bible that belonged to my great-great-grandmother. I hope that modern wisdom has not learnt that all were heathens in her time, or that the golden rule was not discovered until the good old lady had gone to her reward."

But the professor looked judicially at the title-page, and said the book was printed in 1876.

Spain Really the Gainer.

Spain, in reality, loses little by this war except some ships. Cuba she had proven worthless to herself and to the rest of the world. The Philippines were rapidly approaching the same condition. Since the war began she has not sent a soldier or a musket to Cuba, and she has some of the soldiers already there returned to her on a pass. She spent some money in tolls for the passage of her fleet through the Suez Canal, but the crews can say with the old whaler captain in the story, though they did not "get any oil," they had "a mighty fine sail." Her colonies have never been in the true sense outlets for superfluous population, nor yet commercial feeders. They have been a source of deep-seated civil corruption. Spain has a large, industrious and thrifty home population and a diversified territory, part of it agriculturally productive, part rich in minerals. Her coast population are admirable sailors, and she is favorably situated for commerce. If she will abandon her medieval methods there is no reason why in ten years she should not find herself more prosperous than she has been since the fifteenth century.—Hartford Courant.

American Women and Gray Hair.

Is it true that the hair of American women turns gray much earlier than that of the women of other countries? There are those who make the assertion. It is, too, say these, a more thorough gray. While the locks of an English or French woman will late in life show a few "basting threads," the head of an American woman at a much younger age will be quite blanched, or at least frosted. To two things may the cause of the tendency be ascribed, American air and American atmosphere—terms not at all synonymous. If the former turns our leaves, why should it not turn our hair? While what the latter may accomplish through the agencies of ice water, hot bread and worry needs no comment. Early gray hair, as a rule, means inability to cope with nerve-destroying things. It is declared to be largely a matter of temperament. That it should be a characteristic of American women is in keeping with most other traits of our race.—Harper's Bazar.

Beauty After Fifty.

A bright woman, when applauded recently for her goodness, begged her friend to let the matter drop. "For," she said, whimsically, "though I do try to do good from some really high motives, yet I have a reason for trying which I am afraid is a low one." "What do you mean?" inquired her laughing friend. "I mean that I once heard, many years ago, that beauty after 50 depended not on features, but on character. Like all women, I desired to be beautiful, and, as Providence had denied me the 'features' necessary to secure that result in early life, I determined to make the attempt to be beautiful at 50. I am 85 now," she concluded, merrily, "and I must confess that I see no signs of this Indian summer loveliness, but I still try to be good."

These friends treated the matter as a jest, but there is really sense and truth in the saying that beauty in later life, in either man or woman, is dependent upon character far more than upon form or color.—The Churchman.

Dates of Big Inventions.

The air brake was invented by Westinghouse, 1874; the torpedo by Bushnell, 1777; watch, by Peter Hele, 1477; thermometer, by Drebel, 1609; telescope, by Lippersheim, 1608; printing, by Gansfleisch, 1488; cotton gin, by Eli Whitney, 1793; microscope, by Jansen, 1590; lithography, by Senefelder, 1798; lightning rods, by Franklin, 1752; gunpowder, by Schwarz, 1320; balloon, by Montgolfier, 1783; barometer, by Torricelli, 1643.

The Civilian's Regret.

"The soldiers will soon be done with camp fare," remarked Old Bullion, affixing a revenue stamp on another check, "but hard tax will be served out to the rest of us for years to come."—Chicago Tribune.

BOOKS NOT TO READ.

SOME OF THOSE PROHIBITED BY THE INDEX.

Dumas', Victor Hugo's and George Sand's Works Appear on the List. Why the Index Expurgatorius Exists—Its Laws Everywhere Binding.

All Catholics of bookish tastes ought to know something about that much maligned institution, the "index." Somebody has said with more point than truth that all the best books in the world are in the "index." And now and again the existence thereof and the obligations thereof are cited in support of the ancient calumny that we are priest ridden and denied liberty of thought and that the church is tyrannical, obscuantist. Sad to say there is a disposition on the part of a certain kind of Catholics to fall in with these views and to refuse obedience to laws which, made for the universal church, are as binding in this land of liberty as in effete Europe.

Everybody knows what danger to faith and morals lurks in bad books. They are occasions of sin of the greatest efficacy. A book represents the best thought of its author clothed with all the graces of style of which he is capable and perpetuates that thought long after the author's voice is hushed by death. A bad book, especially if artistically written, gives a sort of immortality to error. Through it, moreover, the author gets a worldwide audience for what he has to say. Now, the natural law forbids us to read bad books. Self preservation is the first law of nature, and this principle, true where there is question of bodily life, is equally so where there is question of the life of the soul. On the same principle that we avoid going to places and associating with people to escape the contagion of deadly disease, so ought we in reason to avoid entering into a world of thought where in all human probability our souls will receive mortal harm. And if we are not alive to the danger ourselves we ought to be grateful to those who give us timely warning.

The congregation of the index was founded about 300 years ago. At the time of the reformation a flood of books, more or less infected with erroneous doctrines, poured from the presses of Europe. The business of the congregation was to examine these books—at least the most notable among them—and to warn the faithful against reading them. This congregation is made up of a number of cardinals appointed by the pope, and its members are assisted in their work by a great body of competent scholars. Perhaps some have seen the picture in which the idea and the labors of the congregation are held up to ridicule. It is important to note right here that the prohibition of a bad book by the congregation of the index is a positive precept over and above the precept of the natural law, and, furthermore, that, though in some cases the natural law does not bind, because there is no danger to be apprehended from the reading of a bad book in those cases, still the ecclesiastical prohibition is in force, and he who transgresses it deliberately is guilty of a grave sin, at least if the forbidden reading be of much extent.

The index of prohibited books, or, as it is sometimes styled, the "index expurgatorius," is a list of some thousands of books, histories, poems, novels, theological treatises, encyclopedias and other sorts of works, which have been investigated by the congregation of the index and branded as unfit for Catholics, and, by the bye, not only is the reading of such books unlawful, but the retention, printing and defense of them as well. The last Roman edition of the index was published in 1880, with an appendix up to 1890, which was issued in 1891. It is an interesting little volume. A good many people like Honore de Balzac. All the writings of this author are interdicted. Again, all the romances of Dumas, in whatever language they are printed, are forbidden. Victor Hugo's "Notre Dame de Paris" and "Les Miserables" are in the same unfortunate category. So also are all the works of George Sand. Hogan, the renegade priest who made so much trouble in Philadelphia many years ago, figures in the index. Savonarola is there, too, and strangest of all is Æneas Sylvius Piccolomini, afterward Pope Pius II. He retracted certain objectionable things in his "History of the Council of Basel," but the fact that the book was condemned is still a matter of record.

According to the old law of the church, the reading and retention of the books of heretics or the writings of any author condemned either for heresy or on suspicion of heresy entailed immediate excommunication. Nowadays the only reading or retention of forbidden books which is prohibited under pain of excommunication is defined in the second article of the constitution, "Apostolicæ Sedis." But bear in mind that, though excommunication is the penalty of disobedience only in a few cases, the guilt of sin is there in every case.—Providence Visitor.

The Costliest Cathedral.

Moscow cathedral, next to St. Peter's at Rome, is the costliest cathedral in the world. On the exterior of the building alone 900 pounds of gold were used. Of its 13 bells the largest weighs half as much again as "Great Paul" in London, and the doors of the cathedral, of which the largest weighs 13 tons, cost $310,000.

A Distinguished Convert.

Among the recent distinguished converts to the faith is Mr. Edward L. Pugh of Washington, eldest son of ex-United States Senator Pugh of Alabama. Mr. Pugh is one of the chiefs of the interstate commerce commission and was recently received into the church in Washington by Rev. O'B. Pardow, S. J.

CATHOLIC PARENTS.

Their Duty in the Religious Education of Their Children.

The first object of Christian parents ought to be the religious education of their children. In fulfilling this duty they equally contribute to the support of their own authority, to the advancement of their children and to the general good of society at large. They who neglect this parental duty betray a shameful ignorance of their essential obligations and of their most important interests. They can neither be accounted good parents, good Christians, nor even good citizens. The celebrated Gerson, who employed a great part of his time in the education of youth, says that of all the means to stem the torrent of corruption which overspreads the world the surest means is to bring up children in a Christian manner from their most tender years. Let parents, therefore, consider the education of their children as their principal concern and that their own salvation as well as that of their offspring chiefly depends on the manner in which they acquit themselves of this important charge.

Parents are apt to imagine that the business of instruction belongs wholly to priests or pastors, but this is a great mistake. The parents themselves, as Bossuet observes, are the first and in some respects even the principal catechists of their children. They are the first catechists because, before their children come to the chapel, they ought to nourish them with the milk of sound doctrine they have themselves received from the Catholic church. They are the principal catechists because it is their duty to teach them their catechism by heart, to make them daily repeat it and to explain it to them in the best manner they are able. When parents neglect this part of their duty, the little which their children learn on Sundays is soon forgotten, whereas, by attending to it, they may render more essential service to their children than pastors can do. The latter speak to them only in the chapel on certain days and for a short space of time when they are extremely dissipated by the company and variety of strange objects which strike their senses. On the cotrary, at home children are more recollected. Their thoughts are more sedate, because they see nothing new to take off their attention, and parents have more frequent and better opportunities of instructing them. They know their capacity and inclinations and can take advantage of those moments when their children are most docile and best disposed to receive instruction.

Wherefore, as soon as parents observe in their children the first dawn of reason, they should begin to sow upon the virgin soil of their hearts the seeds of virtue and piety. If these take root at an early period, they will not afterward be easily shaken by the unavoidable storms to which they are exposed from the devil, the world and the flesh. Hence Solomon says, "Train up a child in the way he should go, and when he is old he will not depart from it." "Hast thou children? Instruct them and bow them from their childhood," in order to form in them early habits of virtue and piety.—Selected.

FAVOR OF THE HOLY SEE.

Gracious Message of Pope Leo XIII to Archbishop Williams.

The Very Rev. Joseph M. Guillard, provincial of the Oblate fathers and resident in Lowell, Mass., has returned from a trip to Europe in the interests of his order. He has favored the Boston Pilot with this interesting note of his visit to Rome and his audience with Pope Leo XIII:

On June 15 last I had the honor of being received in audience by the holy father. When I said that I was under the jurisdiction of Mgr. Williams, archbishop of Boston, his holiness, leaning forward from his throne, said to me in French:

"Eh bien, mon fils, vous irez voir Mgr. Williams, et vous lui direz que je l'aime, beaucoup, beaucoup, beaucoup." Or in English: "Well, my son, you will go and see Mgr. Williams, and you will tell him that I love him much —," repeating the last word twice, with great emphasis.

Father Guillard duly conveyed this gracious and acceptable message to the archbishop, who has had already so many proofs of the confidence and favor of the holy see, but whose native reserve and modesty make him as reluctant to display them as a lesser man would be to conceal them.

The Pope's "Golden Rose."

The golden rose which the pope gives every year to a royal lady distinguished for loyalty both to the pope and to the Catholic church is made of pure gold and is valued at $10,000. There is a golden rose on the center, in which the pope pours balsam, this being surrounded with smaller rosebuds and leaves, all of the purest gold and chiseled with exquisite workmanship.

The Rosary.

Sweet blessed beads! I would not part
With one of you for richest gem
That gleams in kingly diadem;
Ye know the history of my heart.

For I have told you every grief
In all the days of twenty years,
And I have moistened you with tears,
And in your decades found relief.

Oh, time has fled, and friends have failed,
And joys have died! But in my needs
Ye were my friends, my blessed beads,
And ye consoled me when I wailed.

For many and many a time in grief
My weary fingers wandered round
Thy circled chain, and always found
In some "Hail, Mary!" sweet relief.

How many a story you might tell
Of inner life, to all unknown!
I trusted you and you alone,
But, ah! you keep my secrets well.

Ye are the only chain I wear—
A sign that I am but the slave
Is life, in death, beyond the grave—
Of Jesus and his mother fair.

Well, Mr. Merchant-who-thinks-of-advertising, this is only one of the many corners in THE DAILY PRESS—it isn't the best located one, either; we can give you better—and if this attracts your attention in our endeavor to tell you how good advertising will get you a hearing before the purchasing public, doesn't common sense teach you that if you were having people reading your trade story instead of you're reading our argument about it, that it would be better for your business.

THE DAILY PRESS reaches the purchasing public that makes the profits for the merchant.

We can give you big or little space—but in advertising it isn't always economy to be sparing in your appropriation.

CHAPTER XIV.

It was wonderfully calm and still in the old school house during the first hours that followed the departure of the pupils. Elizabeth was not quite sure that she liked the stillness. During the past month she had grown so used to the buzz of voices, to the rushing to and fro of young feet, and to the sprightliness with which the atmosphere of the place seemed to be charged that the silence that fell upon the house caused her, just at first, a slight feeling of loss and loneliness. She quickly determined, however, that the holidays should not be idle days with her. There was so much she must do, there were so many studies she must continue before she would be fit even in a small degree for the life of teaching that lay before her. She had no need to trouble her head about the immediate future. Mrs. Procter had decreed—and she had acquiesced in the decree—that she was to remain for quite another year as a student at Abbey Lodge.

"There are many things you can do besides studying," the old lady had said when the subject was discussed. "I shall give you some little ones to look after next term, so that you may drift by degrees into a knowledge of how to influence their minds. I think you cannot do better than remain with me till you are twenty at least; then, if you feel you must fly away, Elizabeth, I will raise no objection. But it will make me happier to keep you with me for another year, if you will stay, dear child."

"Can you doubt it?" Elizabeth had said, in one of her rare moments of eager frankness. "It is so beautiful here with you," she had added; "I sometimes feel that I should never have the courage to leave you at all!"

At the words Mrs. Procter had smiled kindly at the girl. No prospect could be sweeter for the old lady than that of keeping this fair young creature always near her; but she never pressed her desire upon Elizabeth, nor did she once set herself to turn the girl from the determination she had arrived at immediately after Mrs. Latimar's death; she was content to let matters drift along quietly and the future develop itself gradually.

Elizabeth was sitting under the trees in the garden on the afternoon following the departure of the girls. She had left Mrs. Procter in order to have a quiet hour or so by herself. The dinner party that was to be given at Speede in the evening had caused the old lady unwonted excitement. She had made no request to Elizabeth to accompany her, but the girl had volunteered the information that she intended to go to Speede also.

"I could not let her go alone; she is so delicate, and she is used to having me with her now! Grannie would forgive me, I believe, if she could see into my heart and find that she is never, and will never be, forgotten, however much I may have to mix with the world."

This thought had formed itself in Elizabeth's mind as she went out of the house and across to the shade of the big trees. She missed the noise and laughter of the girls very much; yet, as she sat there alone in the beautiful summer sunshine, she became conscious that the loss of so much life and bustle was not a deep one, and that the days that must elapse between the beginning and the end of the holidays would be filled with a new pleasure and an experience of tranquillity that would be full of charm.

The silence and tranquillity on this particular afternoon were not destined to be long-lived. Half an hour of it had barely slipped away before there came the sound of a pleasant laughing voice, and Feo's white-clad figure came dancing across the grass with all the youthfulness and lissomeness of one of the school girls who had just departed.

Elizabeth closed her book with a start.

"Feo," she said reproachfully, "running in this heat! You will be ill."

"I am never ill!" Lady Feo cried, flinging herself into a chair. "All the same, it is hot, Elizabeth. I thought several times that I should have died coming along the road from Speede here. Poor old Peter—he is almost frizzled! I believe I shall have to drag him home instead of his dragging me."

"Dearest, why did you come?" Elizabeth felt a little anxious as she saw Feo's flushed cheeks.

"Oh, I had to come and see you! I was dying to run over this morning, but aunt Bertha would not let me. She said you would be all 'sixes and sevens' while getting the girls away. I suppose you worked like a slave. And don't you feel funny without all those youngsters about you? How they did enjoy themselves at their party yesterday!" Lady Feo gave a sigh here, as if the thought of girls enjoying themselves made her own youth seem suddenly like old age. The feeling was only transitory, however; the next moment she had slipped from the chair and was sitting upon the grass. "It's cooler here," she explained to Elizabeth.

"I will give you some tea," Elizabeth said, laughing; and she rose to call one of the maids.

"Yes, do—there's a darling! And, oh, Elizabeth, do you think Tony may come in too? He is waiting outside with Peter. We drove over to try to persuade you to come to-night. Of course, you need not dance if you don't want to; and you can wear that thin black gown instead of the white one—only do come! We shan't enjoy it a bit if you don't."

Elizabeth's cheeks were a little flushed.

"I am coming, Feo dear," she answered hurriedly. "I was just going to write a little note to tell you so." She paused for an instant. "I—I am sure Mrs. Procter will be delighted if Sir Antony will come in and have some tea."

"You are both angels!" Lady Feo declared—she was radiant at having received Elizabeth's promise. "I particularly wanted you to come to-night," she added confidentially. "I've brought down to Speede with me a girl who I am determined shall be Tony's wife. She is so pretty, Elizabeth; and she is very sweet, too—not clever, you know, but nice, really nice—at least I think so. I want you to see her, however, before I push Tony too far, because, if you don't think—"

"Dear Feo," Elizabeth broke in hurriedly, with a laugh—she was pulling the wicker chairs and tables under the trees, and her hands moved nervously—"what are you saying? As if my opinion could or would be accepted in such a matter!"

"Why not? You are Tony's friend, I know, and he likes you. Oh, ever so much—I know that also' But there"—Lady Feo fanned herself gracefully with her big straw hat—"you shan't do anything you don't want to do; and if you don't feel inclined to give an opinion about Beatrice Powell, you shall not give it. All I want is to see you to-night, and to drink some tea now—now, at once, without any further delay!"

Elizabeth was half way across the lawn before this speech was finished. She gave the orders to the maid, then went on to the front doorway. The pony-carriage was standing well in the shade and Tony was leaning back in the vehicle, the reins held loosely in his hand. He was thinking deeply, and he seemed to wake as from a lethargic sleep when Elizabeth's voice came to his ears, calling his name softly. He was out of the carriage in an instant.

"You are to come and have some tea, Sir Antony. The 'fairies' are all gone, I am sorry to say; but the 'fairies' home is open to you."

Sir Antony held Elizabeth's hand so long that she blushed warmly.

"Peter will be quite safe with our old gardener," she said hurriedly, and she led the way back to Feo and the tea table.

Elizabeth tried to be her usual calm self, but something was thrilling and dancing in her heart; some sudden blaze of wondrous light seemed to be dazzling her eyes. The grip of his hand on hers had left a warmth that was delightful, that filled her with an extraordinary sense of happiness.

"Do you realize that you are in fairyland?" she asked him, laughing in her shy, sweet manner, as they emerged from the house.

He looked into her eyes, and his gaze seemed to hold her spell-bound. The joy that ran riot, albeit so unconsciously, in Elizabeth's heart broke into flame in his own.

"It is not fairyland, Elizabeth," he said unsteadily—"it is heaven here in your home."

Lady Feo was busy with the tea pot.

"I am not waiting to ask anybody's permission before I pour out tea. Elizabeth, must one be acquainted with anybody for seven years before one pours out tea, do you know? Tony, has this child told you that she is coming to-night? Of course, I don't believe her; I shan't believe it until I see her arrive in all her glory."

"You are very rash to insist on my coming at all, Feo," Elizabeth said hurriedly, conscious that her voice was thrilling with some new, strange sweet influence. "I have never been to a dinner party in all my life. I am not sure whether I shall use my knife and fork properly. Please be prepared for some terrible faux pas!"

She accepted the tea Tony handed her with down-cast eyes, a flush lingered in her cheeks. Feo, who was eating heartily of the home-made bread and butter, was struck anew with the girl's wonderful loveliness.

"It is not exactly beauty," she said to herself—"it is something more attractive. No wonder Richard Saville wanted to marry Elizabeth! I always thought her sweet and pretty in the old days, in spite of the shabbiness with which grannie surrounded her; but now—well, now she is irresistible!"

CHAPTER XV.

The big dinner was over in good time, thanks entirely to Lady Feo's excellent management, and Sir Antony's speech had been long and loudly applauded.

He had not said much, and his words had been of the simplest; but he was so pleasant to look at, and his voice was so full of charm, that his first efforts as an orator had been crowned with success. Nervousness had brought a flush to his face, and for the moment had effaced the lines and shadows of care which had latterly haunted Elizabeth's every thought of him. He looked so handsome, and there was something so bright and hopeful in his manner as he stood at the head of the long table, master of the fine old house, that the girl felt more deeply and truly in love with him than ever.

Feo had placed Elizabeth near the head of the table, and Antony's eyes had been gladdened by the sight of her all though the dinner. Contrasted with the smart dresses worn by the other ladies, her black gown had a sombre beauty of its own, and made a soft setting for her white slender throat, her delicate arms, and her small head, with its wealth of fair brown hair. She had not dared once to look straight at him; yet she seemed to know when his eyes were turned upon her, for the hot blood would come rushing over her face at his gaze, making her loveliness greater than it had ever been.

When glasses were touched, and Miss Peile's health was drunk with much enthusiasm, Elizabeth ventured to glance toward Antony, and once again their eyes met; for a moment or two they gazed at each other fixedly. No words, no vows, no passionate declaration could have revealed to each more clearly the truth that lay hidden in their hearts.

There came an end to this spell of exquisite joy as the toast was finished and the ladies withdrew. Sir Antony watched Elizabeth pass out with the rest; a chill feeling seemed to run through him as she moved away. A moment before all had been so beautiful; she had been close to him—she had been his own for that short interval. But with the departure of the girl the pleasure had gone, and with a sharp pang of anguish, he reminded himself of the duties that had yet to be fulfilled before the night grew into day.

Lady Feo was in the highest of spirits. She hurried through the big drawing-room, converted for the nonce into a splendid ball-room, and went to join Miss Peile. "Is the band ready, Aunt Bertha?" she inquired. "It is time we made a beginning, isn't it?" Lady Feo started as she put the question. "Oh!" she exclaimed—and there was a note of coldness and of something like annoyance mingling with her astonishment as Richard Saville emerged from the subdued light of the hall and greeted her with a smile. "This is a surprise!" Feo added, as she just touched his hand with her gloved fingers. "Where have you sprung from? Tony seemed to think you were at the other side of the globe!"

Mr. Saville smiled in his old pleasant fashion.

"I came down quite unexpectedly," he explained. "I returned from Bavaria only to-day, discovered a letter from Miss Peile that should have been answered many weeks ago, discovered also that my chambers were in the hands of the work-people; so I came off here on the spur of the moment, to ask hospitality, and arrive to find everything in a state of festivity."

"I hope you have had dinner, Richard?" Miss Peile said eagerly. Unlike Feo, she was inexpressibly glad to see Mr. Saville. "If not, you must come with me at once. There will be—"

Richard Saville checked her with his exquisite courtesy.

"I dined early in town," he explained. "I came down by the evening express, and arrived here when you were all at dinner. I ventured to make my way up to my old rooms. I hope I did not do wrong?" he added gently.

"My dear Richard," exclaimed Miss Peile warmly—for such a suggestion quite hurt her—"you come here as you would to your own home! But, if you won't dine, will you not join Tony and the others in the smoking-room?"

"Perhaps I can be of some use to Lady Feo," suggested Mr. Saville with a questioning glance at Feo's beautiful gown and jewels. He himself wore the narrow black tie that was intended to indicate his respect and mourning for the late Mrs. Latimar.

"Thanks; there is nothing you can do for me," Feo answered, not by any means too graciously. She had caught his glance, had understood it, and resented it. "I hate him, the stiff horrid prig and hypocrite!" she said to herself. "Why on earth should he have chosen to come here to-night? He will upset Elizabeth, and everything will be spoiled!"—and a sudden idea came to her to prevent any chance of Mr. Saville's meeting Elizabeth by detaining him by her side as long as possible.

Like many another good idea, however, it came too late. Mr. Saville accepted her words as a dismissal. He showed no resentment at Lady Feo's cold reception of him—he simply moved away.

"Well, if there is nothing I can do, I will take advantage of the present opportunity of having a chat with Mrs. Proctor. I have not seen her for a very long time; I am glad to meet her again!" he said, and quickly disappeared.

Lady Feo gave him one glance and shrugged her shoulders. Miss Peile saw the movement, and her face flushed a little. She suddenly recalled all the bitterness with which Feo had discussed Mr. Saville of late, and she understood at once that the chief reason of Feo's annoyance now arose from her tender thought of Elizabeth.

"It is certainly regrettable," Bertha Peile said to herself, while Feo flitted away, trying to continue her work of making everything bright and pleasant, as if nothing had occurred to spoil her own share of the evening's entertainment; "and I am sincerely sorry that the first time the child should have come here Richard should happen to come too, in so unexpected a manner! Still, he can hardly be denied his right to be here, and they will have to meet some day, sooner or later; so perhaps it is just as well as it is. After all, at a big party like this, people are not likely to be brought so closely together as at a small one," Miss Peile reflected; "and I dare say Richard will be wise enough not to approach the girl. I shall try to have my chat with him to-night. I am sure, if there is anything to be told about my boy, Richard will tell it to me."

The striking up of the band, the arrival of some more guests, and the return of the men from the smoking-room, diverted Miss Peile's attention. She put her thoughts on one side, and joined with Feo in an endeavor to provide all the dancers with partners, and start everything well.

Sir Antony had been seized upon at once by his cousin.

"Where are you going, Tony? You must ask Beatrice Powell to give you this waltz. Now don't tell me you are not going to dance, because you must, and there's an end of it! This is your own house, remember!"

Lady Feo's pretty voice sounded almost cross; and Sir Antony, seeing that she was annoyed, though he had no clue to her vexation, and, recognizing his duty, sacrificed his feelings immediately and obeyed her. He had entertained a wild idea of escaping to the garden, but was wise enough not to carry it out just at present. Later on he would find an opportunity to slip away. He knew where to look for Elizabeth. His eyes had followed her from the smoking-room window as she walked across the moonlit lawn and vanished amid the dark shadows of the trees. The thought of what lay before him, and of what might have been, made his blood course wildly through his veins.

He danced the long waltz through without stopping, forgetful for once of his partner's comfort, and, when the waltz was over, he let Feo pounce upon him again and carry him off to half a dozen other girls, who were only too willing to dance with so handsome and desirable a partner. Thus kept busily engaged, Tony had no opportunity of learning that Richard Saville had arrived at Speede. From where he danced he caught glimpses of Mrs. Proctor sitting talking cosily with Bertha Peile.

Feo, wheeling around first with one cavalier and then with another, noticed them also after a while, and, as she did so, she awoke suddenly to the fact that Richard Saville had disappeared from the conservatory. She brought her dance to an abrupt termination.

"Please forgive me; I want to speak to my cousin," she explained to her partner with her brilliant smile.

Antony was standing near a doorway, apparently listening with interest to the laughing chatter of a fair-haired girl, who was the Beatrice Powell Feo had discussed with Elizabeth in the old school-gardens that afternoon.

"I hope you are being well looked after, Bee!" Lady Feo said; then she struck her cousin lightly with her fan. "What have you done with Mr. Saville, Tony?" she asked. "I see he has disappeared."

Sir Antony looked at her in utter amazement.

"Dick! Dick here?" he questioned. "Feo are you sure?"

"Sure! How absurd you are Tony!" Feo said quite sharply. "Why, he arrived when we were all at dinner. He gave me quite a start, I assure you!" Lady Feodora went on irritably. "I thought he was in another part of the world altogether." As she was moving away, Lady Feo bent forward and spoke confidentially to her cousin. "I am quite upset about his being here to-night, Tony!" she said. "I feel somehow that he has come on purpose to speak to Elizabeth; and you know he would rather do anything than meet Mr. Saville just now. It is really most annoying! If I had had the least idea of his appearing in this Jack-in-the-box sort of way, I should have done my best to keep Elizabeth at home, instead of urging her to come to-night!"

The flush that had dyed Antony's face crimson passed away suddenly. All at once he looked haggard, almost old.

"He has come on purpose to speak to Elizabeth!"

The presentiment of trouble that came to Antony from this unexpected appearance of Saville became on the instant a conviction. It seemed to him that the veil of mystery that had been hanging between Saville and himself for so long a period was about to be torn down, and the truth, about which he had been so much puzzled and troubled, revealed at last. There was something in this sudden return that gave to Antony the idea of premeditated resolve, of previous careful calculation.

Apologizing to Miss Powell, saying he scarcely knew what, he turned away abruptly and went swiftly out of the ball- room, before Feo could utter any remonstrance.

With a few laughing words and her prettiest wiles, Lady Feo smoothed matters over for Miss Powell, providing her instantly with another partner; and so the dance continued, and was pronounced by every one a most enjoyable affair.

COTTON GROWING IN KANSAS.

In Some Instances it Pays Better Than Anything Else.

It is not generally known that Kansas is a cotton-producing State. Its States at the New Orleans Exposition introduction is due to the late ex-Senator Daniel McTaggart, who had some cottonseed shipped in from the South about fifteen years ago. He experimented with it on his own farm that year, and the experiment was successful. The next year he increased his acreage, and induced several of his neighbors to put in cotton. They found that it paid much better than anything else they could raise, and the following year the demand for cottonseed was so great that it could not be supplied. Since then the production of cotton in this section has steadily grown year by year until now it promises to be one of the leading products of the section.

Negroes are the best hands at raising this product, and the white farmer usually hires a negro to oversee the planting and cultivation of his cotton fields or else leases it to him on shares.

A bale of cotton raised on Senator McTaggart's place took the first premium over cotton from all the Southern in 1885.—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

A Matter of Direction.

"Aren't you afrain that child is rather forward in its conversation?" asked the bachelor relative.

"Oh, no, indeed," replied the fond mother serenely. "It's all we can do to keep it from talking back."—Indianapolis Journal

Speak Out.

The Search-light of Publicity is Pleasing Plainfield People.

Publicity is what the people want.

Let the public speak on the subject.

There has been too much claim—too little proof.

Claims made by strangers are not proof.

Claims endorsed by strangers are not proof.

There is only one kind of proof for a citizen.

The experience of people we know.

When friends and neighbors endorse,

Make public statement of their case,

There can be no question about such evidence.

This is the proof we have,

Which backs every box of Doan's Kidney Pills.

No other kidney pills, no other kidney remedy.

Can produce such proof.

Here is one case of the many we have,

Mr. John Lindsay, of 424 West Front street, says: "From the effects of a bad cold which I contracted some years ago, I have been troubled more or less with attacks of backache which has caused me a great deal of suffering. My work compels me to do a great deal of stooping and bending forward which aggravated the trouble. At night I had to keep changing about first from one position then to another trying to find some way that I could free myself from the pain but it remained the same no matter what position I assumed. Doan's Kidney Pills were recommended to me by a friend who had used them and I got a box from L. W. Randolph's drug store I found them just as represented and they relieved me in a short time. I can recommend Doan's Kidney Pills to anyone wanting a safe, reliable and convenient medicine to act direct on the kidneys."

FELL FROM A LADDER.

Frank Mayhew Met With Painful Accident This Morning.

Frank Mayhew, aged 48 years, residing on Rock avenue, and a painter by trade, met with a painful accident this morning while working at Hetfield & Gallup's ice plant on West Front street. Mr. Mayhew was standing on top of a step-ladder twelve feet high painting a sign over the porch roof of the office building. The step-ladder slipped and Mayhew was thrown to the ground with sufficient force to fracture the thigh bone. An investigation proved that the man was severely injured and the ambulance was sent for. The injured man was removed to the hospital, where he will probably be confined for at least five weeks.

LOSSES FROM SUNDAY'S FIRE.

List of Insurance Policies on Thompson Building and Contents.

The following is a correct list of the several amounts of insurance carried on the stock and building which was destroyed on North avenue last Sunday morning by fire: E. M. French & Co., $7,000 on the stock of the Bard Company; Wm. H. Abbott, $9,000 on building and $4,000 on the stock of the Bard Company; W. A. Woodruff, $6,000 on building; J. T. Vail, $2,000 on stock, and the Erie Insurance Company, of New York, carried a policy of $2,000. E. M. French & Co., carried about $500 on horse and wagon owned by Henry Phillips, and the same amount on the horses and wagons owned by Morey & LaRue, the laundry firm. These horses and wagons were kept in the rear of the building. On the building occupied by the U. S. Express Company there is an insurance of $6,200, and the loss is about $106. This policy is held by French & Co., who stand ready to settle all losses as soon as an inventory of loss is presented.

CONSTABLE WALLER'S TRIAL.

Ante-Mortem Statement Made by Jones Admitted as Evidence.

(Special to The Daily Press.)

Somerville, October 20—The trial of Constable William Waller, Thomas Shine and Thomas W. Wright, for robbery, was resumed at the Somerset County Court yesterday.

The case is likely to occupy most of the week, as forty witnesses are subpœnaed. The prisoners are the men who are charged with binding and gagging Henry Jones at the East Millstone station of the Pennsylvania Railroad and then robbing the safe. Jones died a few days later.

"Jerry" Washington, the colored man who turned State's evidence, concluded his testimony this morning.

Charles H. VanNostrand was then called. He attempted to give a statement that Jones made to him before his death, showing that he had a suspicion that the defendants were the guilty parties.

The testimony was objected to by counsel for defendants, and most of the morning was occupied with argument by Mr. Cowenhaven and Mr. Clark. The court finally admitted the evidence.

Detective Daniel McNally, of the Pensylvania Railroad, told the jury the information he had, which led up to the arrest of the defendants.

Insurance Fully Covers Loss.

Charles T. Vail, whose barn was destroyed by fire last Sunday morning on Plainfield avenue, held an insurance of $1,900 on the contents of the barn. The owner of the barn, Arthur W. Moore, of Newark, held an insurance of $1,000 on the building. Everything is a complete loss and E. M. French & Co., who carried the insurance, will settle the losses fully. It is believed that this fire was of incendiary origin, and the National Board of Underwriters will offer a reward of not less than $500 for the detection and conviction of the guilty party or parties.

Horse Stepped on His Foot.

Charles Lewis, an employee of R. O. Howell, the North avenue grocer met with quite a painful accident while working around the stable Tuesday afternoon. Charles had been cleaning the horses and in some way one of them stepped upon his foot, badly crushing that member. After having the foot dressed at home, he returned to work again but is still limping from the effect of the injury.

MEDICAL HEROES UNDER FIRE.

When the medical history of the last war in India is written it will prove interesting reading. There were many difficulties overcome and hardships endured with the usual element of danger. A good instance of this was when General Woodhouse was wounded early in the war. A bullet struck him in the thigh, passed down below the knee, broke into pieces and lodged. The Roentgen ray apparatus revealed the exact conditions, and it was determined to extract the pieces. In the middle of the operation, artificial light being used, the Afridis crawled up and suddenly blazed into the tent, sending thirteen shots through the canvas. Now that might have been a very disturbing circumstance and apt to interfere with the perfect application of the aseptic form of surgery. And what happened? Nothing. The operation went on and was successfully completed as if there were no Afridis within 100 miles.

Another incident is where a medical officer greatly distinguished himself, Surgeon Lieutenant Hugo.

Lieutenant Ford was dangerously wounded in the shoulder. The bullet cut the artery and he was bleeding to death when Surgeon Lieutenant V. Hugo came to his aid. The fire was too hot to permit of lights being used. There was no cover of any sort. It was at the bottom of the cup. Nevertheless, the surgeon struck a match at the peril of his life and examined the wound. The match went out amid a splutter of bullets which kicked up the dust all around, but by its uncertain light he saw the nature of the injury. The officer had already fainted from loss of blood. The doctor seized the artery, and as no other ligature was forthcoming, he remained under fire for three hours, holding a man's life between his finger and thumb. When at length it seemed that the enemy had broken into the camp, he picked up the still unconscious officer in his arms, and without relaxing his hold, bore him to a place of safety. His arm was for many hours paralyzed from cramp with the effects of the exertion of compressing the artery.—The Lancet.

Pity 'Twere Not Two.

It was their first baby. The young mother was in a perfect rapture. It was without doubt an ugly baby, but she did not know it. Happy young mother! All of them are like her. But the father had dark misgivings. His salary was only $10 per week and babies are expensive luxuries. Her father was rich, but he had frowned upon their union, and had heterodox and heretical notions as to supporting a son-in-law besides. Cruel old man! One day, when the baby was about a month old, the father came home from his office and found his wife radiant. She was even happy when the baby was out of her sight.

"What is it, Jennie?" asked her husband gloomily, for he was yet uncertain as to the blessings conferred by the baby.

He was also sleepy.

"Oh Charles," she chirruped, "I heard from papa to-day."

Charlie looked gloomier than ever.

"Don't say anything, dear," she pleaded, for she knew her husband's opinion of her father. "He has heard of our baby, and though he has not yet determined to forgive us, he has sent a check for $500 for dear baby's sake."

At first the young husband's face showed a gleam of pleasure, then it shadowed again.

"Aren't you glad, Charlie?" she asked, with a quivering lip.

Then he smiled joyfully.

"Yes, darling," he whispered, "but we should have had twins."—New York Herald.

When $1,000 Looked Big.

Divide anything up into pairs and you magnify it. A certain wise man took this way to give his wife an idea of how much $1,000 is. She had no idea of money. Her purchases were enormous. It happened one day that her eyes fell upon a magnificent ring, and she coveted it. It cost $1,000. But what was $1,000 to her in comparison with the ring? Of course her husband consented to the purchase. What could a dutiful, affectionate husband do? But he tried this method of explaining his wife concerning the extravagance of the ring. He instructed his banker to send her the $1,000 in small pieces—pennies, dimes, quarters. In came the money, bagful after bagful. She never had such an idea of $1,000 before. When the money was piled before her it alarmed her; the price of the ring went up a hundred fold, and was considered at once an extravagance which she of her own option abandoned.—New Orleans Times-Democrat.

SHERIDAN AT THE MILLINER'S.

His Gallantry to an American Woman in Paris During the Commune.

General Sheridan, as he became older, conquered his shyness. At the time of the Commune he was in Paris with his aide-de-camp. There was also stopping at the same hotel a charming American woman with whom he was slightly acquainted. The prisoners had been liberated and were rushing madly through the streets. The order had also been given that all windows and shutters must be kept closed. Shut in her dark room and hearing the noisy rabble below, the woman became greatly alarmed.

"There is but one thing for me to do," she cried, "to insure safety. I will put myself under the care of the American general."

She, therefore, sent her card to Sheridan, who at once called and offered his services. He also advised that she should join his party in the morning and get away to London. Still she appeared distressed. Finally she cried: "It is my bonnets at Virot's. They were to have been down to-day. How can I go and leave them?"

The general grasped the situation and offered his arm to escort her to the milliner's. Happily, it was not far off. Ever afterward he delighted to tell of his pleasure at seeing such an array of dainty headgear. He had never been at a milliner's before.—Cincinnati Commercial Tribune.

Dead Before She Was Hanged.

"I wonder," said a gentleman who, on account of family connections both North and South, had exceptional facilities for getting inside information during the civil war, "that Colonel Chris Rath, who hanged the murderers of President Lincoln, never made reference to the fact that Mrs. Surratt was dead when she was hanged. He must have known it. Why the fact has been suppressed so often I do not know. Mrs. Surratt had remarkable control of her emotions. She bore up under most trying circumstances and gave way only in the solitude of her cell. She never faltered as she was led to the gallows and appeared to retain her self control better than Powell, Herold or Atzerott. Her iron will never relaxed, but her heart gave way under the awful strain. She died in the arms of the priest who was comforting her, and he held her lifeless body while the noose was adjusted and the trap sprung."

TEXT OF OPINION ON MARTIN ACT TAXES.

Judge VanSyckel Clearly Defines the Situation.

OF GREAT INTEREST TO CITY.

BONA FIDE PURCHASER CANNOT BE HELD FOR DEBT OF ANOTHER.

Innocent Purchasers of Property Cannot be Held for Liens on Property That Were Brought About by Failure of Former Owners to Pay Their Taxes—Judicial Authorities are Quoted.

It is a matter of great interest to Plainfielders to know exactly the decision given by Supreme Court Justice VanSyckel in the matter of the report of the Martin Act Commissioners for the city of Plainfield. Corporation Counsel Craig A. Marsh was for the city, while R. V. Lindabury represented the taxpayers. The report is a confirmation of the request made by the City Council inasmuch as it was the wish of the latter that the innocent purchasers of property be exempt from the enforcement of the act, and these facts were presented to the Court by the Corporation Counsel. The decision of the Court is a strong document and the text in full is as follows:

Three questions arise on this application for confirmation.

1. Should the report be confirmed in so far as it readjusts and reimposes taxes which were due more than twenty years before the appointment of Commissioners for the readjustment.

2. Should the report be confirmed in so far as it readjusts and reimposes taxes the lien of which had expired before the appointment of Commissioners.

3. Should the report be confirmed in so far as it readjusts and reimposes taxes in cases where not only had the lien expired before the appointment of Commissioners, but the property had also been sold to bonafide purchasers.

First—In regard to the first question I concur in the view of the late Justice Abbett reported in 17th N. J. Law Journal, page 23, subsequently adopted by Justice Lippincott, and can see no reason why the ordinary presumption of payment does not apply in cases of taxation. It accords with the general policy of the law and payment, that is, actual payment will be presumed to have been made until that presumption is rebutted.

Second—In my judgment it is the clearly expressed intention of the legislative acts to authorize the readjustment of unpaid taxes and to impose them upon lands of the delinquent taxpayer. The Legislature was dealing with a public debtor and I know of no limitation upon the power of the Legislature to make provision for the appropriation of the property of such debtors to the satisfaction of their obligations to the public. It is not the levy of a new tax but a proceeding to enforce the payment of a tax legally laid, and the Legislature has the power to make it a lien on the property of the taxpayer, even upon property other than that which he owned at the time the tax was originally imposed. In my judgment the fact that the lien of the taxes has expired does not affect the right of the Commissioners to re-impose taxes upon land still owned by the delinquents.

Third—Where the lands have been sold to bona fide purchasers after the tax lien had expired and before the appointment of Commissioners, a different question is presented.

I agree with the views expressed by Justice Garrison in 23 Vroom, page 5, which were adopted by Vice Chancellor Pitney in Compton against The Mayor and city of Newark; but the difference between an assessment for benefits upon lands by a public improvement, and a general tax, is clearly pointed out by Justice Dupee in 20 Vroom, page 488.

In the absense of any lien imposed by statute or where the lien created by statute has expired by limitation, the tax is a mere debt of the taxpayer to the public.

The Legislature has no power to impose upon the property of A. a lien for the debt of B. and I can perceive no difference in principle whether the debt of B. is a debt to a private citizen or to the public treasury. The property of B. may be pursued for his debt, but when it has legally passed to a bona fide purchaser without any existing lien upon it, it is secure against a burden for the debt of B. After the lien of a tax has expired I think the case stands as if there had never been a law creating a lien upon lands for taxes.

While the lands remain in the END OF ANNIVERSARY.

SPECIAL CHURCH SERVICES AT DUNELLEN CLOSED LAST NIGHT.

Supper and Entertainment Provided by the Women, Who Helped to Increase Treasury—Those Who Were in Charge.

(Special To The Daily Press.)

Dunellen, October 21—A supper and entertainment, under the auspices of the Ladies' Aid Society, brought to a close the celebration of the twenty-fifth anniversary of the Methodist church last night. Supper was served from 6 until about 9 o'clock when the entertainment began, and it was nearly midnight before the affair finally ended and the people departed.

Pastor and people feel well satisfied with the services during the past few days, for the anniversary was a success religiously, socially and financially. About $30 was taken up at the collections, $15 of which went to defray the expenses.

The ladies in charge of the supper tables were the members of the Ladies' Aid Society of which Mrs. F. H. Gise is the president; Mrs. J. A. Kennedy, vice president; Mrs. T. J. Todd, secretary, and Mrs. J. F. G. Kinney, treasurer. Good things in abundance were provided, and the supper was an old fashioned one, well worth the small sum charged for it.

In one corner of the room stood a large evergreen tree in charge of Miss Mabel Jamison. It was called the "surprise tree," and by the payment of a dime any one could purchase one of the mysterious looking packages displayed on its limbs. Miss Jamison's assistants were members of the Junior League.

The members of the C. S. G. Club had charge of one candy table. The young ladies disposing of the sweets refused to tell what "C. S. G." stands for, but some one suggested that perhaps they are the "Can't Stand Gum" girls. The other candy table was presided over by Mrs. George Huff.

After supper an entertainment was given. The first number on the programme was a dialogue entitled "Arabella's Poor Relations" Those who took part in this were Miss May Apgar, Miss Grace Vail, Bert Apgar and George Richardson. There was a solo by Miss Mabel Jamison, "A Winter's Lullaby" and a humorous lecture, by the pastor, entitled, "Absent Minded Folks."

Among those there was noticed James McGee, of Plainfield, who with 37 members of his Sunday-school class in the Monroe Avenue church came down to take supper.

SUES FOR BICYCLE DAMAGES.

William Mount Wants George MacLaughlin to Pay Him $19.

Justice Mosher has issued a summons in the case of William Mount, of Bound Brook, against George MacLaughlin, of this city, for $19, which Mount claims MacLaughlin ought to pay him for repairs on a wheel. It seems that on August 20th Mount and MacLaughlin were riding their wheels on South avenue in opposite directions, Mount going home and MacLaughlin riding towards Netherwood.

Near the Netherwood station the wheelmen collided. Mount claims he was on the right side of the road, and that the other was to blame for the accident. At all events Mount's wheel was wrecked, and he claims it cost him just $19 to have it put back in good condition again. Mount also says that when he sent the bill for repairs to MacLaughlin, the latter sent back an impertinent answer, refusing to pay it. The case comes to trial October 27th.

SOLDIER BOY IS DEAD.

PRIVATE CHARLES JOHNSON SUCCUMBED TO TYPHOID FEVER.

He Was a Member of Company D, First Regiment, New Jersey Volunteers—Death Occurred in a Newark Hospital.

(Special to The Daily Press.)

Newark, Oct. 21.—The death of Private Charles Johnson, son of the late Potter Johnson, and a member of Co. D, First Regiment, N. J. Vols., occurred last Tuesday night at St. Barnabas Hospital, this city. Mr. Johnson formerly resided in Plainfield with his mother and sisters and was well known among a large circle of friends. Several years ago the family moved to this city, where Mr. Johnson held several positions. When the war broke out he enlisted and after remaining at Sea Girt for a time with his regiment he was sent to Falls Church, Va., where the regiment remained during the progress of the war. While in the south Mr. Johnson contracted typhoid fever and was brought home when he was thought to be in a convalescent state. He afterward grew worse and it was soon learned that he could not live. A military funeral was held at his late home last Wednesday, and his company attended in a body.

The body will be taken to Plainfield and services will be held in Trinity Reformed church next Sunday afternoon at 4 o'clock. Just a few hours previous to Mr. Johnson's death he was visited by Rev. Cornelius, Ph.D., his former pastor of Plainfield, and a very helpful spiritual talk was had.

WANTS WRIT QUASHED.

A Fanwood Woman Involved in Trouble in a Justice's Court.

Murphy & Blatz, the lawyers, were retained yesterday by Mrs. Ada Drake, of Fanwood, to have a writ of attachment issued out of Justice Moffett's court quashed.

Mrs. Drake, who is an old resident of Fanwood, sold her household goods at auction a few days ago, and while the sale was in progress Constable Rockafellow came up, and armed with a writ of attachment seized upon the unsold goods and the money in the auctioneer's hands on the grounds that Mrs. Drake was a new resident. Mr. Blatz will apply to Justice Moffett at once to have the writ quashed.

CRANE IN THE LEAD.

He Has 900 Votes to Voorhees' 150 at Catholic Fair.

The contest at the Catholic Club between Crane and Voorhees, the Democratic and Republican nominees for Governor, is growing interesting. As the count stands now Crane has over 900 votes and Voorhees only about 150. Voorhees has not yet acknowledged the letter telling him he is a candidate in the contest. The contest will be closed tomorrow night, and unless Voorhees picks up tonight, Crane will win the cane.

Entertained Scholars.

Mrs. Powell, of Fairview avenue, entertained her Sunday-school from Grace M. E. church, at her home last evening. There were in addition to the fifteen members of the class, about fifteen other guests and the time was pleasantly passed in a social way. There was a programme of vocal and instrumental music and recitations, while some of the guests enjoyed playing games. During the evening a bountiful repast was served by the hostess.

Jack Carney Was There.

John Carney entertained the guests at the Catholic Club fair last night with a few recitations, and there was a short programme besides of music and singing. The big night will be Saturday when several of the contests will close. Even now the fair has been a success financially and in two more nights the gains will swell perceptibly.

Had No License.

William Naylor, of Brooklyn, was arrested in the borough late yesterday afternoon on a charge of peddling writing paper, envelopes, etc., without a license. This morning he was arraigned before Mayor Wilson and fined $3, all that he had. He promised His Honor that he would in the future give North Plainfield a wide berth.

ROUSING ECHO OF STATE CONVENTION.

Local Endeavorers Hear of That Great Gathering.

INSPIRING MUSIC GIVEN.

STIRRING ADDRESS BY REV. LUCIUS R. DYOTT, OF NEWARK.

Short Talks on Different Phases of Convention by Miss Morse and L. D. H. Gilmore—Mr. Gilmore Led the Singing as at Convention—Consecration Service in Charge of Miss F. Hawkins.

Some of the enthusiasm that swayed the great Christian Endeavor convention at Asbury Park was imported by the Plainfield Local Union for the convention echo meeting in which the Endeavor Societies of the city united last night.

The meeting was held in the Seventh-Day Baptist church, and was well attended. The Endeavor spirit of interest and devotion pervaded the church from the moment the song service began, led by L. D. H. Gilmore, of Newark, who conducted the inspiring music of the convention. With the large, vigorous man, a skilful and enthusiastic leader, on the platform, and Miss Jessie Utter at the organ, the music could not help going well.

Miss Florence Genevieve Hawkins, president of the Plainfield local union, presided over the meeting. The Scripture lesson was read by Rev. A. E. Main, and prayer was offered by Rev. Dr. A. H. Lewis. The first report of the Asbury Park convention was given by Miss Minnie Genevieve Morse, of the Congregat onal Endeavor Society. The report dealt briefly but with much enthusiasm with the social and intellectual side of the convention, and quoted a few especially strong or practical remarks of the best speakers.

"The musical side of the convention" was the subject assigned to L. D. H. Gilmore. His bright and entertaining little talk not only described the singing, by soloists and congregation at Asbury Park, but urged the Endeavorers to do better their part in the congregational singing. "We expect the clergyman to do our preaching and praying for us," said he' "but when the singing begins it is our turn. Let us do our part better."

The real address of the evening was given by Rev. Lucius R. Dyott, of Newark. He did not make any formal report of the convention, bnt in his strong, fervent and helpful talk he brought to his hearers the very spirit of consecration and Christian joy that prevaded that grthering. He called his hearers to that service in which one hand is stretched up to God for that illumination of mind and strength of soul needed for the Christian life and the other hand stretched out to others in helpfulness. The solemn impression created by the address was increased by a beautiful solo sung by Mr. Gilmore, impressing the lesson of God's watchful care for his children. Then came the climax of the meeting, the closing consecration service, conducted by Miss Hawkins. "If ye abide in me, and my words abide in you, ye shall ask what ye will, and it shall be done into you," was the keynote of the consecration meeting. Earnest words were spoken by the leader, urging a deepening of the Christian life among the societies, words of consecration and of prayer were heard from all parts of the house, then "God be with you" was sung, and the Mizpah benediction, followed by the apostolic benediction, pronounced by Rev. A. E. Main, closed a very successful meeting.

The committee of arrangements in charge of the meeting consisted of Miss Ernestine Smith, secretary Local Union, chairman; A. A. Lake, of Dunellen, vice president Local Union and Ira Winthrop Travell, superintendent Local Union social department.

Improving All The Time

John Powers, the druggist at the corner of Craig place and Somerset street, has been making extensive improvements in his up-to-date store. He has been adding several counters in the rear for prescription work and his soda counter has been lengthened. The improvements are just what is needed and Mr. Powers is now better able to attend to his increasing business. An extra fine stock of toilet soap has just been received and it is being sold rapidly at prices that are reasonable.

On the Way to Manila.

William Stepenson, of East Sixth street, is now on one of Uncle Sam's warships on the way to Manila. He enlisted as cook and he has an excellent job. It is not known when he will return.

ON A RUNAWAY WHEEL.

WALTER L. LONG MADE A FAST TRIP DOWN DUGWAY HILL.

He Was Descending the Steep Incline When the Crank to His Wheel Snapped—He Wound Up in a Heap.

Walter L. Long, of Park avenue, is now walking. The fact is, however, that Long is so thankful to be able to walk at all that he doesn't mind it. Late Wednesday afternoon he passed through an experience without serious injury, a repetition of which would undoubtedly have fatal results.

Long was returning from Union Village awheel late Wednesday afternoon, when he reached the Dugway hill, which is famous in the history of the vicinity as the steepest and longest hill for miles around. It is the long ascent from Washingtonville over the second ridge of mountains.

Long had no brake on his wheel but he was perfectly confident in being able to hold the wheel back by backpedalling. He had gone a quarter the way down the hill, which is a mile in length, when suddenly, without warning, the crank to his bicycle snapped. The pedals and crank-shaft fell off. The chain dragged on the ground.

With nothing to control the wheel, away it went at break-neck speed while Long clung to the handle bars. The chain did not catch at first but kept revolving, tearing Long's trousers and lacerating his flesh as it struck.

The wild ride continued for nearly a mile when the chain caught in the rear sprocket and spokes. There was a crash. The wheel stopped suddenly and Long plunged head-first into a heap of compast at the side of the road. It was soft and so he escaped without serious injury. Had he struck on the rocks that line the side of the roadway, serious and perhaps fatal results would have been inevitable.

Several of the farmers saw Long on his wheel descending the hill and supposed that he was surely killed. They assisted him in gathering the remains of his wheel together. Sections were scattered about for some distance. He was then taken home and is able to be about once more while his wheel has gone to a neighboring bicycle-hospital.

FOUR SCORE YEARS OF LIFE.

Death of William Graydon at the Age of Eighty Years.

William Graydon, aged 80 years, who for the past fifteen years has been a resident of this city, died at 2 o'clock this morning at his home 321 West Eighth street, corner of Central avenue. The cause of death was heart trouble which disease had been troubling the deceased for about one year. Mr. Graydon was born in Ireland October 25th, 1818, and when a young man came to this country. He was for many years a widely-known dry goods merchant in New York. He retired from business many years ago, and since that time had been living a life of quiet and ease. He was a communicant of Grace P. E. church on East Seventh street. He leaves a widow. The funeral services will be held next Sunday afternoon from the home on Eighth street, at 4:15 o'clock. Interment will be in Greenwood Cemetery and will be private.

THE DEATH OF MRS. OLLIF.

She Formerly Resided in Brooklyn—Died in This City.

The death of Mrs. Isabella S. Ollif, youngest daughter of the late Col. William Steele, of Brooklyn, and wife of Dr. James H. Ollif, of 1058 Arlington avenue, occurred last Monday. For some time past Mrs. Ollif had been very ill, but she always rallied so quickly that her death was very unexpected. Ten years ago Mr. Ollif moved to Plainfield from Brooklyn, where she was well known. All who knew her loved her for her sweet and always pleasant words. Three daughters survive her, Mrs. Pittinger, of Cayuga, N. Y.; Mrs. Percy VanAlstyne and Miss Hattie Currie, of this city. Services were held from the late home yesterday morning at 11 o'clock, and interment was made in Greenwood cemetery.

Brakeman's Hand Hurt.

Charles Skillman, of Park avenue, a brakeman on drill engine 179, met with an accident last night while he was coupling cars. In some manner Skillman's left hand got caught in the couplings, and the strain to which it was subjected burst the skin and flesh. Skillman went to a physician and had the hand dressed. He is not working today.

FOR THE CHURCH FUND.

DELIGHTFUL TEA GIVEN AT HOME OF REV. MR. DOWNEY.

The House Prettily Decorated for the Occasion—Profits to Be Used for the Building Fund—Those Who Had Charge.

One of the most delightful teas of the autumn season was that of yesterday afternoon between the hours of 4 and 6 o'clock, given by Mrs. Downey, wife of Rev. Mr. Downey, pastor of the Church of the Redeemer, at their home on Sycamore avenue. The affair was given for the benefit of the church building fund and was in every way a success. The home was prettily decorated with greens and cosmos, while the several tables were made attractive through the use of different colored lights, and the display of many pretty things for sale.

In the dining room Mrs. George Dupee poured chocolate, and Mrs. Clapp poured tea. Miss Rita Pound, Miss Phillips, Miss Faber and a number of other young women of the church assisted in waiting on the guests. Mrs. Downey, assisted by Mrs. Charles Matthews and Mrs. Phillips, received the guests.

At the candy table Miss Barlow and Miss Phillips were in charge, while Mrs. Brown and Mrs. Rhoads presided at the cake table. A very pretty fancy table was in charge of Mrs. A. E. Faber, Jr., and Miss Minnie Wilson. Everything was disposed of and it is believed that $75 will be cleared. An encouraging feature was the large attendance of not only members of the church, but many out-of-town guests, as well as the men of the church and several clergymen in this city and the borough.

The sum of twenty-five cents was received at the door and Miss Stevens attended to the reception of the money. These teas will be given at intervals throughout the fall and winter at the homes of the various members of the church.

TROUBLE CAUSED BY A HAT.

Commenced in Fun and is Now Being Heard in Court.

Henry Bundy and Charles Scudder, two colored men, have been having considerable trouble this fall over a little fracas they engaged in last summer. The matter found its way into the courts and came to trial yesterday in New Brunswick.

It was during the three days' racing at the Driving Park along in July. Bundy and Scudder were both there and so was a prominent hotel and livery stable proprietor of Bound Brook. Suddenly, as the story goes, the liveryman seized Bundy's hat, a great broad sombero, and began to toss it about. Finally Bundy grew angry and tired of the fun. He demanded his hat, and it was refused. Then he caught the persecutor and, the liveryman claims, assaulted him, striking him on the cheek and using his teeth.

Thomas Martin, a special policeman, who was on duty on the grounds at the time and James Babbitt, ran up and separated the men. The liveryman then appeared before a justice of the peace in Middlesex county and made a complaint against Bundy. The complaint also included Scudder, who, the man said, assisted Bundy in his assault.

Bundy was arrested by Chief Grant and taken before Justice Nash who afterwards turned him over to the Middlesex county justice. The men were held in bail, indicted by the Grand Jury, and tried yesterday. Scudder was acquitted, but Bundy was found guilty. He will come up for sentence tomorrow morning.

TAKES THE HYGEIA'S OUTPUT OF ICE.

Contract Requires That Not Over 40 Cents a Hundred Shall be Charged

F. T. Ostrom, of this city, has just made a contract with the Plainfield Hygeia Ice Company for the control of the entire output of the new plant located in this city, and has taken charge at once. It is proposed to harvest 3,000 tons of ice a year and a market for the product will be sought between the points of Long Branch and Somerville. Already Mr. Ostrom has received applications for ice by the carload.

The contract signed by Mr. Ostrom and company stipulates that the people of Plainfield shall not be charged over 40 cents a hundred for ice and it may be sold lower. No matter how scarce the supply the price will not go over 40 cents. The work of harvesting ice is now in progress and the quality is of the finest. The company is already considering the advisability of having the Westinghouse Company put in an exact duplicate of the present plant.

A CHOIR OF PRIESTS IN SACRED CONCERT.

Fine Musical Programme Rendered in St. Joseph's Church.

NUMBERS WERE CLASSICAL.

REV. FATHER MILLER ONE OF THE ACCOMPANIST ON THE PIANO.

Frequent Applause Accorded to All the Participants—Interior of the Church Was Prettily Decorated With Roses and Potted Plants—A Number of Soloists Were Heard—Programme as Rendered.

St. Joseph's R. C. church was well filled with members and friends last evening when a sacred concert was giver by the choir of the church, assisted by a choir of priests of the southern diocese under the direction of Rev. Father Miller, of St. Joseph's church. Mrs. Frank LaPorte and Rev. Father Miller were the accompanists on the piano and Miss Quinn assisted with the violin. The programme was a classical one and was well rendered throughout.

Frequent applause was accorded the several numbers and the work of both choirs was very creditable, as was also the solo work of Miss Smith, the Misses Betts, and the several priests whose names appear on the programme. A NEW INDUSTRY PROBABLE.

Fire Arms Manufactory Can be Induced to Come Here.

It now looks as though there are pretty good chances of a new factory being located in this city, that is, the one which makes guns and fire-arms. The step taken by the Board of Trade last Monday evening offering to the company a strip of land along the the Central Railroad Company's line on West Front street, has struck a popular chord. The land necessary will cost about $400 and this amount can easily be raised by subscription.

Charles Hand has offered to meet the members of the firm in this city and take them in a carriage about the city, and this fact has been communicated to them. There seems to be no doubt but what this company can be induced to locate here. In addition to the above Mr. Hand has the applications of several other firms who want to locate in this city.

Death of a Former Plainfielder.

Lenard Golding, formerly of this city, died at his home in Brooklyn, Wednesday evening. He was well known here, having a large circle of friends. He once resided with Mrs. B. Bushnell, on East Second street, and was a number of years with Albertus Swalm, in the paint business on North avenue.

Took His Finger Off.

FRANCE'S WARLIKE ACT

Reserves in Towns Near Brest to Be Held Ready.

ENGLISH PRESS IS DEFIANT

Fashoda Situation Provokes Discussion. Naval Reserves Said to Have Been Ordered to be in Readiness for Service. England Will Not Shrink from Anything That May Come.

Paris, Oct. 21.—A dispatch from Brest to the Aurore says that orders have been issued for the mobilization of five local classes of reserves. The mayors upon whom the orders were served were informed, however, that the men would only be held in readiness for service and not be called out definitely until telegraphic instructions to that effect were received.

The Matin says if any unfriendly act is committed England will be the delinquent, because she has divided Egypt with every nation except France, which had the most right there.

The Echo de Paris says that the military preparations which are being made do not mean that the government nourishes bellicose intentions, but certain precautions are necessary against an enemy who is known to be unscrupulous.

London, Oct. 21.—The speech delivered at North Shields Wednesday by Sir Michael Hicks-Beach, chancellor of the exchequer, in which he declared that there were greater evils than war, and that England would not shrink from anything that might come, has further stimulated discussion of the Fashoda situation. Nearly all of the afternoon newspapers contain leading articles on the subject.

The Pall Mall Gazette's article is headed "Worse Things Than War," and points out the advantages that England would be likely to gain in case of war.

The St. James Gazette says: "There is reason for England to be calm, not because of the reports that France is arming, which we do not believe, but because we are as ready with our national defences as ever in our history."

The Westminster Gazette praises the cabinet council's skilful management of the Fashoda affair and says: "Public opinion, though firm concerning the substance of the dispute, requires Lord Salisbury to do nothing to increase France's dicuffilties."

Berlin, Oct. 21.—The St. Petersburg correspondent of the Cologne Gazette, in a dispatch to that paper on the political situation, says: "Here also interest in the Nile question is rapidly increasing, and Russia's conduct in this matter will conform to the expectations formed in connection with her alliance with France."

According to the Gazette's correspondent, the Russian finance minister, acting in concert with Count Muravieff, minister of foreign affairs, has attempted to raise a large loan in Paris, and a similar attempt will be made in Berlin.

Czar's Peace Idea Indorsed.

Washington, D. C., Oct. 21.—At the meeting of the House of Deputies of the Episcopal convention, a letter was agreed upon to the Czar of Russia, statitng that the general convention hails with joy the great peace manifesto issued by the czar. The letter was agreed to 270 to 41. A further resolution favored instructions to the United States commissioner to the Czar's conference favoring the establishment of a permanent international court for the settlement of disputes which may arise between nations. There were objections to this plan and it was tabled, 193 to 79.

The Rev. B. R. Taylor of Los Angeles said that in view of the action relative to the Czar of Russia it was eminently proper that the house adopt the pending resolution expressing thanks to Great Britain for the sympathy shown toward the United States in the recent war with Spain. The resolution aroused spirited controversy, but was carried.

By unanimous vote, the house adopted a resolution fixing Tuesday next, October 25, as the day of final adjournment, the cvlosing exercises to occur at 8 p. m.

NO FAITH CURE.

ABOUT STUART'S DYSPEPSIA TABLETS.

They Cure Stomach Troubles and Indigestion Anyway. Whether You Have Faith in Them or Not.

Mere faith will not digest your food for you, will not give an appetite, will not increase your flesh and strengthen your nerves and heart, but Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets will do all these things, because they are composed of the elements of digestion, they contain the juices, acids and peptones necessary to the digestion and assimilation of all wholesome food.

Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets will digest food if placed in a jar or bottle in water heated to 98 degrees, and they will do it much more effectively when taken into the stomach after meals, whether you have faith that they will or not.

They invigorate the stomach, make pure blood and strong nerves, in the only way that nature can do it, and that is, plenty of wholesome food well digested. It is not what we eat, but what we digest that does us good.

Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets are sold by nearly all druggists at 50 cents for full sized package or by mail from the Stuart Co., Marshall, Mich. 17 19 21

ABOUT FLORIDA CAMP

Committee of War Commission Submits a Report.

THEY FIND NO FAULT

Report of the Sub Committee of the Commission on the Florida Camp. The Committee Was Favorably Impressed With the Site.

Jacksonville, Fla., Oct. 21.—Gen. J. Wilson and Capt. Howell, constituting the sub-committee appointed to visit and report upon the conditions at Camp Cuba Libre, made their report to the full commission yesterday. The following is the important part of the document:

"We carefully examined the site of the camp of the Third Pennsylvania Volunteers, which it has been reported was a trtopical jungle, on worthless land until cleared, and upon clearing which the troops are said to have worked like slaves until it was fit for a camp site. While your committee cannot state the condition of this land when the troops arrived, it found no appearance of a tropical jungle in the vicinity. There were no evidences of there having been serious work in preparing the camps, although, as is usual, there were small bushes, vines, and low palms here and there over the cap sites and adjacent land.

"Altogether the committee was most favorably impressed with the character of the site selected. We visited and obtained from the County Clerk of Nassau county, Fla., Mr. George E. Wolff, a map showing the lands occupied by the troops, and his official certificate as to the ownership of the land. This certificate states that the greater part of the lands occupied reverted to the state of Florida in June, 1897, by reason of unpaid taxes, and that no one by the name of Alger ever controlled any lands in the county of Nassau, as shown by the records, and that the land occupied by the Third Pennsylvania Volunteers at Fernandina as a camp was at the time the property of the state of Florida.

"The water was piped without expenditure to the camp from Fernandina, being from an artesian well about 60 feet deep, the supply was unlimited. The water had a slight sulphur taste, which it is said some of the troops disliked, and occasionally used surface water. The locations of the hospitals pointed out to us, were on high ground well drained, and apparently well selected. The Mayor of Fernandina informed us that Major endley, the surgeon in charge of the camp, had stated to him just before the troops left, that the number of sick was 540.

"Your committee, therefore, has the honor to report that, in its opinion, the camp was well selected; that probably the site was equal in all respects to any other that could have been found on the Florida coast. That from the information it obtained, and what it saw, it was far from being a tropical jungle, and that the certificate of the county clerk indicates that no government official was interested in the land; that the amount of work done in clearing the underbrush was no greater than might have been expected at almost any locality in the south, selected for camping purposes; that the site was well drained, the water for drinking and cooking purposes good, and the bathing facilities at the sea beach excellent."

Killed by a Chinese Mob.

Paris, October 21.—At the cabinet meeting yesterday the minister of foreign affairs, M. Delcasse, read a dispatch from the French minister at Pekin, M. Gerard, announcing that a French missionary and several Chinese Catholics have been massacred or burned to death in a chapel at Paklung, in the south of China, by a riotous mob. M. Gerard immediately demanded reparation from the Chinese government, including pecuniary compensation.

M. Delcasse instructed M. Gerard to inform the Chinese foreign office that the French government will take action if China does not adopt measures absolutely guaranteeing the lives of the missionaries.

EXCITING TIMES IN WHEAT.

European Complications and Demands Mark Prices Up Sharply.

New York, October 21.—There was a decided flurry in wheat yesterday and for a time after the market opened the scenes in the pit were of the same exciting nature as they were last spring during the progress of the Leiter deal. The foreign markets were responsible for the unusual advances both here and at Chicago, as the December and March options at Liverpool were selling four pence higher than yesterday when trading began here in the morning. This sudden bulge was entirely unexpected, and early traders on the "curb" covered their short contracts with great alacrity. In the open market the speculative futures started the day at a two cent gain over the day before, and as the pendulum on the big dial under the gallery which records quotations made a complete circuit twice, inactive traders cheered and active traders bellowed and performed amusing contortions in their efforts to sell or buy at an advantageous figure.

The political situation abroad, which was regarded as more serious than ever, combined with the immense export demand from nearly every large European country, has caused the upturn in wheat prices. Sales are daily being made in this city and at Baltimore and Philadelphia of from 1,000,000 bushels to 1,500,000 bushels of wheat and corn. This is greater than the amount of new wheat that is at the seaport cities, or is due to arrive in some time. The greater part of these sales are for the United Kingdom and for the Continent. The flour sales also are enormous.

An Execution Carnival

Vancouver, B. C., Oct. 21.—According to the latest advices from China, eight subordinate leaders of the Kwangski rebellion have been beheaded at Wu Chow. They were carried in baskets through the principal streets as a warning spectacle amid the laughter and jeers of men, women and children.

Ten thousand people witnessed the decapitation and made it a gala day. Little children copied their parents, who joked at the dying rebels a second before the axe fell. When all was over the children played among the headless, bleeding corpses and made sport with the black, disfigured heads.

Mandarins and headsmen improvised a sort of May pole and the heads of the rebels were placed on top, the children dancing around them. The governor advised the mandarins to make the beheading as festive as possible, so as to insure disgust for the rebels in the hearts of the people. A banquet was afterward spread.

The "Japan Mail" says a petition has been sent to the government by foreign consuls requesting that beheading be discontinued.

American Capital in China.

San Francisco, Oct. 20—William Barclay Parsons, who represents the New York syndicate that is to build the new railroad from Hankow to Canton, is in this city, and will sail on the China, accompanied by several engineers, to make a reconnoisance of the route.

The American syndicate is to receive in bonds guaranteed by the Chinese Government, the entire cost of the road, and an agreement upon percentage to cover supervision and a profit. The syndicate is also to receive twenty per cent. of the net earnings of the road for forty-five years, the other eighty per cent. going to the Chinese Government. During the forty-five years the American syndicate has the right to appoint all the officials and manage the road. At the end of the forty-five years the road goes absolutely to the Chinese Government.

Asylum Building Contract.

Albany, Oct. 21.—The State Lunacy Commission announces the award to Miles Leonard of Binghamton for $697,707 of the contract for the erection and finishing of buildings at Central Islip to be connected with the Manhattan State Hospital, and designed to accommodate 2,250 insane patients.

Leonard's bid was the lowest for semi-fire proof construction, involving fire-proof connecting corridors and entire fire-proof main cottage. The bids for entire fire-proof construction exceeded the amount available for the work.

Nova Scotia Gold Mining Deal

Halifax, Oct. 20.—Negotiations for the sale of several Nova Scotia gold mines to an English syndicate are now on.

The Picton and Jubilee mines at Renfrew, the Oland, Shephard, Ferguson and Salisbury mines at Montagua, and the Gus Wilson mine at Waverley, together with water power, tract of land, a chlorination plant, a hotel and other buildings are included in the deal.

Gold from the Klondike.

Seattle, Wash., October 21.—The receipts of the Seattle assay office and the San Francisco mint of the clean-up of the season's output of Klondike gold are $8,000,000. Superintendent Wing of the former said that his office had taken in $4,400,000, and the San Francisco mint $3,800,000. Besides this, it is estimated that dust equalling $500,000 was sent to Philadelphia, Denver, and Helena. The local assay office has advices of a single consignment of $663,000 now en route here.

Reviewing Stand Falls.

Elizabeth, N. J., Oct. 21.—During the progress of the Elizabeth firemen's annual parade yesterday afternoon the reviewing stand on which were about one hundred officials from Elizabeth, Newark, Rahway, Bayonne and New Brunswick, suddenly collapsed, precipitating them all in a heap to the street. Two dozen of them were more or less bruised, but none seriously.

Arnica was in great demand after the accident. The Elizabeth Hospital ambulance was quickly at the scene, but no one was hurt enough to be taken to that institution. The crash caused some excitement among the assembled throngs, and caused a brief stoppage of the parade.

SITUATION AT MANILA

A Long Dispatch Received From Gen. Otis.

PART NOT MADE PUBLIC

Its Contents Cabled to Our Peace Commissioners. Relations With the Insurgents. The Spanish Story of an Engagement With Insurgent Vessels Not Believed.

Washington, October 21.—Gen. Otis, the United States military commander in the Philippines, has cabled to the War Department a long dispatch regarding the conditions in Manila and the Philippines. The dispatch relates matters which bear on the negotiations pending in Paris, and will be cabled to the United States Peace Commissioners.

The War Department has posted the following bulletin of the dispatch:

Under date of Oct. 19, Gen. Otis cabled the War Department: "The situation in Luzon somewhat improved. Influence of Filipinos of education and property not desiring independent government, but hostile to Spain, gaining ascendancy in revolutionary councils. Promising nothing, but enforcing the law. Complications seriously affect inter-island commerce and diminish revenue.

"Affairs progressing favorably, though sick report increasing, owing mostly to carelessness of enlisted men. Health of officers good. Condition of city and facilities for quartering troops improving. Fever decreasing. Intestinal troubles about the same. Many slight ailments; smallpox apparently arrested. During the month twenty-eight deaths; eight smallpox, eight typhoid, five malarial and intestinal complaints; three accidental."

Gen. Otis cabled considerably more than the above, but the department does not deem it advisable to make the other portions of the dispatch public, because of its bearing upon the peace negotiations. It contains suggestions by Gen. Otis regarding the disposition of the Philippines and also information about the insurgents.

The Spanish report of a naval battle between Rear-Admiral Dewey's vessels and the insurgent "navy" in the Philippines is received with incredulity in both the Navy and War Departments here. If there has been any recent action, Rear-Admiral Dewey has failed to mention it, and neither Gen. Otis nor United States Consul Wildman has regarded it as worthy of notice.

It is believed at the navy department that the Spanish authorities refer to the seizure of the little steamer Abby by the dispatch boat McCulloch on September 2. This steamer was of American register, though formerly known as the Pasig. It was reported to Rear Admiral Dewey that she was bringing arms and supplies of war to the insurgents. He sent the McCulloch to stop this movement, but when the cutter found the Abby in Batanzas bay the latter vessel had landed her cargo of arms and the insurgents refused to give them up. Thereupon the Abby was seized and taken by the McCulloch to Manila. This affair could not be dignified by the name of a naval engagement, and Rear Admiral Dewey, in reporting the seizure to the navy department, made little of it.

It is possible that there have been similar incidents in the islands of Cebu or Panay not deemed worthy of report as it has been alleged that some insurgent vessels have been carrying arms to spread the insurrection in those islands, and Rear-Admiral Dewey would have taken action to repress them. But the reports to the Navy Department show that it is absurd to speak of an insurgent navy seriously, for the entire force consists of a few schooners and one or two little coasting steamers. The explanation of the Admiral's interference with these vessels in their operations is a desire on his part to maintain the status quo in the Philippines pending the conclusion of the Peace Commission's work in Paris.

It is regarded here as not surprising that the Spanish cabinet should try to make much of any incident that could be twisted into a demonstration of actual hostilities between the occupying American forces in the Philippines and the insurgents.

The Peace Negotiations.

Paris, October 21. — The Spanish Peace Commissioners have not yet received from Madrid either instruction or permission to relinquish Cuban sovereignty, without seeking to attach some condition providing for the assumption of the Cuban debt by the United States. If they remain of their present mind and act under their present instructions, the Spaniards will not, at to-day's meeting, acquiesce to the United States' position. They regard the situation as calculated to excite pity for Spain, and are not averse to exciting sympathy.

The Spanish Commissioners say that the American answer to their Cuban debt propositions is very long, and that they have not yet had time to mediate fully upon it. They intend to make another written presentment, and expect an extended discussion thereon.

England's Trouble in China.

Hong Kong, Oct. 21.—Canton advices say that the magistrate at Sunon applied to the authorities at Canton for soldiers to subdue the bad characters in that district, and that 500 troops were at once dispatched there. The district includes part of Great Britain's new territory. Reports continue to be received of the collection of funds for the purpose of arming the population of Sunon to resist the British.

A Whole Town in Danger.

Vancouver, Oct. 21.—The mining town of Wellington, Vancouver Island, is undermined, through the extensive operations of the coal company, and a few weeks ago a house slid down into an abyss.

There is every sign now that this experience is likely to be repeated on a large scale. The people are panic stricken.

HOMEWARD BOUND.

The President Starts for Washington. Future Plans.

Chicago, October 21.—The weather for the last day of the Chicago peace jubilee was even worse, if possible, than that of the preceding three days. Rain fell fitfully, and a cold breeze blew constantly. Preceding the chief event, the railway employees' reception to the President, Mr. McKinley spent the time quietly at the house of Capt. McWilliams, receiving only a few callers. At 1:30 p. m. the president was driven to the First Regiment armory, where, with Mayor arrison, he was received by a large gathering of railroad employees. After the reception the president addressed the railroad men, eliciting from them the warmest applause. The railroad reception at the armory was President McKinley's last public appearance in Chicago during the jubilee, wet weather having necessitated the postponement of the bicycle parade.

The President and his party started last night on their trip home to Washington. The president will make speeches in Indiana and Ohio and will spend two days on the trip, reaching Washington Saturday afternoon.

On Sunday the president will go to the peace celebration held by the Protestant Episcopal church convention, in Washington, and on Tuesday he will leave for Philadelphia to spend two days at the peace jubilee in the Quaker City. As soon as this is over the president expects to return to Washington and begin work on his annual message, for he has two weeks less time this year to prepare it than last year.

THOUSANDS DROWNED.

Terrible Loss of Life by the Recent Floods in Japan.

Vancouver, B. C., Oct. 21.—Disastrous typhoons, sandstorms and floods have caused a fearful loss of life and property in the Orient. In the district watered by the river Feng, in Japan, hundreds of villages have been swept away and two thousand people have been drowned. Another report says two hundred and fifty towns are under water. Thousands of refugees are flocking to the cities. The Ishkiari river has also overflowed, drowning over one thousand people. Seven prefectures were destroyed.

In a terrible typhoon off Formosa, happening the same time as the floods, great damage to shipping was done. At Temani eight junks were driven to sea and lost. The steamer Renso Maru was piled up on shore.

Among the ships wrecked was the American bark Comet. The ship was abandoned and the crew saved. The Steamer Cowrie is partially wrecked. The French steamer Homow is wrecked on the beach near Amoy. The German steamer Trinidad, formerly of the Cunard line, was abandoned in the open sea.

Homeward bound passengers state they passed through twenty miles of abandoned wrecks, chiefly Chinese junks. The loss of life must have been enormous.

Arrangements in the Yukon District.

Seattle, October 21.—The distribution of United States troops in the Yukon district for the winter will be as follows: Lieut. Edwin Bell, with thirty-five men, at Rampart City; Lieut. McManus, with seventy-five men, at Circle City; a company will be left at Fort Yukon, and Capt. Richardson will make his headquarters, with forty-five men, at Eagle City.

Capt. E. S. Walker will remain at St. Michael with seventy-eight men. He will keep in close touch with the Golvin Bay new mining district, and should any call for relief be sent from Kotzebue Sound he will co-operate with the reindeer superintendent in alleviating the trouble.

There are ample stores at St. Michael for all purposes, and it is believed that the winter will pass without any destitution. About 300 men, employes of the different transportation companies, will winter at St. Michael.

England's Position in China.

Vancouver, B. C., October 21.—Advices from China say that Great Britain is strengthening her position. The China Mail learns that four new gunboats will shortly be sent out to Hong Kong in pieces, to be fitted up in the dock yards.

The names of the gunboats are the Woodlark, the Woodcock, Sandpiper and Snipe. One boat will make her headquarters at Shanghai and one at Canton, while the remaining two will be retained in the fleet reserve at Hong Kong.

Two thousand Amur gold miners who were reported by the last mail as being in active opposition to the new Manchurian railway being built by Russians, have been reinforced by 5,000 disbanded soldiers, and a rising appears imminent.

Sick Soldiers Leave Manila.

Victoria, B. C., Oct. 21.—The steamer Empress of Japan, just arrived from Hong Kong, brings word that the hospital ship Rio de Janeiro left Manila September 16, and is now due at San Francisco with 450 men afflicted with dysentery on board. Two died on the way from Manila to Hong Kong, and were buried at sea, and there is said to be little hope for four or five others.

Fourteen hundred of the troops at Manila are ill with dysentery. More regulars are affected than volunteers.

Texas to Go to Manila.

New York, Oct. 21.—The United States battleship Texas passed out Sandy Hook yesterday for Philadelphia, to take part in the peace jubilee there, after which she will go into dry dock at the League Island navy yard to prepare for her long voyage to Manila, following the Oregon and Iowa. It is expected she will be ready to go to Manila in about six weeks.

The United States transport, Berlin, also sailed, bound for Santiago and Porto Rico with quartermaster's stores.

Weyler Gives Up His Tour.

Madrid, Oct. 21.—Gen. Weyler has abandoned his tour of Andalusia which he proposed to make in company with Senor Romero Robledo and others.

The ministers in council have agreed upon the main features of the budget which will be submitted to the cortes.

Mr. Serrell's Friendly Letter.

Mr. Lemuel William Serrell, Jr., who is the representative of the Plainfield Street Railway Company in dealing with the Common Council for the granting of a franchise for the extension of the trolley road to the eastern limits of the city, has caused the following letter to be sent to a select number of citizens:

My Dear Sir—I would appreciate your kindness very much if you could make it convenient to attend the public street railway hearing before the Plainfield Common Council next Monday night, Oct. 24th, '98, and say a word in favor of having granted to us a franchise to extend the road to Scotch Plains.

Much has been said in the local papers against granting this franchise and it would appear as though the public were greatly interested in opposing it, but with all the public hearings since June the public have shown absolute indifference.

I would like very much to have a few of our influential citizens come out and say a few words in favor of the road. We only want what is fair and right to the city and we have agreed to all reasonable demands made by the Council, but this spirit of fairness on our part has evidently led the Council to believe we will accede to all demands made by them; the result is a deadlock, and unless the Council is willing to be more reasonable with us the proposed extension opening up East Second street to Scotch Plains will not be built. I trust you can make it convenient to attend this Council meeting, and if you think the Railway Company have been fair to the city, speak a word in our favor.

Yours respectfully,
L. W. Serrell.

If this letter does not emphasize the statement that the Plainfield Street Railway Company is desperately in need of the franchise now under consideration in the Common Council, nothing does.

When the trolley capitalists talk about abandoning the route and coming into the city by some roundabout way through North Plainfield, the letter virtually proves it to be a "bluff." If the city is asking all that is reasonable and all that they can secure for the franchise as the pending ordinance provides, and the trolley capitalists are assured that such is the case, common sense would teach one that the capitalists would simply remain silent and let the Council reject the pending ordinance. Then, if the franchise is not worth what most people think it is, it would not take long for them to see the error of their way and change their attitude. Of course, the street railway company would then be in a position to dictate its own terms and the people, having seen that their judgment was illy-guaged, would willingly acquiesce in almost any arrangement proposed.

But does the street railway company care to risk such an experiment? Oh no. They realize that if they should abandon the route there are other capitalists who would not long delay to step in and make an effort to secure it. But if by writing a few letters like the above, the capitalists can stir up enough sentiment to go before the Common Council and impress the members, or, at least, to afford them an excuse for favorable action, and the franchise is granted as a sequence, then the effort is well-made.

The letter is nothing more nor less than a frank confession that the street railway company is in a precarious position in respect to getting valuable rights for little compensation. The appeal made therein is not one that commends itself to those citizens who have the true interests of the city at heart.

One very important thing that it does impress on the mind, however, is that it is the duty of every citizen who is opposed to the franchise being granted on the proposed terms, should attend the hearing Monday night and if not by voice then by presence enter a protest against its being granted till better terms are secured. The street railway company are very zealous in their work of securing advantageous terms for themselves, and the people should not be one whit less zealous in their own interests.

A Word to Mr. Barrows.

In referring to the present agitation for better terms for the franchise proposed to be granted to the Plainfield Street Railway Company, Councilman Barrows yesterday characterized the newspapers, and the vast number of people whom they are honestly representing, as "peanut stand" people. We are reminded by this explosion of Councilman Barrows that at the last meeting of the Common Council he wondered why the people, who wanted better terms from the Plainfield Street Railway Company, did not appear at the Common Council chamber and present their arguments.

Well, Mr. Barrows we will tell you one very prominent reason for the conditions of affairs to which you refer. It is the very conduct similar to that which you were guilty of yesterday at the North Avenue station.

You know, of course, that the average citizen, while he may have clearly defined views and is able to honestly and effectively argue them out in his own mind, is not possessed of the ability to stand before a Common Council and put them into language that will relieve him of embarrassment or faltering in elucidating the ideas into a public speech.

Not only is the average citizen handicapped in this manner, but he is also confronted with still greater difficulty of realizing that he is likely to be submitted to sarcastic catechism and smiles from such men as Mr. Barrows. That is one of the reasons why Mr. Barrows doesn't see more people appear before the Common Council to speak.

Plainfield Can Afford to Wait.

The handful of members who caused the Board of Trade to record itself in favor of the present ordinance granting a franchise to the Plainfield Street Ralway Company, were evidently prompted by the idea that with the street railway tracks extended to Scotch Plains Plainfield would reap a great benefit in increased business from that section.

As a matter of fact, doesn't every business man in town know that at present, outside of the grocery and meat trade, all of Scotch Plains' business comes to Plainfield. The immediate extension of the street railway to that place would not increase the volume of trade perceptibly.

If the present franchise is not granted, it does not mean that Plainfield and Scotch Plains will never be connected by a trolley road. Up to the present time such an accommodation has not existed, and if the community goes without it a little while langer in order to secure what is right and just it will be far better than to grant the franchise on terms that are so trifling, in comparison to the value to be bestowed upon the capialists, as to make true the old adage quoted by a correspondent in another column, "going to market with a new cow and returning with a heavy stone."

The amount of increased business that the immediate construction of the street railway will bring to Plainfield is no offset to the slight benefits the pending ordinance provides for in return for the the inestimable value of the right the public controls. There is no doubt but what Plainfield and Scotch Plains will be linked with a trolley road in the not far distant future, and such a consummation, it must be remembered, does not devolve upon the Plainfield Street Railway Company alone.

In order to secure proper terms of compensation for the use of the city streets for trolley purposes, Plainfield can well afford to wait a little longer.

There seems to be an opinion among some people that the members of the Somerset County Board of Freeholders are a good thing and that they will readily grant the Plainfield Street Railway Company a right of way for their trolley through Mountain avenue in the borough. This avenue has recently been macadamized at a great expense to the county and it is not at all likely that the Freeholders are going to be "so easy" as some would believe.

The communication published in another column today concerning the city allowing discount on taxes paid before the time for regular collection, instead of having the banks discount notes in order to raise money for current expenses in anticipation of the collection of taxes, contains a practical suggestion. The plan is operating satisfactorily in the borough, and it would be a good idea for the Common Council to consider its advantages.

—There will be a regular meeting of the Miantonomoh Tribe of Red Men this evening.

—The new parsonage of the Monroe Avenue M. E. church is nearly completed and will be ready for occupancy in a few weeks.

Wm. Jerome's Herald Square comedians will play at Music Hall next Tuesday night, presenting the great bunch of laughter in three acts entitled "A Jay in New York." A sketch bearing this name was seen here about a year ago, but this is an elaborated farce comedy, interpreted by a host of clever artists, headed by Wm. Jerome, the greatest of all parody writers, and the greatest pair of fun makers before the public, Boyle and Graham. Miss Carrie Graham, of the famous Boyle and Graham, is considered by the theatrical profession the prettiest woman on the American stage. Miss Graham's beauty is of the southern type. She is of average height, with large blue eyes and golden hair, and the leading photographers of New York city have paid her large sums of money to pose for them. Besides being a prize beauty, Miss Graham is as clever as she is handsome, and during the performance of "A Jay in New York" she appears in many different characters with great success. She also wears ten different gown, the latest creations of the famous Worth in Paris

Things that Are Not Exactly News but Just as Interesting.

The friends of a young woman of this city have not yet ceased teasing her over an incident of early Sunday morning. She was aroused by the fire-alarm and prepared with the rest of the household to go to the fire. She insisted on bathing her face before she went to the great amusement of the rest.

An elderly woman, a little yellow dog and a red book all combined to give the passers-by on Park avenue, the other day, a real exciting time. The elderly woman was taking two small children and the little yellow dog out for an airing. Another dog came out and a lively fight ensued The elderly woman screamed and frantically waved the red book on high, while the little tots added their wails to the din made by the whining, snarling dogs. At last a colored man was sighted coming down the street, and the elderly woman appealed to him to rescue her dog. The mongrel was chased away, and the procession moved on.

MANDAMUS THE COUNCIL.

That is What One Taxpayer Proposes Be Done in the Trolley Matter.

To the Editor of The Daily Press—Leading citizens and taxpayers, as I meet them daily, commend and endorse the position of The Press in regard to the trolley franchise.

If the Common Council are wise and business-like they will advertise and dispose of this franchise only to the highest bidder.

Unless our city fathers secure the highest price possible in some such way they may find a taxpayers' mandamus preventing them from "giving away" this most valuable franchise.

The action of the Board of Trade Wednesday evening, if it is the voice of the local traders, is most deplorable and to be regretted in view of the cry of high taxes from these people for so many years.

They remind me of Simple Simon, who went to market with a cow and returned home with only a heavy stone. Taxpayer.

Prices That Sell Shoes.

It takes just as much time for you to buy "shoddy" shoes as to buy good ones, and often costs you as much as you would pay for the better kinds. Then think of the wear! How about the cost then? But we buy so as to sell, and sell so as to sell you again.
See our Men's Shoes for $3.00 and $4.00.
See our Women's Shoes for $2.00 and $3.00.
Most stores will charge you 50c. to $1 more for same goods.

"IT DON'T TAKE"

MUCH MONEY to buy a nice, stylish, good-wearing pair of shoes at our store. We keep that kind and "OUR" prices are cut down to the very last point. You'll hit it just right when you buy of us. Our low-priced shoes look "slick" and right up in style. You will be surprised at how good a woman's Dongola kid shoe we sell at only 98c., $1.25, $1.50, and our $2.00 and $3.00 shoes just go ahead of anything we have ever sold. Our men's working shoes at $1.25 and dress shoes at $1 50, $2 00 and the $3.00 grades are equal to the former $5.00 shoe. "J. & M." fine shoes for men $5.00.

To the Editor of The Daily Press:—Your Scotch Plains correspondent is in error in stating that the Public Library is not patronized by the boys. The item to which I refer appeared in today's Press and was brought to my notice while I was attending the quarterly meeting of the board of trustees. It was thought that the statement if unanswered might affect the interests of the Library injuriously. The attendance of the boys has always been one of the features of the institution, and has greatly exceeded our reasonable hopes. The Library is open on only three evenings and two afternoons of each week, but the attendance for July, August and September, (our "off" months), was 514. The total attendance in 1897 was 2,749, and in 1896 was 2,816. In some years it has exceeded 4,000. The books drawn in 1897 numbered 1,361, and in 1896, 1,096 The reference books (not circulated) are constantly used by the boys and girls of the public school. Considering the population of the village we think these figures speak volumes for the usefulness of the institution.

Very respectfully,
David P. Hall.

WESTFIELD.

(Special Correspondence of The Press.)

Westfield, Oct. 21—The corrected registry lists show 939 voters in the two polling precincts in this place, 546 voters in Cranford and 374 in the Roselle district of Union township. There is a slight increase in all three places.

The annual inspection of the Westfield Fire Department took place last evening and a large crowd turned out to see the parade which took place before the inspection. The line was made up as follows: Hook and Ladder Company, No. 1, headed by F. C. Decker, forman; E. R. Pearsall, first assistant forman, and E. W. Chamberlin, second assistant, had the first place in the parade, marching after Chief James P. English, and assistants W. H. Chamberlain and J. Austin Dennis. The company had twenty-seven men in line. Bucket and Engine Company came next and were headed by Foreman M. Miller, First Assistant Charles Cox and Second Assistant F. P. Demming. Twenty-five men were in line. Empire Engine Company followed with twenty-seven men, headed by Foreman N. B. Loucey, First Assistant F. R. Pennington and Second Assistant John O'Bienis. The firemen were viewed by Committeemen Embre and Warden from a platform in frout of the town rooms. The members of Hook and Ladder Company presented the Chief with a large floral horse shoe. The inspection took place at the corner of Broad and Elm streets. Afterwards the Board of Engineers tested the new fire-alarm system which was finished yesterday and found it in good working order.

C. W. Runyon, of Plainfield, has had a gang of men at work here for the past two days putting in a new fire-alarm system. Yesterday Mr. Runyon had his horse fed at the North Avenue Hotel, and when the hostler was about to put the bridle on the horse he ran away and out into the street. At the corner of Broad street and North avenue the frightened horse began to kick and soon freed himself from the wagon. The dash board of the wagon was broke and several spokes were knocked out, otherwise there was no damage done. The horse was caught on Prospect street.

EARLY INTELLIGENCE.

—Peck's new dress trimmings go off like dynamite.

—Park avenue is one of the muddiest of all the macadamized streets in the city. When the other thoroughfares have dried up Park avenue still remains a menace to passing wheelmen.

—A reception to the grand officer of the Ancient Order of United Workmen will be given this evening by Columbia Lodge, of that order, in the lodge rooms. There will be initiations an entertainment and a banquet.

—At the meeting of John Hald Camp, No. 28, S. of V., held last Tuesday evening, the members practically decided to hold a fair at an early date. Committees will be appointed at the next meeting in all probability.

—There is to be a big time at the meeting of Perseverence Lodge, Knights of Pythias, this evening. A delegation from a New Brunswick lodge will be present while the third rank in the long form will be worked on two candidates.

PARTICULAR MENTION.

Rev. Dr. Robert Lowry, of Madison avenue, took charge of the prayer meeting in the Park Avenue Baptist church Wednesday night in the absence of the pastor.

West Front street near Central avenue, recently fixed by the Plainfield Street Railway Company, is now in a wretched condition and a disgrace to the street. The street commissioner should see that the trouble is remedied.

Charles Schipper and his sister, Miss Schipper, of this city, returned last Tuesday evening from Europe where they have been since last July. They returned on the Steamship Koenigen Louise of the North German Lloyd line.

W. E. MacClymont and family, of Washington avenue, leave Tuesday to take up their residence in New York. Prof. MacClymont will continue his work at his studio in this city, and will be found here every day but Mondays and Wednesdays.

THE SUNDAY LESSON.

INTERNATIONAL SERIES, WITH COMMENTARY BY DR. STEARNS.

Golden Text.—I heard the voice of the Lord, saying, Whom shall I send, and who will go for us? Then said I, Here am I; send me.—Is. vi: 8. Oct. 23, 1898.

1. "In the year that King Uzziah died I saw also the Lord sitting upon a throne, high and lifted up, and his train filled the temple." Although King Uzziah died a leper, yet his life as a whole was "right [illegible] sight of the Lord" (II Chron. xxvi. [illegible]). There is a king who never dies, and he is on the throne of the universe. We are not qualified to serve him as we should until we continually realize his position and our relationship to him. The word "Lord" is Adonai, not Jehovah, and signifies my master or possessor. It was none other than the Son of God whom Isaiah saw (John xii. 41). Ezekiel was qualified for service by a vision of the Lord as a man upon the throne (Ezek. i, 26).

2. "Above it stood the seraphim." These holy beings are mentioned only in this chapter in the Bible, while cherubim are mentioned many times, from Genesis to Revelation. I am persuaded that the cherubim represent the church, the body of Christ, as part of himself, one with him in his glory and power when the kingdom shall have come. The seraphim (burning ones) may possibly be identical with cherubim.

3. "And one cried unto another and said, Holy, holy, holy is the Lord of hosts; the whole earth is full of his glory." Compare the only other thrice holy in scripture in Rev. iv, 8. On the last clause of this verse see the marginal reading and compare chapters vi, 9; Num. xiv, 21; Hab. ii, 14. There is no self praise in heaven, but all unite in glorifying him who alone is worthy to be praised. No flesh shall glory in his presence. The Lord alone shall be exalted in that day (I Cor. i, 29 31; Isa. ii, 11, 17).

4. "And the posts of the door moved at the voice of him that cried and the house was filled with smoke." In Ex. xix, 18; Isa. iv, 5, smoke and cloud are associated with the presence of the Lord. We think also of the pillar of cloud that led Israel and of the tabernacle and temple filled with his glory at their dedication (Ex. xl, 34; I Kings, viii, 10, 11).

5. "Then said I, Woe is me! for I am undone." As the prophet saw the king in his glory he was filled with a sense of his own unworthiness. Compare Job xlii, 5, 6; Dan. x, 8; Rev. i, 17. To serve the Lord as we should we must not only be filled with a sense of his worthiness, but also with a deep sense of our own unworthiness. Not wisdom of words but the power of God is to do the work. Not any might or power of ours, but his spirit. This is his way (I Cor. i. 4, 5; Zech. iv, 6).

6. "A live coal taken off the altar." The Nazarite altar, tabernacle and temple is suggestive of the work of Christ on Calvary, when He shed his own blood, sins, gave Himself a sacrifice for sin once for all. The golden altar speaks of His present work of intercession for us. By the one we are saved and by the other we are kept day by day.

7. "Lo, this hath touched thy lips, and thine iniquity is taken away, and thy sin purged." The mouth suggests the heart, for out of the abundance of the heart the mouth speaketh (Matt. xii. 34; xv, 18). Nothing but the sacrifice of Christ can take away our sins or give us a clean heart. No works of ours can help. It is His work alone that does it, and we must accept it as His gift, as Adam and Eve accepted the coats of skins which the Lord Himself provided by the shedding of blood (Gen. iii, 21; Rom. vi, 23).

8. "Also I heard the voice of the Lord saying, Whom shall I send, and who will go for us? Then said I, Here am I; send me." To bring the time when the earth shall be filled with the glory of the Lord messengers must go forth in His name and proclaim His name and declare His doings, that He may be exalted (Isa. xii, 4). These messengers must be redeemed people, knowing their sins forgiven, recognizing as their Lord the one living and true God, who says "Whom shall I send?" and also the Trinity, who says, "Who will go for us?" When we remember that although in ourselves utterly unworthy, we are yet commissioned by a King, even the King of kings, having all power in heaven and on earth, and that He is in heaven for us, ordering and arranging all the details of the work which He would have us do, or rather do through us, it gives great quickness and confidence in His service.

9, 10. "And He said, Go and tell this people." Then follows a commission which sounds anything but encouraging, for he is told that the people will not perceive what he is setting before them nor understand his message. The commission to Jeremiah and Ezekiel was in somewhat similar terms (Jer. i, 17-19; Ezek. iii, 7-9; xxxiii, 30-32). The words of these verses in Isiah are quoted three times in the New Testament (Math. xiii, 14, 15; John xii, 40; Acts xxviii, 26, 27), and also referred to in Rom. xi, 8. When our Lord sent forth the twelve, He said, "Behold I send you forth as sheep in the midst of wolves (Math. x, 16). He afterward taught them that not all the seed sown would bear fruit, that tares would grow with the wheat, that birds would get in the branches and that the food would become leavened, but He also told them for their encouragement of the treasure and the pearl and that He had given up all to buy the field and the pearl.

CPWORTH LEAGUE.

Lesson For the Week Beginning Oct. 23. Comment by Rev. W. J. Yates, A. M. Topic, The Report of Joshua and Caleb.

SCRIPTURE READING. — Num. xiv, 6-10; Joshua i, 1-5; Joshua xiv, 6-15.—"I wholly followed the Lord my God."

Courage and cowardice are not much different in the things seen, but are far different in the way they feel. Caleb and Joshua saw the same giants and walled cities which the other spies did in the land of Canaan. All saw the luscious fruits and the brooks of water and springs, but only two brought specimens of the grapes and pomegranates. All saw the danger and difficulties of the conquest, only two had heart to undertake it. All desired the land, most had no heart for the exertion necessary to get it, and no faith in the God who promised it.

Caleb and Joshua were strong in heart. They saw weakness of soul where other spies saw giants of stature. No bodily power can make up for lack of soul power. Moral weakness is the most defenseless condition possible. The people of Canaan had become enfeebled by corruption of moral life and were no match in war for a people who had firm hold of a vital truth.

Napoleon Bonaparte is reported to have said that "God is on the side of the strongest battalions." This is far from being a fact, as he learned in the Russian campaign. A greater authority has declared "the race is not to the swift nor the battle to the strong." Numberless hosts under a Xerxes fail to conquer Greece, but a few thousand under Alexander subdue the whole world. Ideas fight in this world, and the higher always wins in the long run. No iniquity prospers forever. Evil is powerful only by reason of the truth mixed in it.

Right and truth are usually in a conspicuous minority at first. They are then unpopular and in danger of being stoned by the majority. They may even be obliged to wander 40 years in the wilderness with rebellious cowards, but when the weaklings and doubters are dead they will lead the host over the Jordan and possess the land because they wholly follow the Lord their God.

Second Vice President of New England.

Rev. George H. Spencer of Newton Center, Mass., has served one term of two years as second vice president of the First General District league. He was re-elected at the Bangor convention in July for another term.

He is a young man of clear thought, incisive speech and energetic action. He was transferred last spring from the New Hampshire conference, having been stationed at Somersworth. He followed Rev. Luther Freeman at Newton Center, the latter being transferred to Chestnut street, Portland, Me. Mr. Spencer is alert on all League matters and in close touch with all the forces of his special department.

More Earnest Heed.

Not long since a New England daily paper contained an account of a certain Epworth League "straw ride and dance." A subsequent issue of the same paper published a statement of one of the members denying that there had been any dancing. How such an item could have found its way into the journal is difficult to see. But its presence there and wide circulation emphasizes the need of great caution on the part of the League that nothing be done to bring reproach on the church, the League or the cause of Christ in any way. It also shows the need of constant watchfulness of the press lest false statements regarding the church be given circulation. Most earnest heed needs to be given to deserve a good name and then to defend the good reputation when it is acquired.

The Spiritual Tone.

There was no false striving after effect at Bangor, no straining of sentiment into sentimentality, but all the services were pervaded by a deep, earnest spiritual tone. There was no sounding of cymbals, but the deep, clear bell tones of genuine devotion. The closing service was peculiarly significant. Mrs. Margaret Bottome and Miss Dr. Julia Plummer both made addresses, forceful, suggestive and particularly helpful on spiritual and practical lines of work. The hour of closing was high noon. All thoughts had been turned toward the privilege of helping others, all hearts warmed with the theme of "separation from the world and to God for service" when in a short prayer of dedication all lives were lifted nearer God and the president gave the parting word.

Read Macbeth if you wish to learn how sure is retribution for sin. If your soul is under temptation to fraud and wrong and all prospects are favorable for successful sin, read Macbeth. "Be sure your sin will find you out."

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR.

Topic For the Week Beginning Oct. 23 Comment by Rev. S. H. Doyle.

Topic—"Go or send."—Acts xvi, 1-10. (A missionary lesson.) "And they * * * came down to Troas, and a vision appeared to Paul in the night. There stood a man of Macedonia and prayed him, saying, 'Come over into Macedonia and help us.' And after he had seen the vision immediately we endeavored to go into Macedonia, assuredly gathering that the Lord had called us to preach the gospel unto them. —Acts xvi, 8-10.

This incident in Paul's life is very instructive from a missionary stand point. He is at Troas, in the western part of Asia Minor, on his second great missionary journey. In a vision an inhabitant of historic Macedonia of Europe calls to him for help. He sees in the vision also a call from God. Immediately he obeyed it. He went to Macedonia, and his preaching produced blessed results. The Christian's duty toward missions is here pointedly illustrated. It says, "Go or send."

Why should we go or send? Three reasons moved Paul to action, and these three reasons appeal to us today: 1. The call from Macedonia for help. Paul must have been greatly touched by this pathetic appeal for the gospel. He was intensely anxious to take the gospel to all who wanted it. Macedonia—heathendom—is calling to us today. Not one man, but millions of human beings in Africa, India, China and the islands of the sea are calling for help. They need Christ and they want Christ. Can we refuse their cry? 2. The call from God. Paul saw in the vision a call from God. Every cry for help in this world is a call from God. God has opened the doors of the heathen world and commands us to go in and win the lands for Christ. God calls us to missionary work. Can we refuse to obey God? 3. Paul could go. He went immediately because it was possible for him to do so. We can go or send. This should decide for us. Perhaps we can go. If our church boards cannot send us, perhaps we can go and pay our own expenses. No young man or woman who has the means and the way clear to do so could use both self or means to a better purpose. But if we cannot go we can send.

A wealthy young man in one of our colleges, studying to be a missionary, supported a man actually on the field as his substitute until he himself was prepared to go. If as individuals we may not be able to have a missionary representing us on the field, perhaps as societies we could do so. A number of societies have their representatives on the foreign field, and many, many others could support at least a native worker or educate a boy or girl for future missionary work. The cost is not great. The secretary of your denominational missionary board could give all the information desired upon this subject. If, however, we cannot do this, all of us can give something, and we should liberally and systematically, for sending those who can go if we cannot.

Bible Verses.—Isa. lii, 7; Nah. i, 15; Math. xxiii, 37; xxviii, 19, 20; Luke xiv, 16-24; Acts i, 11; xiii, 1-3; Rom. i, 14-17; x, 14, 15; I Cor. ix, 16-22; Rev. xxii, 17.

Task Enough.

Our own faults and failures would supply, one would think, sufficient pangs of penitence to occupy that part of conscience which is devoted to lament over shortcomings. Few of us have reached that happy state of perfection in which we can give over repentance. We have to watch our own conduct, guard against temptation, and when overcome confess our sins to our heavenly Father with heartfelt sorrow. Conscience holds a rod to check us when erring and to drive us in the right way should the kindly impulse of duty fail to allure us, and when we reject the rod conscience becomes a scourge to punish us with remorse for our disobedience. This is task enough for conscience.—Independent.

Men of Every Condition.

It is the special mission of the church to preach the gospel to the poor, and its grandest and purest triumphs have been seen in the winning and uplifting of the despised and downtrodden classes. Yet "the glad tidings of great joy" "shall be to all people" and to men of every condition. Efforts to reach the rich and the noble may not be remitted, and the prayer of faith should accompany these efforts. God will fulfill His word of promise, and kings and queens surely become more than ever in the past potential agents in the upbuilding of the kingdom of Christ.—Christian Intelligencer.

Worthy of the Fool.

Many politicians are in the habit of laying it down as a self evident proposition that no people ought to be free till they are fit to use their freedom. The maxim is worthy of the fool in the old story who resolved not to go into the water till he had learned to swim. —Macaulay.

Points For Parents.

Christ is on trial in your home as much as he was before Pilate.

Don't poison your home life with worry and fret whenever things go wrong.

Many a fibbing mother has been puzzled to make out how her children learned to lie.

What folly for a father to warn his boys against tobacco, if he does it with a breath that smells of smoke.

How foolish for a mother to talk to her children about religion, unless she can show them what it is.

If the parental example is a sowing of bad seed, how absurd to look for a good fruitage in the lives of the children.

If you claim in church that the Lord is your rest and peace, let the children see that you told the truth about it when you get home.

Think of a father talking religion to his son on Sunday and going to the store to do business with a short yardstick on Monday!—Selected.

Elbing. Die Haffuferbahn (von Elbing nach der Hafflüste über Tolkemit, Frauenburg nach Braunsberg) soll nach dem Plan direkt durch die Stadt Elbing geführt werden. Verschiedene Hausbesitzer fordern aber ganz unerhörte Preise für ihre Grundstücke. Aus diesem Grunde dürfte der Betrieb wohl schwerlich vor dem 1. Oktober nächsten Jahres eröffnet werden können.

Thorn. Die Ansiedelungskommission kaufte das 650 Hektar große Rittergut Sumowo bei Strasburg für 615,000 Mark. Dadurch wird in einer Gegend, die in den letzten Jahrzehnten mit besonderem Eifer polonisirt worden war, abermals ein neues Dorf geschaffen.

A Faithful Traitor

CHAPTER XVI.

Sir Antony walked swiftly through the old hall. Many people were scattered about—matronly chaperons, flirting couples, and servants—but his departure was fortunately unnoticed. He glanced eagerly to the clump of trees, the shadows of which a little while before had hidden from his sight the slender beloved figure in the black gown. At first he could discern nothing clearly; but, as he left the house and walked across the lawn, he soon saw Elizabeth quite distinctly. She was sitting in a low cushioned chair, not leaning back, but stiffly upright; her small white hands were lying clasped upon her knees. A few yards beyond her lay a wide patch of moonlight; it seemed to Antony as though the cold clear light of the moon had stolen all the life and warmth from the sweet young face. Richard Saville was reclining luxuriously in a chair close beside the wide wicker-table on which Bertha Peile's silver tea-equipage was wont to be placed each summer afternoon. His arm was leaning on this table, supporting his head; he was speaking quietly, his voice as usual melodious, soft-toned, eloquent.

The words he was speaking did not reach Tony's ears. Yet he seemed to guess their purport. Troubled still with a horrible pain and dread, with a perception that he had been forestalled in his confession, in the fulfillment of the duty that was to have been almost like death to him, he went direct to Saville's chair, and let his hand fall with an iron grip upon the older man's shoulder.

"This is a great surprise, Dick!" he said, in a hoarse voice. "You are back sooner than you expected, are you not?"

Richard Saville was silent for a moment. He had neither started with confusion nor given any other sign of surprise as Tony's hand fell upon his shoulder.

"My return has certainly been unexpected," he said, in his usual pleasant voice. "I seem to have startled everybody." As he withdrew his shoulder from the young man's grip and turning round in his chair, his eyes fell upon Tony's haggard, miserable face immediately behind him. "I may as well inform you, Antony, as I have just informed Miss Druro, that I came here to-night simply with the hope of meeting my ward and having a short conversation with her." There was a certain deliberation in his voice now. "I felt assured that I should find Miss Druro among Miss Peile's birthday guests; and, as it was necessary for me to speak with her without delay, I determined to seize the present opportunity." He paused for a moment, then resumed his former position, crossing his arms over his breast. "I am afraid I have spoiled Miss Druro's pleasant evening; but I had no alternative—I could act in no other way than I have done. In my character as her guardian it has been necessary for me to take upon myself a duty which is at the same time painful and imperative." He ceased speaking and drew a long breath. When he spoke again, his voice was hard, deliberate, very stern. "I have found it vital to Miss Druro's interest that I should inform her of your true position, Antony. I have revealed to her therefore the fact of your most unfortunate marriage. I have told her of the existence of your wife—Lady Peile—in America, and of your determination to keep that wife there, no matter at what cost, or at what risk. I need scarcely add that even my sense of grave responsibility as Miss Druro's guardian would not have helped me to discharge this most disagreeable duty had not your negligence and my anxious regard for her future forced it upon me."

His breath came more quickly as he ceased speaking. It was the only sign of agitation that escaped him, the only indication of the exultant excitement that was running like an electric current through every fibre of his being.

Antony had turned away suddenly from Richard Saville, and had let his hands fall heavily to his side. He was not looking at his enemy—his eyes were fixed upon Elizabeth. It was to her pure heart he looked for judgment; before her innocent soul he laid down the remnants of his ruined pride, his hopeless love, his despairing manhood. He knew right well what the verdict of the world would be—it was her verdict alone that he feared. He saw that the blow had fallen with crushing force. He winced unconsciously as he conjured up the pitiless calmness, the bitterness with which his story had been imparted to her. Elizabeth sat like one in a dream; her eyes looked into his, but their gaze was a vacant one. It was as if her life had met with a sudden blight. Antony's head drooped beneath the gaze of the girl's bewildered miserable eyes. He had known, from the first moment that love for her had stolen into his heart, that some awful sorrow lay ahead for him, but he had not guessed or imagined that any sorrow could be so great as this.

Saville sat very still through the long pause that followed his last speech.

As there came no sound from either of his two listeners, he continued speaking, smoothly, courteously, almost kindly.

"Miss Druro, and you too, Antony, I fear, may regard my plain speaking as something of the nature of an interference. You are both so young that things that look somewhat serious in my eyes may not unnaturally appear unimportant in yours. I am sincerely sorry that I have had to assume what may perhaps seem to Miss Druro an unnecessarily stern attitude to-night; but"—he made a sort of deprecatory movement with his hand—"but she will forgive me, I hope, in time, and realize before long that my bequeathed care of her and her future can never be regarded by me as anything but a grave anxious responsibility."

He paused; but, if he had expected any word to come from the pale compressed lips, he was disappointed. There was no sound to break the stillness of the night save the distant rythm and swing of the waltz-music from the ball-room and Antony's heavy breathing.

"It is possible also," Saville continued softly, "that Miss Druro may question my delicacy in bringing to her knowledge the sorry story of folly and disgrace that your marriage unfortunately signifies Antony—that she may even ask me why I have imagined that the knowledge of your wife's existence could affect her. To that I have to reply that a young girl such as she can never be too carefully guarded; and that friendship or any intimate association with a man already married can be fraught only with the most regrettable consequences, if not with positive danger, to her future happiness. I should indeed have been guilty of nothing less than disloyalty to my dead old friend, and unfaithful to the duty she laid upon me, had I not stepped forward now and stood between her grandchild and a possible danger of——" He paused before he launched his final word, then he added, "Dishonor," in a soft yet an absolutely distinct tone.

Richard Saville was rewarded by seeing the whole expression of Elizabeth's face suddenly change. He had risen as he uttered the last terrible word; but, as he got upon his feet, he suddenly reeled, staggered, and fell back prostrate into his chair again.

It was Antony's hand that had struck him, Antony's clenched fist that met the deliberate insult, the basely-uttered thought that came from the half-smiling lips. The young man stood bending over Saville's crouched form in the chair, his handsome face distorted out of its usual likeness by uncontrollable anger.

Elizabeth sat looking at him, her icy hands clenched and pressed in an agony of fear against her bosom. Was it a real scene that was being enacted before her eyes, or was it——

The girl's confused overpowering thoughts suddenly cleared away. She saw the man in the chair spring to his feet, a horrible smirch of dark blood making his pale distorted face seem almost fiendish in its rage. She heard the oath that came hoarsely from Richard Saville's bruised mouth, she saw Antony's whole frame quiver with passion, and at the sight her woman's courage came back to her. Standing erect, she spoke both their names, not lightly or faintly, but sternly, authoritatively, and as her voice rang out, both men suddenly paused, as though a whip had lashed them. The girl, for all her weakness and youth and worldly inexperience, was, in that dark moment, the master of them both. Had Elizabeth given way to the sickly feeling of fear and horror that threatened to overcome her, the hands of the two men would have rushed with murderous intent at each other's throats; but she trampled her weakness under her feet; she was filled with a courage greater than belonged by right to her nature; she was supported by the remembrance of the love sne bore this man, who, without explicit words, she knew, she was assured, had been the wronged, never the wronger.

When she spoke again she addressed herself to Antony. The sharp ring of her voice when she had suddenly uttered their names was gone when she spoke again. She did so hurriedly, her breath so short at times as to make some of her words almost inaudible; but her purpose never faltered.

"You will go back to the house," she said to Antony; "you will remember that there are others to be thought of—Feo—your aunt." She had to pause for a moment. "You know your duty," she went on again swiftly. "You would have done your duty to-night had you been given time; you are not one who will ever fail to do what is right! You must go back to Feo—she wants you. She will not understand——"

She brushed her hand across her burning eyes, then, as she saw the young man turn instantly to do her

"I want you to know that I trust you always—that I shall always believe in you," she said, half brokenly, half passionately. "I understand now what it was you wanted to tell me to-night. If there should be others who may find it easy to think hard things of you, I shall never be one of them. I am ignorant of what you may have done or left undone in your life; I do not care to know. I only know this—that I consider you to be incapable of acting dishonorably or of doing anything really wicked or wrong!" She almost broke down as Antony caught her hands suddenly and held them for a moment to his breast. "You will go now, please—please, go!" she whispered, her tears shutting out the sight of his face, that was so worn and changed, and yet—oh, so unutterably dear!

For a moment he dropped upon the grass at her feet; then there was a tightening of the cold grip of her hands, and, with a groan that sounded as if wrung from a heart that had been mortally hurt, she saw him turn away and pass quickly over the lawn to the house

When he had disappeared, Elizabeth sat down again, and, covering her face with her hands, broke into a fit of weeping such as she had never given way to in all her life before. It was long before she could utter a word or raise her head; but speech came to her after a while.

"Oh, how could you be so cruel? she said in an agony of yearning pain. "What wrong has he ever done that you should treat him in such a way? If it had been any one but you it would not have been so bad; but he has loved you so much! He has loved you so wonderfully—so absolutely! absolutely! He has almost made you dear to others because he has loved you so well!"

Richard Saville paused in his walk; he had been pacing to and fro slowly in front of the girl during the last few moments of her abandonment to her grief. He seemed to have recovered his calm demeanor as he found himself alone with her: there was only the bruised disfigurement of his lip to tell of the past terrible moment, which might but for her have ended in a tragedy. He looked down at her tear-stained face as the wild words of reproach broke from her. There was little beauty in her face at that moment, yet he would have almost given life itself, with all its treasures, all its prospects of wealth and fame, aye, even the savage triumph of his recently accomplished revenge, to know that it was for him such tears had been shed. Elizabeth had never been more necessary to him than now—now, when he knew that by his cruel work of that night he had utterly destroyed the poor meagre hope he had cherished against his own common sense during the past weeks.

Somehow, at the last it had been as much a desire to strike at her as at Antony that had caused him to bring about the long-planned crisis. He had fixed his return to Speede for this particular night, because he had guessed that, believing him to be far away, Elizabeth would be present at Bertha Peile's birthday dinner; and, for the mere sake of forcing the girl to give him half an hour's interview, he had travelled back many hundreds of miles. To obtain an interview in an ordinary way having been rendered impossible, since she had quietly refused to meet him or receive him anywhere, this opportunity of coming upon her unawares had seemed too tempting to be lost. In one short hour, he had told himself, his keen eyes would grasp the whole situation, and give him the cue for future action. What Antony felt for her he knew; but it was not until he returned to the old country house that had once so nearly been his own that he realized that the love he could have knelt at her feet to pray her to give him was given entirely to the man he had hated, whose life he had so successfully ruined. It was the first overwhelming confirmation of his doubt and fear that had made Richard Saville cast aside his long-sustained role of affectionate friend, of a calm, honorable and upright man.

Now, as he stood looking down at her, he saw her wince and draw away involuntarily from him. The girl had spoken wildly, piteously, heart-brokenly; yet beneath all the outward display of anguish he read too clearly utter condemnation of himself, the loathing of her pure honest soul for his years of treachery, the desire to put herself out of reach of one so base and cruel. For a moment a new rage, almost a new hate, burst into flame within him; he could have anathematized her in that one wild moment for her open exhibition of repugnance. Elizabeth little knew how much of the satisfaction of his revengeful triumph she had taken from him. The rage went from him as quickly as it came, however, and the usual sneer settled about his mouth. He spoke after a long pause.

"You love that man?" he questioned curtly.

Elizabeth made no reply; her head was bowed. Saville laughed coldly.

"You believe him still to be an honest man, worthy of an honest woman's love—of your love?"

Elizabeth raised her head.

"I do not merely believe—I know him to be honest!" she said slowly.

Saville gave another cold laugh.

"Your faith is enviable. What—you can still credit him with honesty and good purpose, when you have seen for yourself that he has been living a lie all these months?"

There was a mocking sound in his voice. Elizabeth pressed one hand to her aching head.

"If he has so lived," she said, speaking now with a great effort, "it has not been of his own free will. He has done nothing—nothing," she repeated emphatically, "of which you have been ignorant or which you have not approved, counselled and desired!"

Saville stood silent for a few moments, with his handkerchief covering his mouth.

"You credit me, therefore, with all the dishonor," he said at length. But why need I ask? Your whole attitude to me since I have known you has been significant of distrust, dislike, and, I might almost add, contempt, Elizabeth."

The girl's lips were very pale. She was worn out; she longed for him to leave her.

"It seems that I have done you no injustice, Mr. Saville," she answered, after a pause, in the faint sad voice that yet was so cold, so stern.

A deep red wave of color dyed his face for a moment. Standing in the bright moonlight, he looked for the first time an aged, a worn man. There was something almost pathetic about him at the moment.

"Thus it is we play the game of life!" he said slowly and bitterly. "You hate me—I worship you! I love you, Elizabeth, as I, with all my knowledge of human nature, never dreamed it possible a man could love another creature. All the hours of your miserable life with that dead old woman were to me as so many golden footsteps on a road leading to a future happy life, for I had the hope of winning you then.. It was not avarice, as you imagined, that made me work and scheme to mould your grandmother to my will—it was the love I had for you—the desire to bring you a little nearer to my own life—to have the power to control yours, and so, little by little, to lead you to see and realize my love—perhaps even to return it; and now—"

He broke off with a shrug of the shoulders, and continued his slow promenade in and out of the moonlight and the shadows; while Elizabeth shrank back in her chair, her eyes hidden by one cold, trembling hand, her body weak and nerveless, as though she had been struck down by some sudden terrible illness. She heard his words in a distant sort of way, scarcely comprehending their meaning, conscious only of a strange alteration in his voice, which a short while before had been so cruel, had spoken such words of hate for Antony, and with such a degree of eagerness, of merciless spite. She had no longer the strength needed to combat what there was to come. Her whole strength had gone out in that one moment of terrible fear to stand between her dear love and a wrong that would have been unforgivable; now she was prostrate. It was with difficulty she could endure the violent throbbing of her head. In a wild inconsequent way thought after thought chased each other in her brain; it seemed to her as if rest and silence and the blessedness of peace would never come to her again.

The agitation in her mind, the possible danger of such tremendous brain excitement, and such a strain on her nervous system suddenly struck him. He stopped in his walk and approached her.

"It will be best for you to get home as soon as possible, Elizabeth," he said abruptly. "I will go back to the house and arrange matters so that Mrs. Procter may leave immediately. If you will wait here you can join her without going indoors."

He paused for a moment to look down at her, with an expression on his face which made him seem another man. Perhaps he had hoped that she would speak to him, would whisper a word of thanks for his thoughtfulness; but she never moved; there seemed indeed to be scarcely anything left of life's vigor in her still figure. Richard Saville slowly turned away from her and strolled in a leisurely manner across the grass. As he drew near the house Feo's radiant form came out hurriedly through the doorway—she was evidently bent upon finding Elizabeth. She had flung a lace shawl about her throat and shoulders, but her head was uncovered, and, in her shimmery satin draperies, with her tiara of diamond stars set crown-like upon her soft, pretty hair, she looked like some elf or fairy in the moonlight, a vivid contrast, indeed, to the quiet, stricken girl sitting alone under the trees.

Lady Feo uttered an exclamation as she saw Mr. Saville; she would have passed him, but he stopped her.

"You are looking for Miss Druro," he said. "She is there. I was coming to find you. She is ill, and must be got home quickly. No—do not go to her now; she is better alone, Lady Feodora. You can serve her best by arranging for her departure as speedily as possible."

Feodora Latimar paused—her inclination was to disregard his words and run on to where Elizabeth was; but something in his voice, some strange alteration in him, checked her. Her heart began to beat hurriedly.

"What have you been saying to her?" she asked angrily, casting prudence to the winds. "Why did you ask to her at all? She was getting [illegible] happy; and now you [illegible] spoiled everything! You have known all along how much she has wished to avoid seeing you. I think you might have quietly accepted the position and—"

"I never accept any position quietly, Lady Feodora," Saville answered curtly; then, more curtly still—"Spare your reproaches," he said; "they come at a wrong moment. I am, moreover, quite indifferent as to any opinion you may or may not hold respecting me. In future, I take it, we shall not be called upon to trouble each other very much. I have told you that Miss Druro is ill, and that it is necessary she should be conveyed home as quietly and as quickly as possible. You are a woman of resource—I leave the matter in your hands. For me—I have done all I had to do!"

There was a peculiar note in Richard Saville's closing words which Feo heard but did not understand. He walked slowly away from her, following the carriage road that led down the avenue till it reached the bend. He had passed this curve and was out of sight before Feo had time to collect her thoughts.

Something had happened—that alone was clear, was painfully definite—something the nature of which she could not even imagine—something more than a mere disagreeable rencontre, between Elizabeth and himself. Feo glanced back to where the shadows of the trees shrouded Elizabeth from her sight. She hesitated no longer. With a heart that was suddenly filled with uneasiness, foreboding and concern, she turned and went back to the house to carry out without delay the suggestion that Richard Saville had made in so strange and incomprehensible a manner.

NEW PRACTICE SHIP CHESAPEAKE.

Will Be the Only Single Topsail Ship Afloat Built for Cadets.

A valuable addition to the new navy will be the large steel practice ship now in the process of construction in the yard of the Bath Iron Works, at Bath, Me. This new vessel, for the building of which Congress originally appropriated $125,000 and for whose completion, including armament, $300,000 will be available, will be known as the Chesapeake. She is intended for the exclusive use of the cadets at the Naval Academy at Annapolis, and will be one of the largest and by all odds the finest practice ship in the world. She will be remarkable for her great sail carrying power, the area of her principal sails being 13,131 square feet and her sail area 19,975 square feet. She will also have the distinction of being the only single topsail ship afloat.

The day of sailing warships is past, but Uncle Sam still holds to the theory that the education of a navigator or commanding officer in the navy is not complete unless he thoroughly understands the handling of a sailing ship. And he must be not merely theoretically competent, but practically so. This applies to the ordinary seaman as well as to the officer, and schoolships for apprentices, propelled by sail power, are an important part of the United States navy. Some one has said that it only requires months to make a good soldier, but years to make a good sailor, and every American and English Admiral will tell you that the best officers and seamen in the navy are men whose nautical training began on board a sailing ship. Uncle Sam believes this thoroughly, and has seen it proved many times by experience. He now emphasizes this belief by building the Chesapeake. On board of this vessel and others like her, the Deweys, Sampsons and Schleys of the future will receive the foundation and the most important practical part of their professional education.

TOADS AS HOUSE PETS.

They Were Efficacious in Banishing Roaches and Water Bugs.

The latest and most ingenious way of getting rid of roaches and water bugs we have heard of is related of a citizen of Schenectady, whose kitchen was infested with them.

A servant, hearing that toads were an antidote, caught three ordinary hop toads and put them in the kitchen. Not a roach or water bug, it is stated, can now be found in the house. The toads have become domesticated, never wander about the house, and are so cleanly and inoffensive that there is no objection to their presence.

Another use for toads is to employ them for insect destroyers in the garden. They are determined enemies of all kinds of snails and slugs, which it is well known can in a single night destroy a vast quantity of lettuce, carrots, asparagus, etc. Toads are also kept in vineyards, where they devour during the night millions of insects that escape the pursuit of nocturnal birds, and might commit incalculable havoc on the buds and young shoots of the vine. In Paris toads are an article of merchandise. They are kept in tubs and sold at the rate of two francs a dozen.—Hampshire Gazette.

Proctor's Solemn Wit.

One day, in the Senate, Senator Vest, of Missouri, in the midst of an impassioned speech recited one of Milton's poems in a very tragic manner.

"The author of that great poem," said Vest, in an impressive undertone, "was John Milton—and it has been set to music by the great Beethoven."

There was a religious silence all over the Senate, when Senator Proctor, whose face had assumed the forlorn and forbidding expression of a professional mourner, arose and remarked in a deep bass voice that was heard all over the Senate chamber:

"Vest, sing it!"

SPORTING.

ON THE GRIDIRON.

Tee members of the Plrinfield first team will begin their practice for the Election Day game next week.

A number of local football enthusiasts are already securing their seats for the Yale-Princeton game which is to be played at Princeton this year.

Martine Common will be put in order shortly for the Election Day game between the Plainfield football eleven and the San Remos of New York Athletic Club.

Captain Harold Phillips, of the Alis team has received a challenge from the Lincoln High School team of Westfield, to play for Junior championship of Union county. The game will probably be arranged for Election Day but at a time so as not to interfere with the big game that day.

Raymond A. McGee, who has been a candidate for the Yale 'varsity team, has not been playing with the team for several days. He has been retired to give some of the other candidates a chance. Charles Dupee, another Plainfield boy, is doing great work behind the line.

J. Vincent Rittenhouse, of East Sixth street, is playing half back on his class team at Lehigh University. While in Plainfield, he was a member of the famous Alis team. His class mate, Everett J. Peck, of Myrtle avenue, is unable to play on account of an injury to his shoulder. He, too, is an old Alis player.

VARIOUS SPORTS.

To the Editor of The Daily Press.—It has been intimated that some of the members of the Hillside Tennis and Golf Club would enjoy clay pigeon shooting on election day. The club will undertake to arrange such an event for the morning of the day in question if they can be assured that, say, fifteen members will take part. I shall be glad to receive entries not later than October 31st.

DISCOUNTING THE TAXES.

A VERY GOOD IDEA FOR THE CITY TO ADOPT.

Suggestion That Instead of Notes Being Discounted the Taxpayers be Allowed Six Per Cent. for Early Payment.

To the Editor of The Daily Press:—I would like to enquire why it is that the taxpayers of Plainfield cannot get the same favor of six per cent. discount by paying their taxes in advance as they are doing in the borough and many other places. I see almost every year that large notes are ordered discounted at the banks to raise money in lew of the payment of taxes.

Now why not give the taxpayers of this city a chance to discount their tax bill a little. I will stake my financial judgment that the city will not be under the necessity of borrowing money to meet the current expenses. Of course, the banks are glad to discount the city's notes, so would a good many taxpayers. Our taxes are raised on us almost every year without even consulting us. Now I don't think this has any tendency to make make Plainfield a desirable place to own property in. Oh, some one says this kind of talk injures the city, and another says we have so many conveniences. So we have, water, gas, etc. Yes, but we have to pay roundly for them besides. I pay taxes in two counties. In this county our tax rate is 2 42; in the other 1.38. Now this article is not a chronic idea to find fault, but to suggest. Can't the city do this much for us? 2d Ward.

Spanish Soldiers Eager to Leave Army.

Havana, Oct. 21.—Captain Hosmer and Major Page, of the Quartermaster's Department of the United States army, went yesterday to the posts assigned to them. These are, respectively, Matanzas and Nuevitas.

The American Military Commission has been informed that a great number of discharges have been asked for by Spanish soldiers and officers, since the publication of Captain General Blanco's decree, announcing that such applications would be granted. The total number of Spanish soldiers who have made application for absolute discharge from the army, before the final evacuation takes place, is now estimated to have reached fifteen thousand.

Japanese Life Insurance.

Vancouver, B. C., Oct. 21.—The Hiogo Japan News says that, with the exception of the Meiji and Teikuku and Kyosai Life Insurance Company, every life insurance company in Japan is in difficulties, owing to their basing their actuary tables too closely on British and American lines. None of them can pay the claims against them. Every two or three months, owing to enormous disasters, involving great loss of life, some insurance company suspends paying. As there is no system of depositing guarantees with the government, holders or heirs lose their benefit, and extensive frauds are suggested.

Damages for a Lynching.

Urbana, Ohio., Oct. 21.—The Circuit Court has decided the suit brought by the relatives of Click Mitchell, who was lynched two years ago, against the county. Damages to the amount of $5,000 are awarded. The case will be appealed.

HOW MONKEYS ARE CAUGHT.

One of the Peculiar Methods Adopted by Natives.

In capturing monkeys, it is said that their curiosity is the thing that makes them an easy prey. Nearly all of the monkeys that we see in this country come from Gornona, a little village situated a short distance from the Panama railroad.

The inhabitants of this district are mostly native negroes, for few white men could bear the climate. The whole region is marshy, and covered with tropical vegetation. At night there arises a thick vapor laden with fever, which hangs over the woods like a cloud.

This region of woods is the paradise of the monkeys. They travel in troops, led by an older monkey. When the people receive information that the "travelling monkey troops" are near the village they go to the woods in crowds to chase them.

Their plan is very simple. They cut a hole in a cocoanut large enough for a monkey's paw to enter. The nut is then hollowed out, and a piece of sugar is placed in it. A piece of string is then fastened to it, and it is placed in the road of the approaching monkeys.

It is well known that monkeys are very inquisitive. When they see the cocoanut in the grass they hurry to examine it. It does not take them long to find out that the inner part contains a piece of sugar. One of the boldest and greediest sticks a paw into the nut to get the sugar, and grasps it as firmly as he can. But his fist is so large that he cannot draw it out of the hole again, with the sugar, to which he holds fast, cost what it may.

Te natives now pull the string until nut and monkey arrive in the vicinity of their ambuscade. In the meantime the other monkeys wonder what is the matter with their comrade. They hurry to see where he is being pulled to, with his paw in the cocoanut. They crowd around him chattering and gesticulating, and the natives, who have a large net ready, cast it over them, and before they know it all are prisoners. They are sold to the employes of the Panama railroad, and reach the North American markets through commercial dealers.—Philadelphia Times.

A GENTLE PROMPTER.

One of the Many Good Stories That Ministers Have To Relate.

Ministers generally have a stock of good wedding stories, but a rather odd little incident took place at an Episcopal rectory in this city not long ago, says the Cleveland Plain Dealer.

It was a very stormy night and the bride and groom arrived alone about 9 o'clock, having had to walk a long way against the storm, and the poor little bride was almost worn out with fatigue and nervousness.

After a few words explaining the service to the couple, the minister put on his surplice and began the ceremony. All went beautifully until the question, "Eliza, will you have this man to be your wedded husband, etc.," came upon the scene. The minister read it through with his most kindly and fatherly air, but when he finished the bride was dumb—not a word could he get out of her. The long question was repeated, the minister's voice taking on a most insinuating rise toward its end, but still there was silence.

Before the groom had seemed flustered, but his feelings then were nothing to what they appeared to be at the second halt.

With an admonishing kick that reached to the rector and made him rub his unlucky shins, the irate bridegroom announced in a loud stage whisper, "Darn you, Liza, why don't you speak up and tell him yes?"

And wonders will never cease, for even after such an exhibition of her future lord and master's temper, 'Liza spoke, and all she said was "yes."

Seed Corn 3,000 Years Old.

Three or four years since an Indian mound in Arkansas was being excavated, when an earthen jar was found hermetically sealed that contained a small quantity of grains of Indian corn. Some of the grains were the next year planted in Missouri, and several bushels raised. On the top of the mound from which the jar was dug out, a large tree four feet in diameter was growing, and it is thought the corn lay buried about 3,000 years. 'Squire James L. Neal, one of our most prosperous and progressive farmers, sent and procured a small quantity of the corn, paying over two cents a grain. This he planted last year, but the yield was small, on account of the drought. He saved enough, however, to get in a good patch this year. He has used it for roasting ears, and says it is the best he ever had. The ears are not large, but grow two to three on a single stalk. The one thing peculiar about this corn is its color, or rather colors. On the same cob are grains of different colors, and in the row you can find an ear that is white, another blood red, one salmon colored and another perfectly black.—Harrodsburg (Ky.) Sayings.

"What, want to leave to-day, Jane, and you only came yesterday?"

"Well, yes'm. You see, you're the thirteenth missus I've 'ad this year, and you're unlucky."

"Why, then, did you come?"

"'Cause I 'ad to 'ave a thirteenth, and I thought I'd get it over. I leaves ternight, mum."

Flick—Did your elopement come off successfully?

Flirt—Yes. Her father caught us in time to stop it.—Truth.

MARTIN ACT OPINION.

ownership of the delinquent taxpayer the legislative power is ample to reimpose the burden, but after they have passed to a bona fide purchaser they are beyond the reach of the municipality for a debt of the former owner, in every case where there was a failure to take proceedings to establish or enforce the lien before it expired.

The impositon of a general tax creates no lien either equitable or legal upon the lands of a taxpayer. In the absence of a statute, or where the statutory lien is extinct, the owner must be free to convey his lands, unincumbered to a bona fide purchaser. It is not like an assessment made upon lands for benefits conferred upon them by the public. There is an equitable lien, and where that lien has not been legally pursued our courts have properly held that any informalities may be corrected by legislation and the public may get back what it has expended in adding to the value of the property. That case manifestly differs from this.

I will therefore send the report back or take such action as will enable the parties to review my decision.

VALUE OF TROLLEY FRANCHISE IN PLAINFIELD.

REMARKS MADE BY F. E. KINSMAN BEFORE THE COMMON COUNCIL.

Calls Attention to the Great Value of the Pivotal Point in Company's Route—It Would Be a Public Wrong to Grant the Franchise in Perpetuity—Future Development of Electrical Appliances Also Should Be Taken Into Consideration.

The following are the remarks verbatim made by F. E. Kinsman before the Common Council Friday evening of last week. Mr. Kinsman spoke extemporaneously, and while he was not prepared further than what he could call to mind as he went along, the ideas that he advanced were recognized as the truth:

Mr. President—I have but lately learned of the exact status of the proposed ordinance, and I take this opportunity to express myself on a number of points relating to the street railway in Plainfield.

As long ago as '93 or '94 I wrote several articles relating to the giving of franchises in cities like Plainfield, and found at that time that the public ideas were not up to the point where my experience had placed mine; that ordinances that were passed at that time were passed in good faith by those who did what they thought best for the city's interests. But the time for ordinances such as were passed at that time is passed; the public has become educated to the value of such franchises and begun to hedge them about by ordinances which will give them control years hence of the methods of operation and class of apparatus which they use, and other details which are vital to the interests of any city.

In that connection I appear before you tonight, not to oppose the extension of the Plainfield Street Railway in any particular except in so far as the ordinance—the proposed ordinance—goes, which I consider too cheap for what they are going to give the city.

I understand the amount of money that they intend to expend on street improvements along the proposed line is considerable; I do not know how much, but I do know this, that my experience shows me that there is no street improvement which they are likely to make which is commensurate with the value of the ordinance which they are after. I do not blame them. If I were out of Plainfield I might be tempted to try to secure valuable franchises such as is under consideration tonight.

In the city of Chicago there is a short line of road—I think it is less than two thirds of a mile—which the Illinois Central Railroad Company receives an annual rental of $250,000 for, besides using it for their own purposes. What that line is to the Illinois Central so this link which the Plainfield Street Railway Company are trying for now is to the city of Plainfield.

There is no reason why the city should grant a franchise giving such valuable assets to any company as the Plainfield Street Railway Company are asking for tonight.

I have said today to a friend of mine, in conversation on the subject, that if the franchise was for ten years I would not say another word about it, but being in perpetuity; and as some of the parties have expressed themselves with reference to the county trolley that "it is an outrage at 75 years," so I say that it is more of an outrage to give it indefinately, perpetually.

I look back twenty-one years since my connection with the electrical business; then there was nothing of importance except the telegraph. Today it has grown from a 14 or 18 wire and a small hand instrument to the fifty or seventy-five ton electric locomotive. If I turn about in the other direction for twenty-five years, or twenty-one years, I believe the improvements are going to be as stupendous, and more so. One of the things I expect to see is a great reduction in the cost of apparatus. Now who is going to get the benefit of that decrease? If it is worth $500,000 today it will be worth $2,000,000 then. Now are you going to grant a franchise in perpetuity with such a past staring you in the face? I do not think the people of Plainfield will appreciate that kind of a franchise; I do not think that they expect you will give it; in fact I expect, I know, that very many of them will look very carefully into this subject before you grant the franchise.

One of the Councilmen told me today that it was only a technicality it hadn't gone through and they were in possession of the street. He says, "In honor bound we are bound to give this franchise." While I respect his opinion so far as it goes, I say to you that you are robbing the inhabitants of the City of Plainfield, you are robbing the whole city.

Now then further than that, there are things in the old franchise which I objected to strenuously, things which I saw passed against my best judgment, but I do not care to set myself up as a judge of those things when the Council said it was otherwise. I do not believe when the head office of the Plainfield Street Railway Company is transferred to Jersey City that this Council, or any subsequent Council, will be ever able to examine the books regarding the business done in Plainfield.

Now the ordinance says that when the business in Plainfield and North Plainfield amounts to $80,000 the company shall pay the city 5 per cent. of its gross earnings. I do not believe there is a man in this room who will live to see the day when they can find out from the company, that will ultimately hold this franchise, when the business amounts to $80,000 in Plainfield and North Plainfield.

Now I feel it is but fair to the railway company to say that I want to see the road extended all through this city where it is needed and where it will be a benefit. I do not want to see it done at the expense of the city altogether.

Another thing that I want to see done, and it will never be done once you have granted this franchise. I do not want to see the railway company in a position to say, "If you will pay the cost of construction we will run our cars over the line that you have built at your expense." I had an experience of that kind. I once asked the present company to extend their line from Monroe avenue. The reply came back that if we would raise the money to put in the equipment, or to build the road, they would run their cars. I said no; it is contrary to good principle. I do not believe in the citizens, who have already given the franchise, which is valuable, which amounts to a large percentage of your assets, being asked not only to give the franchise but their equipment beside. I said what I will do is to guarantee the company 6 per cent., or 7 per cent. if that was the proper thing, on the cost of the investment. Now with that guarantee, which is a lien on my property and on the property of those who were with me in the guarantee, they were safe; they could borrow the money and build the extension. I feel safe, they feel safe, because at the end of two or three years more the extension will cost nothing.

They make the steam road pay for the right-of-way. They get a franchise here by which they can run any weight of car, any size of car, over this track. The franchise, as it now stands, is in no way hedged about by which you are able to control the character of the equipment. The first electric cars run in this country were such as you would not allow run over your streets today. Cars built ten years from now may be such an improvement over the cars that are built today that you would not run the cars they are running today if you had the power to stop them.

Furthermore, the character of the maintenance and methods of operating ought to be carefully guarded, and can be guarded if you take the time to bring it about.

People said, "Well, Kinsman, the reason you weren't named Councilman-at-Large last year was because the electric people were afraid you had a knife up your sleeve." I haven't any knife up my sleeve. I know what the city is running up against; they are running up against a company who are equipped with every knowledge and every facility for carrying on the street railway business. The city is equipped with men who are honest and intend to do right, but confessedly do not know all there is to the street railway business, and I do not think they ought to grant a franchise until they do know. The committee have an ordinance drawn by some one who thinks he knows.

Now I take this thing upon myself freely and without any question of reward. I know what I say here. I have no axes to grind. I have no reason except the welfare of the city at heart.

The suggestion has been made that this Council grant the right-of-way, subject to future power to be able to grant to another road the use of the line provided they pay part

DARING ROBBERY IN BROAD DAYLIGHT.

Rockview Avenue House Looted of $275 Yesterday Afternoon.

$85 OF IT WAS IN COLD CASH

ONE MEMBER OF THE FAMILY AT HOME ALL THE TIME.

The Residence of Mr. Simmons Proved a Fruitful Field for the Thieves, Who Gained an Entrance by Climbing Over the Porch and Going in Through a Second Story Window—Furniture Upset.

One of the most daring robberies reported in sometime was that of yesterday afternoon when the home of Mr. and Mrs. Simmons, No. 5 Rockview avenue, was entered by a thief or thieves, who stole $87 in cash, a ring with three diamonds and a diamond stud, amounting in all to about $275. There is not the slightest clew as to the guilty parties and the police have nothing upon which to work.

There resides in the house Mr. and Mrs. Simmons, their daughter and son. Mr. Simmons and the son were away at work, and the daughter was in New York. Mrs. Simmons was the only one at home, and she remained down stairs during most of the day. About 2 o'clock in the afternoon she went up stairs and everything at that time was all right.

She went up stairs again at 5 o'clock and then discovered that someone had been in the house and stolen the articles mentioned. The money was divided and was placed under some bedding, but the parties who entered the house thoroughly ransacked everything on the second floor. Bedding was disarranged, bureau drawers were pulled out and the contents scattered about the rooms, and in fact everything was turned upside down.

Investigation proved that the thieves entered the second story through a front window over the porch. Footprints can be seen about the porch on the ground and that is all.

Last evening about 6 o'clock the robbery was reported to Chief Marshal Wilson and since that time he has been at work on the case. He has, however, met with little success for the reason that no one remembers having seen anyone about in that neighborhood that acted strangely. It looks as though the persons were well acquainted with the house, for they seemed to know just where to find the valuables that were hidden away.

Mrs. Simmons says that she does not remember having heard any strange noises about the house or having seen anything that would arouse her suspicion.

SOLD BROOMS AND BRUSHES.

Ernest Workers of Crescent Avenue Church Held a Sale Yesterday.

Something new in the line of a sale was held in the parlors of the Crescent Avenue church yesterday afternoon by the members of the Ernest Workers, the boys' missionary band of the church. Brushes and brooms of all varieties were sold at the regular market prices. The rain hurt the trade but there were a number present despite the unpropitious weather and the boys made a good showing.

The sale was under the charge of all the members and the officers. The officers are President, George Richards; secretary, Edward Janes; treasurer, Witney Baker. The other members are Hugh Baldwin, Amos Brooks, VanWyck Brooks, Wickham Corwin, Frank O. Howard, Theodore Gavett, Richard Lovell, Brockholst K. Miller, Raymond V. V. Miller, Charles Perkins, and Ralph Vail. Mrs. Isaac L. Miller is the superintendent.

Break in the Train.

As the 7:55 train was pulling out from the depot this morning the coupling between two of the coaches became loose, and while the engine and most of the train went on, the smoker and the club car "Netherwood" remained behind. The break was soon noticed and the train was backed and the two cars attached.

Now Out of the Navy.

Michael O'Keeffe, who is now at his home in this city, was on the auxiliary cruiser Alexandria, and not the Texas as stated yesterday. His ship is now out of commission and the men have been discharged. His brother, Dennis O'Keeffe, who is with the Detroit, is now in Boston harbor.

The Braves Treated.

At the meeting ot Miantonomoh Tribe of Red Men last evening a musicale was given during the good of the order. Harry Dreier was congratulated on the new trail he is soon to follow. He did the right thing by the braves last night.

AN OFFICIAL VISITATION

COLUMBIA LODGE ENTERTAINED THEIR GRAND OFFICERS.

Occasion Was a Time for a Pleasant Social Gathering—Six Candidates Initiated—Niagara Falls Lodge Thanked

Last night was a great night for Columbia Lodge, A. O. U. W., the occasion being their annual reception to the grand officers of the State. The lodge rooms in the Coward building on Park avenue was crowded with the grand officers, and friends from Central Lodge, Upchurch Lodge, Westfield, and Bernards Lodge, Basking Ridge.

Six candidates were initiated, F. C. Lounsbury, William G. DeMeza, John Lloyd, Oliver R. Pearson, Jr., Robert Striker and Oliver L. Drake. After this the meeting adjourned, and was re-organized again as a public gathering, so that outside friends could come in and participate in the speeches which were made by Grand Master Workman Stahl, from Trenton; Past Grand Master Workman John Diefendorf, of Newark; Grand Foreman Lambert, of Newark; Grand Receiver Golden Test, Camden; Grand Recorder J. J. Lippincott, Camden, and Grand Inside Watchman, V. W. Nash.

Besides these, several members of Central Lodge spoke, and it was nearly 12 o'clock before the guests departed.

On exhibition in the lodge room was a framed piece of parchment bearing upon it a vote of thanks from Columbia Lodge to International Lodge, No. 6, of Niagara Falls. The resolutions will be placed in J. Hervey Doane's window for awhile, then they will have the seal of the order affixed before sending them away. The work is good and brings forth much praise. The printing was all done by hand, the artist being Spencer W. Winnie, of Cranford, a friend of Joseph D. Moon, one of the committee.

The thanks are accorded International Lodge for the fraternal love and care exercised over Edger E. Marshall and his wife when the former was taken ill at Niagara Falls. The work is as neately executed as if printed by machinery. The names of those of the committee on resolutions, Joseph D. Moon, V. W. Nash and Julius W. A. Bauersacks, are placed at the bottom.

REBUKE FOR JUSTICES.

GRAND JURY COMPELLED TO EXAMINE TRIVIAL COMPLAINTS.

Prosecutor English Instructed to Hereafter Disapprove Fees on Cases of Justices of Peace That Have No Merit.

(Special to The Daily Press.)

Elizabeth, October, 22.—The grand jury completed their deliberations yesterday, and they were discharged by Judge VanSyckel.

Before going into court the jurors visited the county jail, and were escorted through the various departments. They expressed their commendation of the excellent condition of the jail in resolutions, which were presented to Warden Dodd.

Deputy Sheriff Kirkner escorted the jurors into court. Forman George A. Squire handed to the clerk of the court a batch of 14 indictments, making a total of 26 found for this term.

There were no presentments. It is reported there is an indictment in homicide case—the murder of the Italian woman some few months ago. There will probably be no arrangements until next week.

Many trivial complaints were examined by the grand jurors and dismissed. Most of these were wholly without merit, and nothing in them to justify the reference to a grand inquest. The result is that much time is consumed by grand jurors, and large costs put upon the county for justices' fees.

In view of this the grand jury is said to have instructed the prosecutor of the county to carefully review the bills of the justices, and to disapprove of the payment of fees in these cases which wholly lack merit. The law provides that in cases where indictments are found the justices of the peace fees must be paid, and leaves it to the discretion of the prosecutor for the approval of the fees in the cases which were dismissed.

Street Car Axle Broke.

Last evening about 6 o'clock an axle on car No. 11 of the street railway broke and passengers had to be transferred for a time to another car. The accident happened on the Netherwood line. A little later the car was run to the carhouse, where it is now being repaired.

Another Baker Child Dead.

Charles Baker, aged six years, son of Mr. and Mrs. Baker, of West Front street, died Thursday evening, of diphtheria. This makes the third child that has died of the same disease in that family.

HIS LOVE UNREQUITED; OSCAR WAS RECKLESS.

Almost a Tragic End to a Troublesome Wooing.

DID HE TAKE SOME POISON?

WHETHER HE DID OR DIDN'T, HEROIC TREATMENT WAS GIVEN.

Miss Hattie Stewart No Longer Accepts the Ardent Love of Night-watchman Vaughn, Who Whistled for Her While the Rain Poured Down—Found Frothing at the Mouth.

'Twixt love and duty Oscar Vaughn, the well-known night watchman of North Plainfield, attempted to commit suicide last evening, but his efforts were not successful. Oscar has for some time past been desperately in love with Miss Hattie Stewart, of West Front street, and it was arranged that they should be married Nov. 22d. This plan was all right so far as Oscar was concerned, but his alleged sweetheart objected, and during the past few days she has absolutely refused to entertain his affections.

This action had a depressing effect on Oscar and the climax was reached last evening, when, it is said, he took a quantity of laudanum with intent to kill himself. Whether he took the poison has not yet been determined, but he was run through a course of treatment that was heroic enough to remove any poison that might have found its way into his stomach. He now lies at the hospital in a weakened condition, but all right. He will probably be discharged tomorrow.

Oscar's trouble took place last evening about 7 o'clock in front of the home occupied by his sweetheart. He stood in the roadway without an umbrella, while the pouring rain thoroughly soaked him. He whistled for his girl, but she refused to come out and see her ardent lover.

After repeated efforts Oscar became discouraged and he went to the house across the street adjoining the one occupied by Edward Nelson. Here is where he attempted to kill himself. He was seen there by the neighbors and it was thought that Oscar was having a fit. Word was sent to Barker's drug store, and the ambulance was sent for. When this arrived it was found that Oscar was prostrated and frothing at the mouth. He was then taken to the hospital, where he was given heroic treatment. He refused to have anything to say, but the treatment no doubt was beneficial, for he is feeling much better today.

This adds another chapter to Oscar's history, but it will do doubt result in his remaining a single man for sometime, for Miss Stewart will not marry him now.

Land-Owners to Be Heard.

(Special to the Daily Press.)

Elizabeth, October 22—A call has been issued for a meeting of the Union County Board of Freeholders for Monday morning, when the report of the commissioners appointed to appraise and condemn land in Westfield avenue, which it is proposed to widen, will be received, and a hearing given to all land-owners who object to the improvement.

Dr. Coles Presents Another Bust.

Dr. J. Ackerman Coles, of Scotch Plains, has just presented the city of Philadelphia with a very fine bust of George Washington, and the same has been accepted by the officials of that city. It will be displayed during next week at the peace jubilee. The bust is of bronze and was the work of Tiffany & Co., of New York. It is considered to be one of the finest in existence.

Improvements in White's Store.

John L. Force, of this city, recently completed the work of installing several electric lights in White's dry goods store. In the show windows there are arc lights and five incandescent lights have been placed in the millinery department up stairs. Last Thursday evening they were lighted for the first.

BIG TIME FOR PYTHIANS.

PERSEVERANCE LODGE ENTERTAINED OUT-OF-TOWN BRETHERN.

During the Business Part of the Meeting Two Members Were Initiated—Banquet and General Good Time.

Perseverance Lodge, No. 74, K. of P., had a glorious time last evening at their regular meeting, when they entertained a very large delegation of Knights from the New Brunswick Lodge. The stormy weather did not stop the visitors and they came prepared to have a good time. During the business part of the meeting the lodge initiated George O. Stevens and Mr. Hoagland and gave them the third rank. This work was performed in a perfect manner and received high commendation from the visitors.

Following the business of the evening a programme of song, music, speeches and recitations were enjoyed. Both the visitors and the members of the home lodge took part in this programme. George Stevens was called on for remarks, but he said he was so much interested in what he had seen that he was lost for words to express himself. He then presented the propositions of two persons for membership. Following this bit of pleasantry an adjournment was made to the banquet room, where a fine supper was served by the committee in charge. This was followed with more speeches and songs, and about 1 o'clock this morning the visitors left for home.

They all voted that they had enjoyed themselves and extended an invitation to the local members to visit them at New Brunswick. In addition to those from New Brunswick, there were present Knights from New York, Pennsylvania, and in fact many towns along the line of the Central Railroad

WEARY PILGRIMS TO JAIL.

Borrowful Couple Tried Their Wiles on City Judge But Failed.

In a companionship of true love and rags Jennie Thompson, white, and Edward Jackson, colored, were making a pilgrimage. The site of their Mecca had not been decided upon. All their earthly belongings were carried in an old feed bag. Last night they sought protection from the rain beneath the baggage truck at the Grant Avenue station. There Patrolman Weinzenreid found them and took them to the jail for the night.

A pretty fabrication of their imaginative minds was woven in the City Court this morning to edify the City Judge. He was a wise young Judge, however. Jennie was sent back to jail for 60 days with a fine of $50 to pay as well. Jackson was ordered to jail for 59 days and to pay a fine of $100. Neither had a cent and the fines will have to be worked out.

The Mayor's Kind Act.

Mayor Wilson held court in the borough this morning and there were two prisoners before him. One was a peddler and vagrant named John Hannan. His Honor heard his story, after which he gave him ten minutes to get out of the borough. The other prisoner was Mrs. Agnes Thompson, of Westfield. She came to Plainfield last evening and became intoxicated. She says that it was her first offense. The Mayor suspended sentence and gave Mrs. Thompson some good advice. He then gave Chief Wilson 25 cents and told him to see that Mrs. Thompson secured a ticket to Westfield.

Death of Miss Casey.

Miss Dottie Casey, the twelve-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John F. Casey, of West Third street, died last evening after an illness lasting for sometime. Through her illness everything that could be was done to alleviate suffering and the patient was uncomplaining. The funeral services will be held next Monday morning from the house at 8:30 o'clock and from St. Mary's church at 9 o'clock.

Calvary Baptists' New Edifice.

The new edifice of the Calvary Baptist church, situated on Central avenue, is in rapid construction under the management of the contractor, William H. Smith. The church will be of stone, and if the weather continues favorable the corner-stone will be laid by next Sunday.

Won a Watch.

William Townley, of Alerts, who has been contesting for a gold watch in connection with the fair being held at the Plainfield Catholic Club house, made a report last evening and turned in $102. He was awarded the watch and it will be presented to him this evening.

Settled Out of Court.

(Special to The Daily Press.)

Dunellen, October 22.—The trouble between Henry Case, of North Plainfield, and Golson Smalley, of this place, has been settled satisfactorily to both parties. The missing horse blankets have been returned and the charge against Smalley withdrawn.

BIG MASS MEETING FOR VOORHEES HERE.

Will Be Held in Music Hall Nov. 3d or 4th.

PLANS FOR THE CAMPAIGN.

CHAIRMAN MURPHY THINKS THAT VOORHEES CAN COME.

He Was to Appear in Union County for One Day Only—Elizabeth Gobbled That Chance—Plainfield Objected to State Committee, Who Promised Another Day—Fowler to Come Also.

At present there are few busier men in New Jersey than Foster M. Voorhees, the Republican candidate for Governor of this State. He is touring from one end of the State to the other, making speeches, shaking hands and doing everything that the State executive committee of the G. O. P. believes will advance his candidacy.

By the campaign mapped out by the State committee, Voorhees was only given one day in Union county. Elizabeth wants that night, of course. The Plainfield Republicans immediately brought considerable pressure to bear on the State committee to change the arrangement and give Plainfield a chance to hear him. October 27th is the date set for his appearance at Elizabeth. After Plainfield made its little kick the State committee thought it over and has about decided to grant the request.

The local politicians were given to understand that November 3d or 4th would probably be acceptable to the managers of the State campaign and that they might go ahead and lay plans for either one of those dates. The positive information will come shortly as soon as Chairman Murphy, of the state committee sees just how things are going.

At a meeting of the city executive committee of the G. O. P., Wednesday evening, the local Republicans talked it over and laid their first plans for the meeting. The refusal of Music Hall for those two nights was secured and definite arrangements will be made as soon as Chairman Murphy announces what he is going to do. The city committee made it very plain to the state organization that the mass meeting was not going to be held unless Voorhees and Congressman Fowler were sure to be there.

As planned, the campaign for Voorhees in this city will consist of a mass meeting and the usual canvass. Plainfield is considered so surely Republican in a State election at least that the managers of the campaign are not worrying about her. All they wish is to get the votes out on election and they have no fears as to the result. A talk by the principal candidates is likely to stir up enthusiasm and so bring out more than otherwise would turn out. Plainfield is expected to give sufficient majority to overcome the Democratic vote in Elizabeth and thus turn the tide in the county. These, at least, are the expectations of the Republican leaders.

Mrs. Howe's Talk on the Poets.

Mrs. Julia Ward Howe, who will lecture in Plainfield Monday afternoon next, October 24th, attributes the remarkable preservation of her voice, to her early and thorough training in the Italian method of singing. Although she is in her eightieth year, her voice is clear, sweet, strong and beautiful. Mrs. Howe has many friends and admirers in Plainfield, and it is expected that a large audience will assemble to listen to her "Reminiscences of Holmes, Lowell and Whittier." Tickets may be obtained from Mrs. David W. Pond, at Armstrong's pharmacy, and Estil's bookstore.

To Sell Valuable Property.

An advantageous opportunity will be given to local investors Tuesday, when the valuable business property, 132-138 East Front street, opposite Powlison & Jones building, will be sold at auction. The sale will be held in the afternoon at 2:30 o'clock. The same afternoon at 4 o'clock seventeen building lots at the corner of Hillside and Highland avenues will be sold. W. N. Pangborn is to be the auctioneer.

Carrier Boy Bitten by a Dog.

Doctors now agree that consumption is curable.

Three things, if taken together, will cure nearly every case in the first stages; the majority of cases more advanced; and a few of those far advanced.

The first is, fresh air; the second, proper food; the third, Scott's Emulsion of cod-liver oil with hypophosphites.

To be cured, you must not lose in weight, and, if thin, you must gain. Nothing equals Scott's Emulsion to keep you in good flesh.

EVACUATION DELAYED

Spain to Be Given More Time to Leave Cuba

120,000 SOLDIERS TO DEPORT

The United States Not to Assume the Civil Control as Soon as Had Been Planned. The Change Made Irrespective of Negotiations at Paris.

Washington, Oct. 22.—It is now certain that the complete evacuation of Cuba will be delayed beyond the period originally fixed by the administration. This will follow entirely without reference to anything that has occurred in Paris before the peace commission. The war department has about satisfied itself that the task imposed upon the Spanish authorities, namely, the removal and transportation to a great distance by sea of about 120,000 soldiers, sick and well, with their accoutrements, was beyond the ability of the Spaniards.

The magnitude of the task is shown by the fact that the great transatlantic steam lines, crossing the Atlantic from New York, all combined, in prosperous seasons, would transport only about fifty thousand persons in one year, less than half the number which Spain must transport.

Delay in the evacuation of Cuba will cause a delay in the relinquishment of sovereignty by the Spaniards over the entire island, which was set for December 1.

It is hardly deemed prudent to undertake to assume charge of the municipal affairs of Havana so long as the city contains a strong garrison of Spanish troops, and it is felt that law and order could be better maintained in such centers by allowing them to remain under Spanish jurisdiction until they are evacuated by the troops and reoccupied by United States troops.

It is not to be understood from this that the American military commissioners are in any sense abating the pressure they have brought to bear upon the Spanish military commissioners to secure the evacuation of the island and the relinquishment of Spanish sovereignty.

On the contrary, they have redoubled their efforts to secure these objects, but are not disposed to insist upon the performance of impossible tasks, and their demands will be largely shaped by their knowledge that the Spaniards are acting perfectly in good faith in their efforts to carry out the terms of the protocol.

CELEBRATION OF TRAFALGAR DAY.

Unusual Outburst of Patriotic Feeling in England.

London, Oct. 22.—Exceptional interest was shown yesterday owing to the dispute with France over the occupation of Fashoda, in the celebration of the anniversary of the battle of Trafalgar, fought October 21, 1805, when the British fleets under Admiral Nelson gained a brilliant victory over the fleets of France and Spain, commanded by Admiral Villeneuve.

The Nelson column in Trafalgar square was profusely decorated, and entwined with a spiral chain of laurel leaves, while laurel festoons hung from each corner of the capital to the lions at the base, which was elaborately embellished with anchors, wreaths, flags and evergreens, with a background of crimson cloth, with floral shields in each corner, inscribed with Nelson's great victories, namely, St. Vincent, Camperdown, The Nile, and Trafalgar. The morning was showery and misty, but many hundreds of people were present to cheer the hoisting of the union jack on the top of the pedestal at eight o'clock.

At Portsmouth the masts of the old-time line of battle ship Victory, Nelson's flagship at Trafalgar, and the vessel on which he died, were hung with garlands of laurel. The provincial towns celebrated the day by hoisting the union jack on all the public buildings.

Roosevelt's Stumping Tour.

New York, Oct. 22.—A few slight changes have been made in the schedule of Colonel Roosevelt's trip up the state next week. No stop will be made at Suffern, which was in the original schedule.

The first stop will be made at Hillburn, and a brief stop will also be made at Monroe, Orange county.

The men who will accompany Colonel Roosevelt next week are Dr. Chauncey M. Depew, General Stewart L. Woodford, Justice W. M. K. Olcott, John Proctor Clarke, James R. Sheffield and W. J. Youngs.

Colonel Roosevelt spoke last night in Poughkeepsie. He was accompanied by Sereno E. Payne.

They will leave Poughkeepsie at 10.31 to-day and speak in Little Falls at 2 o'clock. At 5 o'clock they will speak at Fonda.

A short stop will be made at Johnstown, and at 8 o'clock Colonel Roosevelt will speak at Gloversville. From there he will return to the city.

TROOPS AT CAMP MEADE.

Men for the Philadelphia Jubilee Parade.

Camp Meade, Middletown, Pa., Oct. 22.—The troops who will take part in the peace jubilee will leave for Philadelphia next Wednesday morning by the Pennsylvania railroad. They will be moved by divisions, and it will require twelve trains of twenty cars each.

Chief Medical Officer Girard has arranged with the railroad company for two hospital cars for each division. Colonel Girard will have the city ambulances placed at his disposal.

Yesterday twenty-four more patients were sent to Philadelphia, and by next week it is expected that there will be few serious cases in camp. The work of the Red Cross will soon be at an end. Preparations are now being made for the abandonment of this branch of the hospital, and the Red Cross forces will return to Philadelphia within ten days.

Colonel Girard has notified the society that with the departure of the troops South the Red Cross hospital will be abandoned. It will employ the most competent female nurses sent here by the society to take charge of the wards of the hospitals in the proposed southern camps. They will be assisted by the Corps Reserve Ambulance Company, which is being recruited to five hundred.

Division quartermaster stations have been established at these camps, and all supplies are being sent there.

As fast as they can be got ready surplus tents and other equipments at Camp Meade are being sent South.

THE PARIS EXPOSITION.

Twenty Two Thousand Square Feet More Space Secured by Commissioner Peck

Paris, Oct. 22.—When Ferdinand W. Peck, the United States commissioner to the Paris exposition of 1900, arrived in this city the space allotted to the United States at the exposition grounds was 175,000 feet. Mr. Peck's first gain was 6,000 square feet, and he has just secured 22,000 square feet more, by means of a direct order from the French government on the director of the exposition, making the present total 203,000 square feet.

Germany has 150,000 square feet. It is not known yet how much space has been allotted to Great Britain or to Russia.

Some of the American newspapers received here describe alleged incidents in connection with Mr. Peck which the latter says have not occurred.

He is described as having left a box at the opera house here because he was not permitted to occupy it with a party exceeding the official limitations of the box, and as having refused to leave a sleeping car on arriving at Paris at an unseasonable hour.

Mr. Peck says there have been no circumstances or occurrences in any degree warranting the stories referred to.

Precious Metal Production

Washington, Oct. 22.—The director of the mint, in his report upon the production of the precious metals during the calendar year 1897, just submitted to the secretary of the treasury, says that the value of the gold produced in the United States during the calendar year 1897 was $57,363,000. The South African Republic holds first place, producing gold to the value of $57,633,861, Australasia $55,684,182, and Russia $23,245,763. There was a notable increase in the production of gold in the world during 1897 over 1896. The United States increased $4,275,000, the South African Republic made the remarkable gain of $13,854,192, Australasia increased $10,502,249 and Russia $1,709,970.

The United States produced during the year 53,860,000 fine ounces of silver, and Mexico 53,905,180 fine ounces, a decrease for the United States of 4,974,800 fine ounces, and an increase for Mexico of 8,256,756 fine ounces.

The Award of the War Bonds

Washington, Oct. 22.—Judge Cox, in the district supreme court has decided the case of George B. Wightman and of William H. Wharton against Secretary Gage in favor of the secretary of the treasury.

One suit sought an injunction and the other a mandamus, the basis of complaint in each being the rejection by the secretary of the treasury of bids submitted for the recent war loan bond issue by the complainants. Secretary Gage rejected the bids, believing the bidders really represented certain institutions.

Judge Cox held that under the act of Congress the secretary of the treasury had discretion in the award of the bonds, and that the intent of Congress was that they should go to individuals to the exclusion of banks and corporations.

No Case Against Maxim

Poughkeepsie, N. Y., Oct. 22.—The charge of bigamy and abandonment against Hiram S. Maxim, the gunmaker, by the woman calling herself Helen Maxim, was yesterday formally dismissed with the assent of the plaintiff.

Maxim arrived in the court room before Recorder Brown or his counsel had put in an appearance, but early as he was, Helen Maxim had preceded him, and sat coolly surveying the gunmaker, while he chose a chair a considerable distance from her.

There were also present Maxim's eldest daughter, and W. W. Culver, a Philadelphia lawyer, who represented Helen Maxim in her litigation with Maxim's first wife over the furniture in the Philadelphia house.

Strike of Coal Miners

Pittsburg, Pa., Oct. 22.—Two thousand coal miners in the fourth and fifth pools on the Monongahela river struck yesterday for the enforcement of the Chicago agreement.

The strikers are preparing for a long siege and are establishing camps near the mines to prevent non-union miners from working.

Admiral Schley Ordered Home

Washington, Oct. 22.—Rear Admiral Schley, having reported to the navy department that the Porto Rico evacuation commission has concluded its work, has been directed by the department to return to Tompkinsville on the cruiser Newark with the report and the clerks of the commission.

MARCHAND'S REPORT OUT

Admiralty Directs That No Extensive Repairs Be Begun on Any Reserve Vessel. French Newspapers More Pacific in Their Comment on Fashoda.

London, Oct. 22.—The Admiralty has ordered that no dock yard repairs be commenced on ships of the fleet in reserve unless they can be completed within forty-eight hours.

Paris, Oct. 22.—The Figaro says: "As proof of the difference between the words and deeds of the British, while the Duke of Devonshire and Sir Michael Hicks--Beach are making aggressive speeches the British Government has entered into a friendly discussion of the question of our rights and claims to Fashoda. We hear from a good source that England has asked France to define her claims."

The Echo de Paris says that the policy of effacement reached its limit on the day that France left England tete-a-tete with the Khedive of Egypt.

The Gaulois says that the policy of two systems is left to France;; namely, to act in concert with England against Germany, or to join Russia and Germany against England. The paper cautions the government against action without promise of definite results.

The report of Major Marchand, brought by special messenger from Fashoda to Cairo and from there forwarded to Paris in cipher has been received here, and the work of deciphering the dispatch began yesterday morning. It is asserted that the report makes no mention of the visit of General Kitchener to Fashoda.

Major Marchand's dispatch is simply an account of the expedition, the incidents of the journey, the route taken, the geographical position of the posts occupied and the number of men left behind to defend each. It is essentially a copy of the reports forwarded previously via Abyssinia and the Congo. It also enumerates the treaties concluded with various tribes.

Major Marchand's report of his encounter with the Khalifa's troops does not go beyond the early part of September. He reports that on August 20 the expedition had an abundance of supplies.

It is probable that two yellow books will be distributed on Sunday, one on Cretan affairs and the other on Fashoda.

Cairo, Oct. 22.—The explanation of the fact that General Kitchener's visit to Fashoda is not mentioned in General Marchand's dispatch is that Marchand's full report was not ready when Captain Baratier left Fashoda. Marchand expected that Baratier would not go beyond Khartoum and thought it advisable to forward by him the part of the report that was finished, sending the remainder when Baratier returned. Baratier probably found orders awaiting him at Omdurman to proceed to Cairo.

Vienna, Oct. 22.—The Fremdenblatt says there is no need of apprehension that England and France will go to war. It may rather be expected that French public opinion, taking into account the forces of facts, will perceive the necessity for a conciliatory disposition, and that French diplomacy will attain a result which will enable it to bear, after so many colonial successes, the wreck of one hope.

The Neues Wiener Tagblatt says that the European Continental states are not interested in seeing any chanfige made in the British protectorate over Egypt. The continent is strongly desirous of seeing a pacific settlement.

Explosion Killed Eight

Washington, Oct. 22.—The navy department has received a brief report by telegraph from Lieutenant Commander Drake, president of the trial board that witnessed the test of the torpedo boat Davis at Astoria, Ore., telling of the accident to the little vessel in the bursting of some boiler tubes on her trial trip Thursday. The report says that eight men lost their lives and that great damage was done and very extensive repairs are necessary.

At Lieutenant Commander Drake's suggestion the trial board will be dissolved.

Reported Rubber Deal.

Boston, Oct. 22.—The Globe says that it is reported on the Shoe and Leather Exchange that the affairs of the Boston Rubber Shoe Company have been absorbed by the United States Rubber Company, and that Mr. Converse, its president, will become a director in the new corporation.

The purchase price is said to be $1,000,000 cash, $4,123,600 in preferred stock paying eight per cent. dividend, and $3,499,700 common, a total of $8,623,800 being the amount involved.

Commercial Fertilizers.

Washington, Oct. 22.—The department of agriculture is now paying special attention to the subject of commercial fertilizers, the manufacture of which has grown into an important industry within thirty years. The annual production now amounts to about $40,000,000, and the business is increasing rapidly.

Jockey Sloane Dissatisfied.

London, Oct. 22.—Sloan, the American jockey, is reported to be dissatisfied with one or two decisions made against him at Sandown Park. He is quoted as saying that he would not ride to-day, and after riding the Prince of Wales's horse, for which he is engaged, would clear out of the country.

The Yukon Freezing Over.

Vancouver, B. C., Oct. 22.—The steamer Garrone has arrived from St. Michael with a number of Klondikers. The Yukon is now freezing over. Several steamers are said to be on sand bars in the river and ice is forming around them.

POLITICS AND CIVIL SERVICE.

A Circular to All Boards of Examiners from the Commission.

Washington, Oct. 22.—The civil service commission has sent a circular to the members of the seven hundred boards of examiners throughout the country on the "political activity of ederal officers and employes."

It calls attention to extracts from the executive instructions of July 14, 1886, which the circular says are still in force, and which are republished for the information and guidance of all officers and employes in the executive civil service. The circular then goes on to say:

"The postmaster general, in a letter dated August 8, 1898, stated that the order of the president above quoted had been neither revoked nor modified. Those who enter the classified civil service upon the ground of ascertained merit, as established by the civil service rules, and are protected therein, should be quick to recognize the reciprocal obligations thereby imposed and avoid any action which now or at any future time could reasonably be subject to adverse political criticisms.

"The commission believes that the best interests of the service will be promoted by the non-participation of all members of its board of examiners in political conventions or in the work of political committees.

"While attendance at a political convention as a delegate, or membership upon a political committee is not in itself a violation of the civil service rules, the commission holds that all partisan activity, if sufficient to impair usefulness as a representative of the civil service commission, is sufficient cause of removal from membership on any of its board of examiners.

"Section 2 of the civil service act of January 16, 1883, provides that no person in the public service, 'has any right to use his official authority or influence to coerce the political action of any person or body.'"

Convict John Garison Dying

Sing Sing, Oct. 22.—Death will soon end the life imprisonment of Convict John Garison, who is in the Sing Sing prison hospital dying of consumption. The scene yesterday about the convict's bed was a sad one. Two faithful negro convicts stood over the dying man, fanning him as he gasped for breath, while two Sisters of Mercy knelt at the bedside and prayed.

Mrs. Sage, the warden's wife, at the request of the dying man, read some chapters from the Bible. He took her hand, and after thanking her, whispered: "I am now ready to go. It will soon be over."

He has served fifteen years' imprisonment, having been sent to Sing Sing on January 23, 1883. He was convicted of murder and sentenced to die by Judge Brown, in Orange county, but his sentence was afterward commuted by Governor Cleveland to imprisonment for life.

He killed a fellow workman named Felix McCarthy during a quarrel while at work on a railroad near Newburgh. He has been in the hospital three years. He is a native of Finland and has no relatives in this country.

Taku is at the mouth of the Pei-Ho river on which Pekin is situated. The Petrel will probably go farther up the stream in the direction of Pekin, but the Boston will be obliged to remain at Taku.

CROWDS TO GREET HIM

The President Warmly Welcomed on His Homeward Way.

ADMIRERS MEET THE TRAIN

The President and Party Pass Through Indiana and Recieves a Continuous Ovation. Brief Speeches to the Throng At Many Points. Monster Demonstration at Indianapolis.

Indianapolis, Oct. 22.—The special train bearing President McKinley and his party arrived here from Chicago at 11 o'clock yesterday morning.

The trip through the northern part of Indiana was without incident until Kokomo was reached, at nine o'clock in the morning.

Here the president received an ovation and he made a brief speech that was interrupted by a sad acident.

James Jones, while ramming the cannon that was firing a salute in honor of the president, was shot by a premature discharge of the gun.

He received mortal injuries and died just as the train pulled out for Tipton. At Tipton the president spoke for six minutes. He talked of prosperity from the standpoint of labor.

The committee representing Indianapolis met the train at Noblesville, Ind. where a great crowd was on hand in the hope of getting a view of the nation's chief executive.

In response to calls for a speech, the president stepped out on the platform of his private car and thanked the people for their welcome. He congratulated them on the termination of the war, the triumph of American arms and the results that are sure to follow.

The train then came to Indianapolis without another stop, although there were crowds at all of the intervening stations.

At the Washington street crossing the train was stopped and the enormous crowd that packed the street broke into cheers the instant the president emerged from his car.

Carriages were in waiting for the presidential party, and for fully a mile down Washington street the civic and military bodies that were to take part in the parade were waiting. The march through the central part of the city was begun without delay, the 158th Indiana regiment acting as escort to the president.

THE PEACE NEGOTIATIONS.

The Cuban Dispute to Go Over Until Monday.

Paris, Oct. 22.—The United States and Spanish peace commissions held separate sessions yesterday, and when the joint session opened it was believed that the Cuban question would not be decided, but would be taken up again at the joint session of next Monday.

An effort is being made here to create the impression that there is some understanding between the United States and Spain regarding the Philippine islands, outside of the statements contained in the third article of the protocol.

That article embodies the only agreement between the United States and Spain in regard to the Philippine islands, and it clearly sets forth that the United States will occupy and hold the city, bay and harbor of Manila pending the conclusion of a treaty of peace which shall determine the control, disposition and government of the Philippine Islands.

The purpose of the United States and the agreement arrived at by Spain was that the control and government of the Philippine islands should be decided by the commissions now sitting here, and Spain understood that the protocol did not determine anything as to Spain's ultimate sovereignty in the Philippine islands.

The future disposition of the islands will be determined, so far as the United States commission is concerned, when the Cuban question is settled, and after the points relating to Porto Rico and the Ladrones have been passed upon.

Van Wyck Going to Buffalo.

New York, Oct. 22.—Augustus Van Wyck left the city last night on a speechmaking trip up the state. He will go direct to Buffalo, where he will address a meeting this evening. On Monday night he will speak at Rochester and on Wednesday night, at Syracuse.

In Buffalo Messrs. Danforth and Stanchfield and Judge Titus will speak at the same meeting with Van Wyck. In Rochester his fellow speakers will be Messrs. Danforth and Thomas F. Carmody, while in Syracuse Danforth and Thomas F. Grady will assist Mr. Croker's gubernatorial candidate in trying to melt the Democratic frost.

Corean Cabinet Out.

Yokohama, Oct. 22.—Advices from Seoul say that one of the political bodies in Corea presented a memorial to the government calling for the formation of a parliament, to which the cabinet replied that such a proposal was premature. This answer was resented by the politicians, whereupon the ministers resigned.

Vienna's Plague Scare

Vienna, Oct. 22.—It is reported that one of the nurses who attended Herr Barsch, the surgical attendant who died on Tuesday from bubonic plague, is dying in the hospital from the same disease, and that Dr. Mueller, Dr. Barsch's physician, is also ill with the plague.

DUN'S WEEKLY REVIEW.

An Enormus Export of Wheat. Pre-Election Stagnation Less Than Usual

New York, Oct. 22.—With growing foreign demand for American products, exchange is influenced mainly by political uncertainties abroad. While Europe waits for the outcome between England and France about the upper Nile, the financiers of all European countries are trying to force upon each other the burden of providing cash for the enormous demands of the United States. England has so managed as to make France and Germany send most of the gold, and the resulting war of exchanges between foreign nations checks for the moment the movement of gold this way. Yet these and all other causes do not so far hinder business as to prevent an excess over the most prosperous of previous years. The exchanges through all clearing houses for the past week have been .6 per cent. larger than last year, and .7 per cent. larger than in 1892, but outside New York for the week transactions were smaller than in 1892.

Railroad earnings for the first half of October exceed last year's by 5.7 per cent., and those of 1892 by 5.9 per cent.

The outgo of wheat staggers all prophets of disasters, but while the price has advanced three cents at the West, the rise would have been much greater but for the feeling that the enormous foreign demand may not last. Exports, flour included, have been for the past week 3,369,536 bushels at Atlantic ports, against 3,576,607 last year, and 923,273 bushels from Pacific ports, against 1,295,914 last year, making for the three weeks 11,984,538 bushels, against 14,227,390 last year. Without doubt many western farmers are still holding back their wheat, and yet the receipts at the chief western ports have been in three weeks 30,592,494 bushels, against 23,725,801 last year.

While cotton spinners are said to have agreed upon a selling agency and a curtailment of production, there is a better demand for staple goods, and prospect of a better demand in future. In woolen goods, also, there has been a marked improvement during the past week, and better sales with extensive inquiry.

The boot and shoe manufacturers shipped from the east in three weeks of October, 265,642 cases, against 250,628 in the same weeks of 1894, and 249,120 in the same weeks of 1897, while in 1892 their shipments in the same weeks were 228,636 cases.

There is much hesitation in the iron and steel trade, partly because the outcome of various combinations in Bessemer pig, steel rails, bars, wire nails and the like, cannot yet be definitely anticipated.

Just before an election of importance, some hesitation in business is not unusual, but there is less this year than in any other October, with congressional elections at hand, for many years past. While the state of foreign exchange is mainly controlled by anxiety regarding peace abroad, the large receipts of gold, including $3,590,000 at San rancisco from Australia with prospect of continuing shipments from Europe, relieves the market on this side from all apprehension for the present.

War Board at Atlanta.

Atlanta, Ga., Oct. 22.—The war investigation commission arrived here shortly before 10 o'clock yesterday morning.

Chairman Dodge and his associates drove to the headquarters of the department of the gulf and were received by General Pemberton. An hour later they left for Fort McPherson to investigate the hospital service there.

It is intended to examine several witnesses and leave to-night for Anniston, Ala., where the commission will probably remaisn over Sunday.

From Anniston the commissioners will go to Chattanooga to take testimony regarding complaints about Camp Thomas, after which they will proceed to Huntsville, Ala.

Plans have not been formed for the investigation after leaving those points but Knoxville, Tenn., Lexington, Ky., and Chicago are to be visited.

A sub-committee may go to Knoxville, and from there to Washington, leaving the majority of the commission to continue to Lexington and Chicago. Several important witnesses are to be examined at Chicago, among them Dr. Senn.

Col. Wikoff's Funeral.

Easton, Pa., Oct. 22.—The funeral of Colonel Charles A. Wikoff, who fell on the field before Santiago on July 1, was held in Easton yesterday with full military honors. The remains arrived from New York Thursday night and were escorted to the late home of the deceased by a committee of citizens and G. A. R. men.

A brief funeral service was held at the house at 1.30 by Chaplain Swift of the regular army, and the Rev. Dr. H. M. Kiefer, pastor of the historic First Reformed church of th's city.

The day was observed as a general holiday by the people of Easton and its vicinity, and the streets were crowded all day. Stores, banks and industries were shut down.

There was a military and civic escort in which New Jersey and Pennsylvania troops and the G. A. R. post took part.

Our Unappropriated Lands.

Washington, Oct. 222.—A statement prepared at the general land office shows that at the present time there are 579,368,274 acres of unappropriated and unreserved public land in the United States exclusive of Alaska.

Of this area 546,549,635 acres, or more than 94 per cent., are in the thirteen so-called desert land states and territories.

Opening of New Terminal Station.

New Haven, Oct. 22.—President Clark of the New Haven Railroad Company says that the new passenger terminal station at Boston of the New Haven and Boston & Albany roads probably will be opened for operation by next Thanksgiving day, and certainly not many days later. A part of it is already ready for occupancy.

Porte's Reply to the Powers

Mr. Ivins' On Deck Again.

Mr. D. C. Ivins has a delightfully sarcastic way about him when he undertakes to write for the newspapers on trolley matters, and even if his communication provides no serious thoughts, it certainly does amuse. What on earth Mr. Ivins can see in his tirade about the cost of the trolley project as bearing on the value of the franchise the city proposes to grant to the Plainfield Street Railway Company, is beyond our comprehension. Our editorial commen's on his previous letter apply equally as well to his communication today so far as the cost of the county trolley project is concerned, and it would be a waste of effort to resume the discussion.

We profoundly thank Mr. Ivins for his kindly allusions to how people have generally regarded The Daily Press, but so far as "many of our best citizens" saying that this paper has received inspiration from Mr. Bergen for editorial remarks we can only say, fudge!

There is no company that we would prefer to see make the extension of the street railway facilities in the eastern section of the city more than the local company, providing they agree to fair and reasonable stipulations for the benefit of the people who are granting them the rights for which they ask. We appreciate the work that the Plainfield Street Railway Company has done in this city in the past, but if they will not agree to better terms than are now provided for in the pending ordinance then refuse them their petition.

We hear a lot from the trolley promoters such as Mr. Serrell and Mr. Ivins about the cost of the county project, but not a word about what the Plainfield Street Railway Company offers in the way of advantageous terms. If these gentlemen think that the Plainfield company is doing so well by the people why don't they exploit some of the advantages before the public. Mr. Ivins seems to be a stickler for good citizenship, but yet he absolutely fails to explain to the citizens what is most essential for them to know—the situation in Plainfield. Mr. Ivins seems to have a very poor idea of the eternal fitness of things.

Mayor Wilson's Attitude.

Granting that the Plainfield Street Railway Company really intend to abandon the East Second street route if better terms are demanded for the franchise, the carrying out of that threat depends upon the position of the members of the North Plainfield Borough Council. Unless they can be induced to grant such concessions as the street railway wants Plainfield to concede, then the capitalists will be euchered in their plans all-around. In effect, they will be "jumping out of the frying pan into the fire."

The attitude of Mayor Wilson, of the borough, is very important in view of this. In expressing himself privately in regard to the present agitation in the city, Mayor Wilson has said that if he lived on this side of the brook he would be right in line with The Daily Press on the matter. He said yesterday in conversation with a representative of The Daily Press that "if they (the street railway) try to come into the borough while I am Mayor they will pay for it, and pay well, too."

And when the Mayor takes a stand he is not easily moved.

The attitude of Mayor Wilson is an evidence that the street railway company are "bluffing" when they say they will abandon the East Second street route and come into the city by the borough. The East Second street route is the pivotal one to the capitalists and if the Common Council exercises its duty to the people whom they represent, the trolley tracks will not be laid until better terms are secured.

Mr. Kinsman's Remarks.

The address of F. E. Kinsman before the Common Council at the hearing on the trolley franchise ordinance, which is printed in today's Press, needs to be but read to commend itself to every well meaning citizen. Mr. Kinsman understands his subject, and though the remarks were made in an extemporaneous manner they are nevertheless very concise and easy to understand.

Mr. Kinsman pictures the situation that confronts Plainfield in a manner that compels recognition. We have no doubt but that many of The Daily Press readers who are as yet somewhat in the dark, so to speak, as to the actual worth of the trolley franchise under conderation, and also to what stipulations for the protection of the city should accompany it, will, after reading Mr. Kinsman's remarks, become convinced that it is imperative for the interests of the city that the pending ordinance be rejected by the Council.

We trust that every Press reader will peruse both Mr. Kinsman's remarks and the letter of D. C Ivins, which is also published in today's paper, as fair statements of both sides of the questions and then draw their own conclusions.

The Democratic county convention will be held at Elizabeth next Thursday afternoon, and accordingly the Democratic county executive committee has issued a call for the primaries in the various districts to be held Wednesday evening. The basis of representation is one delegate for each fifty Democratic votes cast at the last election, and also one for each fraction of fifty over twenty-five. According to that arrangement Plainfield will be entitled to delegates as follows: First ward, 4 delegates; Second ward, 2 delegates; Third ward, 2 delegates, and Fourth ward, 6 delegates. The call for the local primaries is published in the advertising colums of today's Press.

The Plainfield Street Railway Company will strain every nerve to bring sympathizers to the Common Council hearing Monday night in the effort to create sentiment in its favor and cause the Common Council to grant the franchise as now pending in the ordinance. It is the duty of every good citizen, who believes that the company should be compelled to give better terms, to also attend the meeting and speak a few words on the subject.

It is a deplorable fact that sometimes citizens do not exercise as careful attention in municipal matters as good government calls for. It is hoped that this condition will not prevail next Monday night at the hearing on the street railway franchise. It is the duty of every good citizen to attend that meeting and protest against the granting of the franchise on the terms called for in the pending ordinance.

WHAT THE SHEARS FIND.

Editorial Comment From Other Papers of Interest in Plainfield.

Our North Plainfield correspondent two weeks back said that our genial Freeholder Ballentine of Bernards was seen passing through that place in an ark with an American flag flying from the masthead. The correspondent now writes that he was mistaken, as it proved to be Dave Carney who was going over into Washington Valley to gather a few mint-julips and cider-mills for his Christmas tree. Dave has not been seen since and we are glad to say that Mr. Ballentine was not in that procession.—Bound Brook State Centre.

PASSING COMMENT.

Things that Are Not Exactly News but Just as Interesting.

Second Assistant Engineer Andrew Jennings, of the fire department, performed a feat Sunday morning that most men would not care to try. Several times the hose shook itself loose from the men that held it and went sky-larking about the street, deluging all who came in its path. On one occasion, Jennings was standing close by when the hose started twisting and squirming about the street and there was a great shout about a general scattering of the crowd. Without a moment's delay Jennings threw himself full length on the hose near the nozzle and tackled it in true football fashion. After he obtained a good hold, several of the firemen took it in hand and resumed playing the stream on the fire.

"The Soggarth," a sterling melo drama, was performed before a good-sized audience last night at Music Hall, and had it not stormed so hard there undoubtedly would have been a crowded house. The last performance of the Byron Gotham Company will be given tonight, when "Ten Thousand Miles Away," will be presented. This play as before mentioned is a sequel of events in the story of "Across the Continent," and is said to be of a more startling nature than any of the plays performed during the week. It gives full scope for the talents of the entire cast of very excellent artists comprising this organization.

William Jerome, of Jerome's Herald Square comedians, who will be seen at Music Hall next Tuesday night, in the funny farce comedy "A Jay in New York," is without doubt the most successful song writer on the American stage. His songs have been sung the world over by the leading artists of this country and Europe. One of his first hits was a little waltz song:

I'm not baby McKee from Washington, D. C.
Grandfather's hat for me has gained no fame;
I'm only a little jay that arrived in town today.
I'm a harseed but I get there just the same.

One day while eating his dinner in a New York reataurant, the waiter was a long time away after taking his order for a steak; the incident caused Mr. Jerome to write the following:

He never came back.
He never came back;
I waited an hour or more;
His face I will break
If he don't bring the steak
When we meet on the Beautiful Shore.

The exigencies of a continuous performance are many, but there are three things that are indispensable. First, a high-class, refined show, evenly excellent throughout the day. Second, the most comfortable of environments, and third, polite attention. And these are all to be found at Proctor's Twenty-third Street Theatre, New York. Drop in there any time of the day or evening one is sure to find high-class artists performing. The theatre is comfort itself and the attendants have been schooled to treat patrons with the utmost consideration. Its situation, too, is greatly to its advantage, placed as it is in the centre of the shopping district. Indeed it might almost be called the "Shopper's Rest," for no better way of resting could be found than by dropping in at Proctor's after a tiring day's shopping.

VALUE OF FRANCHISE.

of the cost of maintenance. When it comes to the county trolley coming over the same line, I do not know whether it is wise or not, but there are men who have said to me in connection with this thing, "Why John Kean has got that trolley franchise, he isn't going to spend over $250,000 for franchises between Plainfield and Elizabeth for nothing." John Kean isn't a man noted for his philanthropy to cities, especially to Plainfield. He has never done anything for the city that I know of, but he is coming to the city line, and I do not want this Council to grant franchises to spite John Kean and to keep him out of Plainfield, or to show the County Freeholders that they have no right to make any claim on that little piece of road. If you are going to make a test case make it somewhere else or wait until this thing has been thoroughly canvassed.

I am ready to do anything for the City of Plainfield that I can do honestly and fairly, but I beg of you not to grant the franchise tonight. Hold it over until you have gone to the bottom of this thing. I do not take the statement of the railroad company that if you do not let them go where they want to and when they want to they won't go anywhere. I tell you, in six months they will come to you with tears in their eyes if you don't let them do it. They are out of the city at one side and they want to go out at the other; and above all things do not grant a franchise in perpetuity.

Prices That Sell Shoes.

It takes just as much time for you to buy "shoddy" shoes as to buy good ones, and often costs you as much as you would pay for the better kinds. Then think of the wear! How about the cost then? But we buy so as to sell, and sell so as to sell you again.
See our Men's Shoes for $3.00 and $4.00.
See our Women's Shoes for $2.00 and $3.00.
Most stores will charge you 50c. to $1 more for same goods.

M. C. VanARSDALE,

REPAIRING PROPERLY DONE. 127 EAST FRONT ST.

"IT DON'T TAKE"

MUCH MONEY to buy a nice, stylish, good-wearing pair of shoes at our store. We keep that kind and "OUR" prices are cut down to the very last point. You'll hit it just right when you buy of us. Our low-priced shoes look "slick" and right up in style. You will be surprised at how good a woman's Dongola kid shoe we sell at only 98c., $1.25, $1.50, and our $2.00 and $3.00 shoes just go ahead of anything we have ever sold. Our men's working shoes at $1.25 and dress shoes at $1 50, $2 00 and the $3.00 grades are equal to the former $5.00 shoe. "J. & M." fine shoes for men $5.00.

We give no rewards, an offer of this kind is the meanest of deceptions. Our plan is to give every one a chance to try the merit of Ely's Cream Balm—the original Balm for the cure of Catarrah, Hay Fever and Cold in the Head, by mailing for 10 cents a trial size to test its curative powers. We mail the 50 cent size also and the druggist keeps it. Test it and you are sure to continue the treatment. Relief is immediate and a cure follows. Ely Brothers, 56 Warren Street, New York.

A FIFTY-THIRD ANNIVERSARY.

Mr. and Mrs. William Randolph Married Over Half a Century.

(Special to The Daily Press.)

New Market, Oct. 22.—Mr. and Mrs. William Randolph, of Piscataway township, celebrated the fifty-third anniversary of their marriage at their home yesterday afternoon and evening, and there were about thirty guests present from Dunellen, Red Bank, this place, and Plainfield. The celebration lasted from 2 o'clock in the afternoon to 9 o'clock in the evening, and during that time the happy celebrants received the heartiest congratulations of all. They also received many valuable gifts from their relatives and friends. About 6 o'clock a bountiful supper was served to the guests. Among those present from Plainfield were Mr Buckalew and family, Randolph Stelle and family.

His Teacher Said.

"He thought he needed glasses" is becoming quite a familiar expression of parents who bring their children to us for examination. This is encouraging, in, that it shows the intellectual superiority of the present teacher to the "skule master" of fifty years ago. He would have sent the child home with the message, "He couldn't say his letters, better use the gad." The "dull pupil" is often so because of weak eyes. Collier makes examinations free.

THEATRICAL REHEARSALS.

This One Was Enough to Sadden the Actors Heart.

It was a group of three. The central figure was a man of medium height who would have been almost dapper had his clothes been new and carefully worn. His head was bare on the top, but there was a thick and curling fringe of hair at the back and sides. His round face wore an expression of intense but amiable anguish. At his right stood a soberly clad woman with hat and veil; at his left, a tall, slim youth with hair parted in the middle, wearing a sawed-off, double-breasted sack coat, knife-edge trousers and tan shoes. A bundle of typewritten sheets was in the hand of each. The boss was gently expostulating with the woman.

"No—my—dear!" he said, with intense emphasis. "Not that way at all. You must put more animation into the lines. Now listen:

"'I thought he was DEAD!' see? Lots of emphasis on 'dead.' 'His death WAS published in the papers!'

"And when you say this you must suit the action to the word—so"—(here he went through the desired series of gestures)—"and step back—so. Now, when she says that" (turning to the youth) "you must put some snap into your answer. Say it like this: 'He WAS given up by the doctors,' and so on.

"And then when the Judge comes in you must start as you perceive him and look warningly at Mrs. So and So here. And before you say 'Introduce me to the Judge as your brother, that he may not suspect anything,' you must come close to her so that she could hear if you should whisper the words as you would, were you not anxious to have the whole house hear you. And when you ask for the loan of $5,000 and promise to pay it with 4 per cent. interest, you must express both pleadings and threats by your tone. Remember that you are the villain and must talk like one and act like one."

While the intruder gazed and listened, the Judge, an individual without coat or waistcoat, who was also conning a bundle of typewritten sheets, came on. He read his lines without looking up or varying once from a monotone. This, however, seemed to make no impression upon the boss, who was laboring earnestly with the youth in the sawed-off sack coat, to the end that he should make his devilish nature apparent in his speech and action. But when the soberly gowned woman read, in a distressingly Fourth Reader class voice, "It is too late to turn back now; but had I been afforded time for reflection I should have denounced you," the curves in his jolly face became positively pathetic in their show of pain.

"Oh, my dear," he groaned, "speak those lines with more spirit—'It is too late to turn back—NOW—but had I been afforded time for reflection. I should have de-NOUNCED you!'

"And remember that you must time the speech so that it will end just as you make a passionate, baffled exit."

A moment later the plainly gowned woman and the slender youth sank into their chairs, and a tall, middle-aged man wearing a long Prince Albert coat, patent leathers, and a silk hat, with a tightly rolled umbrella in his hand, but without a bundle of typewritten paper, capered up and down the floor as if tipsy, reeling off a string of drunken negro dialect as if he knew it by heart. Presently a big blonde woman, also smartly dressed, took her place at the front and sat down, rolling out a faultless imitation of a negro mammy's talk.

To these seasoned veterans, who had been saying the same things in the same way for years, the mild boss with the curly fringe of hair paid no attention whatever—they evidently needed only to be set going like cleverly made automatons to proceed until run down. But when a young woman strolled in murmuring between her set teeth, "Mammy Green, Mammy Green," the boss was again seized with agony.

"That is not the way, my child! Oh! that is not the way, at all! You should call—excitedly—so—'Mammy GREEN! Mammy GREEN!'—not loudly, but with intensity, and you should not be listless, but alert. You should express your excitement in your step, as I do now; you should know all about the story of which you are trying to tell a part, and then you'll do it better."

And so it continued for half an hour or more, till at last, an apparently satisfactory stopping place having been reached, the various members of the group not directly under the eye of the boss, and who had been talking the sort of gossip one hears behind the scenes, each drew a long breath, while one of them wondered aside to his friend if it wasn't about lunch time.

"Not on your life," replied the other. "It's time to begin all over again—that's what it is, as you'll find out in a minute."

And so it was, for the round face of the boss assumed a particularly benignant expression as he called them all to the front.

"Now, ladies and gentlemen," he declared, "we'll try that first act over again now, while it's fresh in our minds, and see if we can't do it better."

The Earth Growing Heavier.

As people grow old they usually grow stouter, and in this respect our planet is very human indeed, for the earth is growing stouter and heavier every year by some ten thousand tons.

The food on which our planet is thus fattening herself consists of meteors or shooting stars. Though we have only one great shower of shooting stars—in November—still, every day the earth is crossing the paths of meteors and catching shooting stars in her atmosphere, which acts as a net. Shooting stars are pieces of stone, varying in size from a marble to a paving-stone, revolving round the sun. The earth attracts them by her weight, and they rush towards us at a tremendous speed.

On plunging into the atmosphere they become heated by the friction they encounter, and so become white hot, and are finally driven off into gas. Every minute the earth is being subjected to this fusilade, though most of the meteors are too small to be seen by the naked eye. The gas condenses into dust and slowly sinks to the earth. At the very lowest estimate, 400 millions of meteors fall into our atmosphere every day, or over 140,000 millions a year.

The dust into which all these shooting stars are dissolved sinks to the earth, and if the dust of each meteor weighs but a single grain, this amounts in the aggregate to 22,000,000 pounds, or 10,000 tons. By this amount the earth increases every year, and as she never parts with a single grain, she is growing rapidly heavier. But large as it may seem in the mass it is really a trifle compared with the weight of the earth.

If this annual increment of meteor dust were spread evenly over the entire surface of the earth, it would form a layer less than one-hundred-millionth part of an inch in thickness. But when the twentieth century opens, our little globe will be 900,000 tons heavier than it was when the nineteenth century dawned.

The largest locomotive in the world is the Giant, of French type, on the Mallet compound articulated system, that was constructed by the Belgian State Railway Administration for the sharp gradients near Liege, having been shown at the Brussels Exhibition of last year. This engine, carried by six pairs of wheels, weighs in running order 108,000 kilos, equal to 106 tons, which weight is entirely utilized for adhesion; but the arrangement is such that each pair of wheels only loads the rails with 18,000 kilos, equal to 17¾ tons.

Animals that Don't Drink.

There are some animals which never drink; for instance, the lamas of Patagonia and certain gazelles of the Far East. A number of snakes, lizards, and other reptiles live in places devoid of water. A bat of Western America inhabits waterless plains. In parts of Lozere, France, there are herds of cows and goats which hardly ever drink, and yet produce the milk for Roquefort cheese.

An epicure says there are always seven wrong ways to eat an egg, and only one right way. We have discovered a time when there are eight wrong ways, and that is when the egg is a bad one.

Kind Party: "If I give you this penny, what will you do with it?"

Tatters (sarcastically): "I'll be honest with you, guv'nor. I'll spend it in riotous living."

Lokal-Nachrichten aus der alten Heimath.

Sachsen.

Dresden. Dieser Tage wurde das Ludwig Richter-Denkmal auf der Brühl'schen Terrasse enthüllt, zu dessen Errichtung aus allen Theilen Deutschlands Spenden eingelaufen sind.—In der hiesigen Hofkirche fand kürzlich während des Gottesdienstes, dem auch der greise König Albert beiwohnte, ein aufregender Zwischenfall statt. Während Alles andächtig der Predigt lauschte, stürzte plötzlich ein offenbar Irrsinniger auf den Altar zu, riß die Gitterthür desselben auf und brüllte: „Es gibt keinen Christus." Der Mann wurde von der Polizei in Obhut genommen, um auf seinen Geisteszustand untersucht zu werden.

Bautzen. In Pliesckowitz sind zehn Gebäude niedergebrannt.

Klingenthal. Der hier wohnhafte Droguist Ed. Müller machte in einer Broschüre Reklame für die von ihm hergestellten „Magnetopatischen Obstsäfte," denen er, nach seiner Aussage vor Gericht, den „Magnetismus" einfach durch Auflegen der Hände auf die verschlossene Flasche zuführte. Das Schöffengericht und auch das Landgericht als Berufungsinstanz verurtheilte den Droguisten wegen Anpreisung von Geheimmitteln zu 50 Mark Strafe. Das Landgericht betonte, durch derartige Anpreisungen könne man unverständige Leute leicht zum Ankauf solcher „Heilmittel" bewegen.

Leipzig. Der größte der Konsumvereine Sachsens, „Leipzig-Plagwitz und Umgegend," steigerte im letzten Berichtsjahre seinen Absatz um 951,481 Mark, das heißt auf 5,441,405 Mark, seine Mitgliederzahl um 2829, das heißt auf 16,177, den erzielten Reingewinn auf 566,966 Mark. Der Verein unterhält 25 Verkaufsstellen, eigene Mahlmühle und Bäckerei.

Pirna. Die Aktiengesellschaft Elektrizitätswerke in Dresden-Niedersedlitz hat vom sächsischen Ministerium des Innern die Genehmigung zu den Vorarbeiten für eine mit elektrischer Kraft zu betreibende Bahn von Loschwitz über Pillnitz nach Sepitz und beziehungsweise Bahnhof Pirna ertheilt bekommen. Nach Fertigstellung dieser Theilstrecke ist es nun möglich, von Dresden bis Sepitz (gegenüber von Pirna) beziehungsweise Bahnhof Pirna elektrisch fahren zu können.

Thüringische Staaten.

Arnstadt. Aus Anlaß des 25jährigen Bestehens der Gummi- und Schlauchfabrik von Lange u. Pöhler hat der Gründer der Firma und jetzige Direktor O. Pöhler ein Kapital von 5000 Mark gestiftet, dessen Zinsen für bedürftige Arbeiter der Fabrik verwendet werden sollen.

Gera. In Folge Eröffnung des Schlachthofes hierselbst haben 54 Fleischer vom fürstlichen Ministerium 70,000 Mark Schadenersatz verlangt, weil der Schlachthof die Privatschlachthäuser entwerthet habe.

Königshofen. Einen eigenthümlichen Tod fand der sechsjährige Karl Sachse. Er stürzte kopfüber in ein zur Aufnahme eines Blitzableiters gegrabenes Loch, in dem sich etwas Regenwasser angesammelt hatte, und ertrank darin.

Freie Städte.

Hamburg. Kürzlich sank im hiesigen Hafen eine Kastenschute, die mit Salpeter beladen war. Als dieselbe Tags darauf durch einen Taucher gehoben wurde, entdeckte man, daß der Schiffer nebst Frau und Kind in der Kajüte ertrunken waren.—Der Bund deutscher Frauenvereine, der gegenwärtig die deutsche Frauenbewegung und die verschiedensten Gebiete sozialer Frauenarbeit vertritt und 90 Einzelvereine mit über 60,000 Mitgliedern umfaßt, hat seine diesjährige Generalversammlung neulich hier abgehalten.

Vegesack. Der Bremer „Vulcan" hierselbst hat vom Norddeutschen Lloyd zwei transatlantische Dampfer von je circa 7000 Registertonnen Größe in Auftrag erhalten. In Folge dessen hat sich der „Vulcan" veranlaßt gesehen, behufs Erweiterung seiner Werftanlagen mit Vollhöfner Schütte in Lobbendorf wegen Landankaufs in Verbindung zu treten und soll die Sache jetzt endgiltig zum Abschlusse gebracht worden sein, indem Herr Schütte denjenigen Theil seines Grundbesitzes, so weit derselbe an der Weser belegen und der „Vulcan" denselben für seine projektirten neuen Anlagen bedarf, an letzteren verkauft hat. Mit den Erweiterungsbauten, für welche die Pläne schon vollständig entworfen, soll schon in allernächster Zeit begonnen werden.

Oldenburg.

Fissau. Das von Touristen wegen seiner schönen Aussicht über den großen Eutiner See vielbesuchte Hotel „Wilhelmshöhe" brannte bis auf den Grund nieder. Im Saale des Hotels war beim Ausbruch des Feuers ein Ball in vollem Gange, doch haben sämmtliche Theilnehmer außer dem Schrecken weiter keinen Schaden genommen.

CHAPTER XVII.

In after days, when Feodora Latimar tried to sit down quietly and recall all that had happened on the eventful night when Richard Saville appeared so unexpectedly at Speede, it was never quite clear to her how she had managed to carry out all the duties that her self-elected post as Antony's hostess had made imperative to her. She vaguely remembered going to find Mrs. Procter, and catching a glimpse of Antony dancing, his face seeming to her like a mask, so hard and white and changed was it. In a dim, misty sort of way, too, Feo recollected finding the light wrap Elizabeth had brought, and how, when she had put Mrs. Procter into the carriage, she had walked over to where Elizabeth sat in the shelter of the trees, and had put the shawl tenderly around the girl. She could not understand, in those after-days, how it was that she had done everything so quietly, so unquestioningly, so much had there been to arouse her fears and surprise, and to make her unhappy without knowing why. All that she did remember clearly was that she had stood and watched the carriage that held Elizabeth roll out of sight, with a sense of deep relief that the girl was gone. Then she remembered that she had gone back to the ball room, and had worked like a veritable slave to keep the dances going, till the people gradually departed for their homes, and at last nothing remained of the festivity but the blaze of lights and the banks and wreaths of fading flowers.

Bertha Peile, happily ignorant of any trouble, would have remained chatting a while after the guests had departed, but Feo pleaded fatigue.

"I don't know why, but I am dead tired to-night," she said frankly, "so you will forgive me, dear aunt Bertha, won't you, if I run off and get into bed? Bee and the others have already disappeared."

"My dear child, of course! You ought to be tired, Feo, you have worked so hard all night' And I am sure I am very grateful to you for having given me such a beautiful birthday! As for my boy's speech—well"—Bertha Peile laughed tenderly—"I am going to have it printed and framed and hung up in my bed room, so that I can read it every day. Good night, Feo! I suppose you have no idea where Richard is? I should like to speak to him."

"To-night?" Lady Feo said hurriedly. "Oh, don't start a confabulation with Mr. Saville to-night, dear! I am sure you are every bit as tired as I am, though you won't confess it! I am going to carry you off up-stairs with me now. Come along—no waiting! I am queen here to-night, you know, so I must be obeyed!"

Miss Peile submitted graciously to Feo's tyranny.

"But I have not said 'Good night' to Tony," she said as she reached her door.

"He will forgive you for once," Feo declared. "Now go in and go straight to bed, aunt Bertha! Remember, we have another heavy day to-morrow."

It was with a sense of deep relief that Feo saw the door close on the good creature whose happiness over the day's doings had been so complete. For herself, bed, and sleep were very far from her thoughts. Hastily seeking her room, she doffed her costly clothes and jewels as fast as her small hands would let her, and putting on a dark dressing gown, stole softly into the outside passage again. As she came up the stairs with Miss Peile, she saw nothing of Antony, and she felt convinced—she hardly knew why—that he would not be in the smoking room, or wherever he would be likely to meet Saville; so she turned at once to the room which had been Tony's own particular sanctum at Speede ever since she could remember.

She knocked softly at the door; there was no immediate response; then she tried the handle. The door [illegible] ning to beat nervously, Feo knocked again; and this time her summons was answered. and Antony opened the door. Lady Feo entered the room quickly and unceremoniously, and scrutinized the young man eagerly. Like herself, he had changed his clothes, and had on the light rough tweed suit he had worn earlier in the day, and a glance round the room showed Feo that he had been hurriedly gathering a few things together and cramming them into his dressing-bag.

"Where are you going, Tony?" she asked breathlessly; then, more anxiously, "What has happened? I know quite well something has happened. I have been so upset! Oh, what does it all mean?" She was now fairly frightened; her bright pretty face was quite colorless, and her eyes had a strained look.

Antony took both her hands and led her to a chair. Overwhelmed, well-nigh crushed as he was by his present trouble—which was much greater than anything he had experienced in the past—he could not look upon Feo's pained pale face and remain unmoved.

"Why are you not in bed, dear?" he asked her tenderly, with the same husky note in his voice that had come when he had first spoken to his enemy out under the trees. "I did not want you to be troubled to-night, Feo, I thought I would—"

Lady Feo interrupted him sharply.

"I know quite well what you intended to do, Tony," she said, trying valiantly not to break down or give way to tears. "I can see plainly that you meant to creep quietly out of the house this morning and never let me know anything till you were gone. About the most unfair thing you could have done, and you know it!"

Lady Feo sat with her hands clenched in her lap, looking at him beseechingly. "Tony, you are going to tell me everything at last—everything, dear. You cannot run away from me now. There will not be a train for ever so long, so you may as well make up your mind to face the situation. Sit down, dear," she said more gently—"sit down and let me know your trouble—there is no one who can share it better than I can, Tony. I see now only too well that you have some dreadful trouble; I must have been a fool not to have seen it long ago" She had held out her hands to him. "Don't keep me in suspense—don't tell me half-truths, Tony, darling! I can't bear such treatment to-night. I know much already. I met Mr. Saville a little while ago, and his voice and manner alone would have warned me that something had happened between you, even if your face did not tell me that now as clearly as any words!"

Antony took her hands and caressed them involuntarily.

"Poor little Feo," he said gently. "I would have given half my life to spare you this unhappiness, dear. I wish you had not come, Feo!" he went on wearily. "I think it would have been less bitter for you to learn through a letter what you must now hear by word of mouth."

"You make a great mistake, Tony!" Lady Feo returned, with something of her old snappishness. "I know you all regard me as a sort of baby; but I believe I am quite as well able to meet troubles, and to bear them, too, as anyone else. Speak out quite plainly. I want to know the worst; for," added Feo shrewdly, "it very often happens that a man's worst is easily made better when it comes to be examined and handled by a woman."

Antony smiled sadly. Dropping her hands, he seated himself in a chair, supporting his head with his hand.

"I should be glad indeed if I could think it possible that your woman's wit could in any way lighten my trouble, Feo," he said.

Lady Feo looked at him for a moment in silence.

"Is it a case of serious trouble, Tony?" she asked; then—"very serious, dear?"

Antony merely nodded his head. Feo drew her breath quickly.

"There—there is—disgrace?" she queried, and her voice had not its usual determined ring.

He did not answer immediately, and her heart seemed to stand still; but his words, when they came, relieved her somewhat.

"There is generally some disgrace, Feo dear, attaching to an act of mad folly—folly of a social and moral description," Antony said very slowly.

His hand was over his face now—Lady Feo could not see it. She bent forward eagerly.

"Such as—" The words were almost inaudible.

Antony's answer came very deliberately.

"Such as my unfortunate marriage!"

Feo never moved. If she had received a shock, she did not let him see it; she sat looking at him very calmly, and in a moment she spoke again.

"How long have you been married, Tony, dear?" she asked softly.

Sir Antony had shifted his position a little; his eyes had wandered from her, and were now resting upon a delicate water color portrait of his dead mother that was hanging on the wall beside his bed.

"About a year and a half," he said simply.

Feo was knitting her brows.

"Where did the marriage take place? Where"—there was a slight break in her voice—"where is your wife now, Tony?"

"She is in New York—she lives there. She is perfectly happy, I am told. She has plenty of money; Dick arranged everything. So long as she is paid her income, she will never spoke mechanically, as if he were repeating a lesson that he had learned by heart.

"She is English, then?" Lady Feo questioned.

He bent his head.

"And you married her in London?"

"I married her in New York," Antony said, still in the same dull strangely-level voice.

Feo folded her arms and sat looking at the young man with an expression of deepest, truest love in her eyes—love greater than she had ever felt for him before. All the pent-up misery, all the meaning of the suffering he had been enduring during the past weeks, seemed to pass from him to her. The terseness of his words, the sound of his voice, revealed to her only too clearly the mental anguish he had hidden so well.

Antony seemed to awaken suddenly to the knowledge of her distress; he bent forward and took her hands again. She was such a strange, pale, sad image of the usual sunny Feo.

"Don't think about it too much—don't let it grieve you, Feo! Look upon it all as a mistake," he said. "I am not the first man who has made a mistake, you know."

Feo bent her head and kissed his hand.

"If you don't mind, darling, I should like to know all there is to know, now that the secrecy is ended. Remember," Feo said, not very steadily, "I am going to stand by you, no matter what foolish thing you may have done; but I must know all, Tony, and I must know it now!" Then, before he could speak, she began questioning again. "Who was this woman you married? Where did you meet her? You can speak quite frankly to me, you know, dearest!"

Antony's face flushed for a moment; he withdrew his hands from hers, and, rising, restlessly walked to and fro the length of the big room.

"I am going to give you a lot of pain, Feo," he said abruptly, as he came to a stand-still in front of his writing table, and, leaning against it, folded his arms; "but you are right. You ought to know everything now, since you know so much already; and I prefer that you should hear it from me rather than from other lips. I was forestalled to-night in the clearest, most terrible duty I have ever had set before me. Dick must never act in that way again. To-morrow, aunt Bertha, Gregory, my friends, my servants, the whole world shall know the truth. I can only despise myself now for having been so weak as to allow myself to be pressed into the false position I have held ever since I returned to England. I am not going to excuse myself, Feo. I only want you to know how I have hated this acting of a living lie, and what it has cost me to sustain it!"

Feo leaned forward eagerly.

"As if it were necessary to tell me that!" she said. Many questions trembled on her lips, but she resolutely kept them back; she would wait till he had said all he had to say.

Antony again began pacing to and fro, his arms still folded across his breast.

"You want to know the story of my marriage, Feo. Here is. Just before I left England I had drifted—how, I can hardly tell you—into a fast theatrical set in London. There are many things in life which do not—Heaven be praised!—come to the knowledge of women like you; so you could not understand, if I were to try to tell you ever so clearly, the sort of folly—reckless, stupid, vulgar folly—that boys, even the nicest of them, can be capable of committing in certain circumstances. I am very much afraid I have been as big a fool as most; and yet"—he passed his hand over his eyes—"and yet somehow I never went altogether with the rest—I never really cared for all the fellows I met. I am old-fashioned enough to cherish a certain amount of illusion, and I was a little behind the times, Feo. They used to chaff me unmercifully—I rather fancy they called me a prig behind my back; but they were devoted to me all the same. You see I was so very rich!"

There was irony as well as deep pathos in Antony's voice. The little woman sitting affectionately watching him here put one question to him—pertinently, curtly.

"And Mr. Saville—what place had he in this particular set, Tony? Surely—" She paused.

Antony's brows contracted.

"Dick has always been a man of the world," he answered evasively; "he can adapt himself to any surroundings."

"And he approved of these men? He did not interfere with you, Tony?"

"Dick has never openly interfered with me but twice in my life," Antony Peile said slowly. "The first time was just before my marriage; the second was to-night."

Feo said nothing—her heart was beating wildly. Up to now she had heard nithing but the one bare important fact of of Tony's marriage—no full description or explanation had been given her, yet she felt suddenly oppressed with the conviction that in the story she was about to hear traces of double dealing, if not of positive treachery, must be brought to light. It was her antagonism to, her old natural doubt of, Saville that prompted this feeling, an old distrust, increased by the brief conversation with him out on the lawn in the moonlight. A mask seemed to have fallen from his face then, and his snarling words now came back to her memory pregnant with a new meaning. She followed up Sir Antony's last speech quickly.

Saville's wish and advice?" she asked.

Antony paused once more by the writing table.

"Ostensibly," he said, and there was a note in his voice that seemed to tell of some deep bitter resentment, some sudden sense of injury, some overwhelming doubt. "At all events, Dick went through the form of setting before me all the folly and misery which such a marriage must entail, and yet—" He broke off. "How hard it is to doubt, Feo!" he said passionately. "I have never doubted him, never questioned his motives, as you know, till to-night; and now—well it seems strange to me that I could have been so blind—that I could have seen things so differently from what they were!" He grew quieter again after that one outburst of passion; his voice had the old weary tone in it. "It was in those old foolish days I have just been speaking about that she first came into my life, Feo. She was a beautiful woman—a girl almost—a singer in the chorus at one of the big theatres. It was the fashion in that silly butterfly world into which I had drifted to admire her without restraint. I followed the fashion with all the rest. I admired her in a way I can hardly describe," he continued. "I was bewitched, infatuated by her beauty. I had so much illusion about her, too, Feo. She is one of those strangely ethereal-looking women one sees occasionally in pictures—seldom in real life. Through Dick I knew, or supposed I knew, all there was to know about her, and the story of her poverty and struggle for existence used to make my heart ache. I longed to take her away from the odious world in which she had to spend her life. I used to haunt the theatre—I was her shadow; yet all through the time of this infatuation, strange as it may seem, I never once met her—I never once exchanged a single word with her. I know it will be almost too hard to believe it, Feo, but curiously enough I always had a sort of vague desire not to know her. When I heard of her being at one of the many theatrical and Bohemian parties that were being perpetually arranged, it used to pain me; she seemed to me then so different from the rest—to stand so far apart from all the women with whom she associated. As you can easily imagine, I dare say," Antony said, continuing his slow walk, "my extravagant admiration for Violet Littleton—that was her name—was very quickly discovered and discussed. Dick, I believe did his best to put an end to the gossip; but nothing would stop foolish people from talking, and naturally I became, quite innocently, though, the centre figure of a scandal. You have often wondered, Feo," the young man said, his manner changing abruptly, "what made Dick and myself start off so suddenly on our long-planned tour abroad. It was Dick's doing, not mine, and it arose from a quarrel I had with a man one night at a supper party given at Dick's rooms, in which I repudiated some words about Miss Littleton's character, and which very nearly ended in blows. I can't tell you how the matter came about, but it was a sort of joke, I believe, with several of these men—and, looking back, I see Dick was one of them—perpetually to start some sneering comments about the actions and reputation of this woman, about whom I knew nothing, remember, but for whom I had conceived an extraordinary, a quixotic, a wholly romantic admiration."

Antony walked to and fro for some minutes in silence. Feo did not attempt to offer any comment. She could not have found words if she had tried to speak—besides, she preferred to let him tell everything as it appeared best to him. After a while he resumed:

"Dick was furious with me over that quarrel. I remember he rated me for hours after all the others had gone; he told me I was something more than an ordinary fool, and that, if I did not repent my share of that night's work, he would be content to write himself down an ass for the rest of his life! He had no occasion to do anything of the sort," Antony said, his voice very dry, very bitter. "The next day proved how clever a prophet he was. Of course, by my open defense of this woman, I had succeeded in creating the very impression about her I had wished to destroy. I was, so I heard through Dick, regarded everywhere as Miss Littleton's chosen champion. Our names were linked together irrevocably. Dick's one idea was to get me out of London, out of England, as quickly as possible; but, before he could manage it, something happened—something that proved to the uttermost his wisdom and my folly. The woman whom I had defended so rashly came to me, Feo." He stopped in his walk. "How right my instinct had been against closer acquaintance with her. She had not spoken one word before I realized that my infatuation had been a madness—a wild, preposterous dream—that she had neither beauty, mind nor heart—that all the hard sharp things I had heard of her were, alas, only too true! You will not want me to tell you all that passed. It was, I believe, a very ordinary sort of scene; but it was new to me—it bewildered me; it made me utterly wretched! The only clear thing to me in the matter was that I had apparently done her a great injury. For that wrong I offered her the only reparation that seemed to me possible. I proposed to make her my wife, Feo." He sat down again in the chair close beside his cousin. "I could never tell you how miserably

A GUERILLA FIGHT.

Kentucky—called a neutral State—was a rich field for guerillas, irregular and independent bands, whose sympathies were chiefly with the Confederates. They were not averse, however, to robbing and murdering friends and foes alike, if thereby gain would accrue to them.

I had seen guerillas in prisons, unarmed, but in their ragged, dirty clothes and by their slouchy gait they did not suggest sons of Mars.

It was quite another thing to meet them armed, especially when we were comparatively helpless. One day in the spring of the last year of the war, many officers, the most with new uniforms, filled a long train at Louisville which was to take them to Nashville. It was a jolly ride all the way to Cave City. Several of us had planned to visit the Mammoth Cave, but Union officers at the above place dissuaded us from attempting the trip, since guerillas infested the region about.

It was already night as we left Cave City. We had proceeded five miles when we had a double sensation—that of rolling down an embankment in the cars and hearing bullets whiz by our heads from two directions. The guerillas had taken the spikes from the sleepers, and as the train rounded a sharp curve the rails separated and the cars were wrecked.

The "battle" went on greatly to our disadvantage, confined as we were, and unable to maintain an upright position. The shooting on both sides for a time was very lively. The bullets broke the glass, penetrated the wood of the cars, and produced great confusion and called forth terrific shrieks from some women on board. It was, after a while, deemed best, in view of the unequal struggle, to surrender the train, and then began a systematic robbery of all the passengers, including several officers of high rank. The guerillas were fierce looking fellows, armed as they were to the teeth, and indulged, as they made the search, in language more forceful than elegant. It was decidedly unpleasant to feel the cold steel of a revolver on one's forehead while one's pockets were rifled.

After the first examination, as thoroughly made as if done by Custom House officials, we were marched into the woods near by, where we were again relieved still more of material weights, unfitting us for rapid marches.

Union soldiers in block houses some distance away, having heard shots, went forth to reconnoitre. The sentinels of the guerillas rushed in and announced danger. The band, laden with spoils, departed without ceremony, leaving us to care as best we could for the wounded.

No surgeon being present, some of the officers, knowing that I had attended a few medical lectures in Philadelphia and had assisted at a few operations, asked me to do what I could for the sufferers.

Fortunately I had a small "kit," consisting of surgeon's instruments—plaster, lint, bandages and the like—which I thought would prove useful, and now they were brought into requisition.

A colored man named Forbish, who had been a nurse in a hospital, volunteered to assist. We set a broken shoulder, extracted several balls, and did other work in a medical line. We were kept busy until morning, when relief came to us. The track was quickly repaired, cars replaced the wrecked ones, and during the forenoon we were once more on our way to Nashville, where the writer for a brief moment was hailed as a hero.

I remember when we were about to start from the battle ground, a colored boy, an officer's servant, who was supposed to have been killed, suddenly appeared, and showing his white teeth and the whites of his eyes said with great delight,—

"Ise mighty lucky. Dem guerillas didn't cotch me and get my money. I jist hid behind a log over dar and I stayed dar all night. Ise mighty lucky."

CYCLING COMMENT

Roy T. Phillips, of Madison avenue, has returned after spending several weeks wheeling in the southern States.

MR. IVINS ON THE TROLLEY.

And Incidentally The Press is Taken to Task for Its Position.

To the Editor of The Daily Press:—I thank your "trolley editor" very much for his criticism of my last communication, and whether or not I should happen to be a "trolley promoter," it certainly would not change my opinion upon the Bergen-Kean trolley scheme and the attitude you allow your paper to assume toward it.

Has it never occurred to you that a newspaper's mission should be primarily to raise the standard of citizenship; to create a demand for honest legislation, and try to mould public opinion justly in favor of the best interest at stake for the city and county in all public and local improvements?

Mr. Editor, you are a man who has always had the confidence and respect of our citizens—your paper has generally taken the position of advocating all honest and legitimate questions and policies affecting our city and county. Many of our best citizens, and particularly the taxpayers, have reason to believe, and it is alleged that a large number of the trolley items printed in The Daily Press are saturated with ideas originating in the fertile brain of Mr. Bergen. The articles certainly do not sound as coming from you. Mr. Bergen's figure of speech on county trolley matters is so familiar to the people that they easily recognize his ideas in print. Do you honestly believe that the cities and towns on the line of the county trolley will be financially benefited? If you do, what is the amount? As I asked you before, how many miles of streets are to be macadamized at the expense of the company? Does the company agree to any conditions that are demanded from our local company? If you will take the pains to look carefully into the county trolley monstrosity, you will be convinced, I think, that it is a scheme of a magnitude that is appalling, and that it is only the beginning of other schemes in the county that are likely to be promulgated by the grace of our Board of Freeholders. But assuming that Mr. Kean's $250,000 will pay for the whole improvement, is the county any better off? It seems to me that if the franchise is worth $250,000 it would be better business for the Freeholders to give Kean the county road as it is and take the money to repair bridges, repair and build other roads and reduce the county debt, that the farmers might reap some of the benefits.

You will find that when Mr. Kean gets into Plainfield with his trolley scheme it will prove a good second to his water company; and while he may possess all the shrewdness of the "successful business man" that you claim, he seems to have been slow in not having Mr. Bergen get a bill through the Legislature to make the taxpayers pay the cost of putting in his water system. Plainfield has been a football long enough for the Elizabeth politicians, and on election day I hope our citizens will give any and all candidates that are smirched with the county trolley scheme, a positive rebuke at the polls.

I trust you will publish this letter at an early date. A little discussion in the papers is beneficial, in that it may arouse the public to look into a matter of this kind that is bound to open their pocketbooks.

Yours truly,
D. C. Ivins.

—Rev. George Bowers will lead the East Third Street mission meeting tomorrow evening.

EFFECT OF CHURCH SPIRES.

Religion Not the Prevailing Element in Sapphira.

Look down from the rocky crest of Mount Sapphira and ask yourself why the city looks so singularly flat and thickset. Is it because there are no trees, or, at any rate, none that rise above the second story window sills? Perhaps. Or is it because the houses are so much of a size? Possibly. But there is a better explanation than either. It is because there are no church spires. Churches there are, but you must have sharp eyes to find them. They are little; they are insignificant; they are monuments of a disgraced and unpopular cause. Says Broncho Billy, "Look at them, darned, contemptible churches, all-same shacks! I could buy out any three of 'em!" Out of 10,000 people only 1,500 Protestant churchgoers! Sapphira is a peculiar town, too, for in Sapphira there are classes and no masses, unless you call the Chinese merchants, mechanics and laundrymen masses. It is not the old problem of reaching the masses. It is the entirely new problem of reaches the classes. Cultured, law-abiding, progressive, Sapphira has little toleration for religion The tiny congregations in the tiny churches are made up mainly of women; a Sapphira church is a "lady chapel." A Montana business man objects to walking on the same side of the street with a church. There is still more truth than fiction in the old saying that 'west of Bismarck there is no Sunday, and west of Miles City no God."—Atlantic Monthly.

Joking With the Queen.

There is said to be only one man who has ever dared to make a joke in the presence of the Queen. This is Canon Teignmouth-Shore, at one time governor to the children of the Prince of Wales, and a splendid type of Irish humorist. He was discussing with Her Majesty the question why it was that shoemakers were supposed to be so advanced in their heterodoxy and in the want of faith in futurity. "Why, ma'am," quietly remarked the audacious Canon, "one could hardly expect a shoemaker to believe in the immortality of the sole (soul)!" Her Majesty enjoyed the joke and laughed very heartily over it.—New York Herald.

WESTFIELD WANTS CODDING FOR SENATOR.

Formidable Rival for E. R. Ackerman, of Plainfield.

JUDGE CROSS STILL IN IT.

ELIZABETH HAS HAD HER SHARE THIS YEAR.

Former-Assemblyman C. N. Codding Denies Statement That He Would Not Accept Senatorial Nomination — His Friends are Active—So are Plainfield G. O. P. Men—Ackerman a Strong Candidate

The G. O. P. county convention in Union county is less than a week off, and the interest in the contest for the different nominations grows apace. For some unexplained reason, the county executive committee of the Republican party placed the date for the convention very close to that of election. In consequence, the county campaign will be short and it ought to be exciting.

The State Senator and three Assemblymen are the principal ones to be chosen at the coming election as far as the county is concerned. Plainfield is practically assured of one Assemblyman in Roger F. Murray, who by the political etiquette of the conventions is entitled to renomination if he wants it. Now Mr. Murray has not said that he does not want the nomination which is considered substantially the same as saying that he does. The other two Assemblymen, George A. Squire and Robert G. Houston, of Elizabeth, being willing to try it again for another term will probably mean their renomination without opposition. That will mean that the Republican party in Union county has no new offices to fill in that direction the nominees being fixed upon already.

For the Senatorial nomination will come the big fight. Early in the campaign The Daily Press told of the wish of the friends of Judge Cross, of Elizabeth, to see him secure the nomination. The Press also told of the feeling throughout the county and in even Elizabeth itself that that part of the county had received its share of the plums for the present. Then the friends of "Bob" Houston want the office to go elsewhere so that next year they can ask for the Shrievalty nomination for Houston with a good prospect of getting it.

The campaign of the friends of Ernest R. Ackerman of this city has been a strong one and they have been using every influence to secure for him the nomination. Plainfield considers that she is entitled to it and advances Mr. Ackerman as the favorite son of the community.

Of late, there have been rumors to the effect that Charles N. Codding, of Westfield, chairman of the county executive committee, was in the field for it. Mr. Codding was in the Assembly for two years and has since been a hard worker for the interests of the party in the country without recognition other than the leadership of the county committee.

Following the rumor that Mr. Codding was in the race, there came another that he had positively declined to accept it under any circumstances. The latter has been proven untrue. Mr. Codding told a personal friend that he had made no such statement. While he has not come forward and declared his intentions, his friends are busy advocating him as a rival of Mr. Ackerman.

There is more behind the contest between the two men than appears on the surface. For many years, Elizabeth practically gobbled up everything in the county worth having. Plainfield was among the first to demand recognition and, supported by the other townships, she succeeded in getting something. Now Plainfield has fared better in the distribution of political plums of late than other places, notably Westfield. That town considers that she is entitled to something this year. A nominee for the Assembly would have just suited the Westfielders but that could not be. As Plainfield gets an Assemblyman, there was a howl from that district when the name of Mr. Ackerman was mentioned. Now the Westfield Republicans have decided to push their fellow-townsman and defeat the Plainfielder in the race if possible.

Mr. Ackerman's standing on the excise question is hoped by the Westfielders to give them the support of many of the Elizabeth delegation. It may be, however, that the friends of "Bob" Houston will be able to keep their men pretty well in line for Mr. Ackerman if the promise of support for their candidate for sheriff next

GREAT SECRET IN THE LIVING OF WILLIAMS.

The Once Alleged Dead Man's Mother Tells Her Story.

SAYS NO ATTEMPT AT FRAUD

BUT THE FAMILY HAD REASONS FOR NOT INFORMING THE PUBLIC.

What Those Reasons are Mrs. Williams Declines to Say—She Claims That it Was Harry Who Instructed Her to Make it Known That He Was Alive and to Return the Insurance Money to the Company.

Mrs. Sarah E. Williams, mother of Harry B. Williams, who is now known to be alive instead of being drowned by falling overboard from the steamer "Jane Englis," writes the following "inside facts" to The Daily Press:

To the Editor of The Daily Press:—I wish to state to the public through the medium of your paper, that the rumor concerning my son, Harry B. Williams, who was reported to have been drowned December 8th, 1897, are, in the main, unfounded. I received a letter from him after his reported death stating that he was alive, and directing me not to take any insurance or to retain the same in case I had taken it, and directing me not to let any one know he was alive or give publicity of the affair for a reason entirely apart from the insurance.

Previous to this Walter C. Williams, my husband, had gone to Seattle to take a position as engineer on a steamer which was chartered to run up the Yukon river. He had been looking after such a position for over a year. My son, Walter Gordon, had business in the west. He had been advised by leading physicians at this time to go away and take a rest and had been so advised for over two years. The shock of the accident had been terrible to his naturally weak nerves, and his office, in which his brother had recently begun the study of law, became unbearable through its associations.

After receiving the above-mentioned letter from my son, I should have written Mr. Marsh immediately, but on the contrary decided to follow the instructions in the letter and tell no one.

Mr. Williams had assigned his right in the insurance to me, so I knew that I alone could collect it and as the company had refused payment I did not see the necessity for making that matter public. Finally after hearing so much scandal, I decided that a formal renunciation of our claims would be best, and wrote to Mr. Williams to write one to Mr. Marsh.

He did so but before the letter was received the matter was settled by the company to my great surprise and regret.

I felt that we were all now a party to fraud, but after the scandal which had been afloat, it was some time before I could decide what course to pursue, but finally wrote Mr. Williams and my son, W. Gordon Williams, that Harry was alive and that I had had a letter from him. They at once directed me to state the case fully to Mr. Marsh and take his advice which I have since done and on that same day Mr. Marsh communicated with the insurance company and was directed by them to take the legal steps necessary to have the administrator refund the money.

In conclusion, we all desire the money refunded, and will so state when the case comes up for trial. The insinuations made by enemies of my family to the effect that we tried to swindle an insurance company are unfounded and malicious, as, if we had wanted to do so, we certainly had the opportunity.

Patent for Tree Guards.

A patent was granted to John E. Flammer, of Warrenville, on October 20th, for an improvement on tree guards. His invention is a tree guard that can be adjusted to any tree, without regard to shape or size, and it is so arranged that it can be easily expanded as the tree grows. It is also provided with intermediate pickets that appear and fill up the space as the guard is enlarged. The patent was obtained through L. W. Serrell & Son, of this city.

WOULD RATHER DIE THAN TO BE BLIND

Charles Brassler Cut His Throat With a Butcher Knife.

HIS EYESIGHT WAS FAILING.

A FINELY EDUCATED MAN AND A NEWSPAPER WRITER.

Found By His Wife Lying in a Pool of His Own Blood in His Bedroom Last Night—He Had Been Morose of Late on Account of His Eyesight Failing—Coroner Gave a Burial Permit.

(Special to The Daily Press.)

Bound Brook, Oct. 24—Chas. Brassler, aged 69 years, a well educated German, living at Adamsville, between this place and Somerville, committed suicide last night between 9 and 10 o'clock by cutting his throat to a considerable depth, severing the windpipe. The cause assigned for the deed is that Brassler had of late been losing his eyesight and this made him despondent.

He was found in his room by his wife. He was lying partially on the bed and partially on the floor, while there was considerable blood scattered about. Close by was a large butcher knife, covered with blood, which had been used by Brassler. Dr. C. R. P. Fisher, of this place, was called first and found the body almost cold. It was thought that Brassler had been dead about one hour. Later Coroner Stillwell was called and after an examination gave a burial certificate.

For a short time past Brassler had been acting queerly and his mind did not appear to be right. He was morose and did not act like himself. All of these actions were noticed by his wife, but still she thought little of it.

Mr. Brassler was a contributor to several New York publications, among which is the Jeweler's Circular Publishing Company. He has two sons, Charles A. and Otto, of New York, both of whom are also writers. The family resided on a farm, and Mr. Brassler spent his time in writing and doing odd jobs about his place. His great fear of becoming totally blind seems to have been the cause for committing suicide.

COSTLY FARE HE PA'D.

Tried to Steal a Ride on a Train and His Foot Crushed.

Last Saturday night at Fanwood Geanto Ermo, an Italian, aged 27 years, a resident of Graceland, fell from a coal train which he was trying to jump, and his right foot was badly crushed. Ermo was trying to reach home and having no money, thought he could steal a ride.

He was brought to Muhlenberg Hospital yesterday morning about 8 o'clock, and it was found necessary to amputate three toes. It is thought that the rest of the foot can be saved. Shortly after the accident happened a telephone message was received at the hospital asking if they would receive him, and if they would have the ambulance meet the 1 a. m. train. The ambulance was at the North Avenue station, but the man did not come on the train. He was brought yesterday to the hospital in a beer wagon. Ermo is married and has a family.

CANDY AND CAKE SALE.

Junior Endeavorers Help Raise Funds for Trinity Church.

Anxious to do their part towards the sinking fund of the church, the members of the Junior Christian Endeavor Society of Trinity Reformed church held a candy and cake sale Saturday afternoon in the lecture room of the church.

The little folks presided over the tables and showed great delight in the responsibility reposed in them. The sale lasted from 2 o'clock until 5, and was well patronized.

At the candy table were Morris Brokaw, Ada VanDoren, Lida Wyman, Bessie Bond and Alice Pugh. Those at the cake table were Ida May Tier, Bessie Beighton and Lena Bohan. Mrs. Cornelius Schenck was present and kept a watch over the tables.

The Juniors cleared between $19 and $20 in profits from the sale.

Settled Out of Court.

The case in tort of William Mount against George MacLaughlan, for damages, will not come to trial, as the matter has been settled out of court. Mount lives in Bound Brook and claims that MacLaughlan collided with him one night last August when they were both riding their bicycles on South avenue near Netherwood. Mount sued for $19.50 which he says the repairs on the wheel cost him. It is understood that the settlement was for the entire sum.

TO THE CITIZENS.

To the Citizens of Plainfield:—

In the control and ownership of the public thoroughfares of the city of Plainfield you are the possessors of rights the use of which to the Plainfield Street Railway Company constitutes an asset that is inestimable in value to them.

At the present time the Plainfield Street Railway Company, which is owned and controlled by capitalists who have no interest in the city of Plainfield further than what the natural advantages of the town may offer to them for business and speculative purposes, is making every effort to secure from the Common Council, which is but your representative in an official capacity, a franchise giving to them the perpetual right to use these streets for private enterprise. The benefits that these capitalists propose to give to Plainfield for this right are totally inadequate in view of the values that they will secure if their plans work as they hope

They ask for a franchise in perpetuity that will never allow, after it is once in effect, an honest readjustment to conditions that may prevail in years hence, and that, in the course of modern invention and improvement in electrical appliances, may and probably will be totally unfair in a few years to the city from the present point of view. And even at this very time and under the prevailing conditions they are asking for great rights that a fair return in benefits is not proposed.

IT WOULD BE A GREAT PUBLIC WRONG for the Common Council to grant the proposed franchise under the terms of the ordinance now pending, and a public hearing on which is to be held this evening. It is the duty of every citizen who has the welfare of the city at heart to attend this hearing tonight and if not by voice then by presence to enter a vigorous protest against the granting of the franchise under the present proposed terms.

Citizens, do not believe the statement of the Plainfield Street Railway Company that if they are not granted the franchise as now proposed they will abandon the East Second street line for some other route into Plainfield. Even if they should, as a matter of temporary policy, make it appear that they will carry out this threat, it would be a worthless one unless they were sure that they would find the North Plainfield officials pliable to their interests. The positive statements made by Mayor Wilson, of North Plainfield, the same as held by many other officials in the borough, that if the trolley company comes into the borough they will have to pay well for it, shows that the capitalists are only "bluffing."

At any rate there is not the slightest danger of the street railway company abandoning the East Second street route unless they can secure particularly advantageous terms from the borough. The borough can be depended to protect their rights in the same manner as public opinion is demanding the Common Council to do in Plainfield. Plainfield need have no fear that they will be permanently deprived of an eastern extension through any duplicity or counterdealing of the borough

The temporary delay that would come to the trolley extension in the eastern section of the city if the present ordinance is rejected and the negotiations resumed for better and more honest terms for the people, does not mean that the street railway will not go through the proposed territory. It is imperative to the well-laid plans of the trolley capitalists that they secure this route, and rather than have their through line balked by this pivotal point they will eventually concede what is honest and right to the people.

If the Plainfield Street Railway Company does not, however, decide to adopt new terms, it is certain that there are others who will step in and buy up the franchise at the terms to be made with a view of rights of the people, and that the street railway will surely be built through the eastern section of the city.

It is the duty of every good citizen to attend the hearing at the Common Council chamber tonight at 8 o'clock and urge the Common Council to refuse the petition of the Plainfield Street Railway Company.

STOLEN WHEEL FOUND.

FRANK DENCKLAU'S BICYCLE CAPTURED IN NEW BRUNSWICK.

Colored Man Tried to Sell it at Pollard's Repair Shop—Escaped Policeman and Caught by Witt—Was Sent to Jail.

Two weeks ago Sunday, Frank Dencklau's Eldridge wheel disappeared. There was no clue to the thief. Dencklau thought that the wheel was gone forever. Saturday afternoon, there came a message that a wheel answering the description of his had been found in New Brunswick. The colored man in whose possession it was found could not account for it.

Saturday afternoon, a colored man went to Myron Pollard's repair shop in New Brunswick and wanted to sell a wheel. The preprietor was suspicious and told Policeman Allen. Allen teld the colored man he knew of a purchaser and led him to the station house. There the stranger threw down the wheel and bolted. The officer pursued.

The stranger was increasing his lead when a man named Witt put out his foot and tripped the fleeing negro.

WRECK ON THE CENTRAL.

SIXTEEN COAL CARS PILED UP ON TOP OF ONE ANOTHER.

Train Broke in Two and When the Front End Stopped the Rear Cars Crashed Into It With Very Disastrous Results.

(Special to The Daily Press.)

Dunellen, Oct. 24—Sixteen empty coal cars, piled one on top of another, delayed travel on the Central Railroad for a while yesterday afternoon. All the tracks were blocked except No. 3, the outside eastbound track, but after some hard work by the wrecking crew the tracks were cleared and traffic resumed.

The accident occurred shortly after noon. A train of empty coal cars was passing the station going west. Somewhere near the depot the train broke in two. The engineer was not aware of it but kept on until he came to the tanks, where he slowed up to take in water.

By this time that portion of the train which had broken loose had begun to slow up, and several feet separated that part from the train ahead. When the engineer slowed up, the rear train came up and crashed

HE NOW AGREES WITH THE DAILY PRESS.

A Representative Citizen Writes on Trolley Franchise.

VIEWS HAVE BEEN CHANGED

CHARLES S. SMINCK LOOKS AT IT IN A PRACTICABLE MANNER.

When the Agitation was First Started for Better Terms He was Among Those Who Thought it Against the Best Interests of the City, but After Investigation He Finds Company Wants Too Much.

Charles S. Sminck, of 838 East Front street, is one of the representative citizens in the eastern end of the city. Mr. Sminck is one of those who would appreciate the advantages of a trolley road running through that section of the city, and when The Daily Press first commenced agitating the subject of securing better terms from the capitalists in return for the franchise it was proposed to grant, Mr. Sminck, like many others, looked upon such an action as inimicable to the interests of the section of which he is a resident. For the moment Mr. Sminck did not look further into the value of the franchise to the city than the immediate transit facilities it was to afford himself and his neighbors, but since the agitation was first commenced Mr. Sminck has taken the pains to look into the matter a little further and today he frankly confesses that he is a convert to the attitude assumed by The Daily Press. Mr Sminck writes as follows:

To the Editor of The Daily Press:—The probable effect of a trolley line on East Second street will be the making of East Front street one of the finest residental streets in the charming city of Plainfield. A trolley line on East Second street will make valuable all the property in the eastern section of the city. It will increase the assessed valuations and directly and indirectly benefit the city of Plainfield and put money in the treasury.

The granting of a perpetual franchise on East Second street to the trolley people (alien to Plainfield) will complete the line of a through system of electric railroad and would not be giving something for the exclusive enjoyment of the local Plainfield company. It would be giving away forever the rights of the people to a foreign corporation.

Trace the line of the trolley westward and you will find that it goes to Dunellen, to Lincoln, to Bound Brook, to New Brunswick and Somerville and will finally reach Philadelphia and its eastern terminus will ultimately be Jersey City. Is this not a through line?

As a resident of East Front street I am very anxious to see a franchise granted but not without the interests of the entire city being thoroughly guarded and protected now and in the future.

I was in favor of the granting of the franchise under the proposed contract, but I now earnestly advocate giving the right under limitations such as a term of ten or twenty years, under the proposed contract, with the privilege of a renewal under different financial arrangements to be determined by a commission. This proposition may favor the electric railroad people because the enterprise may not be as profitable to them as it now seems, unlooked for competition may cut them right out. Suppose the Central Railroad should adopt an electrical system! What then? It is possible because the science of electric railroading is in its infancy.

Let the trolley people be guided by common-sense and business judgment and the franchise will probably be granted tonight,

Yours truly,
Charles S. Sminck.

LECTURE ON LIQUID AIR.

Wonderful Properties of New Science to be Demonstrated to Westfielders.

Thursday evening at the Westfield Club Hall, Westfield, W. H. Meadowcroft, of the Edison General Electric Company, will conduct an entertainment, under the auspices of the Public Library Association, consisting of a large number of experiments, with explanatory lecture, illustrating the wonderful properties of liquid air.

Seats are now on sale at Dorball's drug store, Westfield, and there are many Plainfielders who will probably take advantage of this opportunity so close at hand to witness the exhibition.

Oscar Still at the Hospital.

Oscar Vaughn, of the borough, is still at the hospital, and seems to be feeling a great deal better. He will probably be discharged very soon.

Boardman Drake, of South Jersey, is visiting his father in the borough.

$3,200 IN PROFITS AT THE CATHOLIC FAIR.

Most Successful Event Ever Held in St. Mary's Parish.

FLAG CONTEST MADE $936.94

T. A. B. SOCIETY LED THE OTHER BY RAISING $448.58.

Father Westman is Declared the Most Popular Curate—Candidate Crane Won the Cane Over Voorhees—Few Articles That Were Not Sold—Prizes Will be Awarded to Winners at Banquet.

The fair at the Catholic Clubhouse is ended, and as a result about $3,200 has been raised towards paying for the new chapel which is to be erected on the corner of Midway place and Berckman street, early in the spring.

The fair was the most successful ever held under the auspices of the of the club, both financially and otherwise. The success financially is phenomenal, and everybody is surprised that such an amount of money has been raised.

Saturday night three of the contests were decided. One was for the flag, a beautiful silken banner, 6x6½ feet, with golden fringe and fitted out with a jointed staff. Three societies tried for this, the T. A. B., Catholic Club and A. O. H. The sum of $936.94 was raised in this contest as follows: T. A. B., $448.58; A. O. H., $310.75; Catholic Club, $177.61. The flag went to the T. A. B. Society.

The sum of $129 was raised in the contest for the most popular curate, Fathers Westman, Stafford or Murphy. Father Westman won this easily, $86 being placed to his credit in the contest. The prize is a silver set.

In the contest for the governor, Crane ran far ahead of Voorhees, and will be given the cane put up by Patrick Casey.

When the fair was about to end Saturday night almost everything had been sold. There was a large attendance and a great deal of interest was manifested in the affair. A spirit of good nature and sociability reigned, and there was no jealously manifested by the losers in the contests, but the winners were congratulated on all sides. The main object with all seemed to be the furtherance of the work, not individual honor or gain, and the money spent was wonderful, considering that all of it was taken in little by little.

To Father Westman is due much credit for the handsome way in which everything went off. The Rev. Father was present every evening, staying until late, keeping a watchful eye here and there, and ready to lend a hand whenever it was needed. As the hour was late Saturday night, when the contests were decided, the prizes were not awarded then, but within a couple of weeks a supper will be held at which the contestants and their friends will be invited, and then the prizes will be given out with appropriate exercises.

AUTUMNAL TEA.

Delightful Social Event Given by Miss Edith Clapp.

A most delightful tea was given Saturday afternoon by Miss Edith Clapp, of Mercer avenue, in honor of her friend. Miss Marion Henderson, who will soon leave town. Autumn leaves and flowers were used profusely in the decoration of the rooms. These with red shaded lights and the effective gowns of the young girls produced a very pretty picture. Miss Clapp and Miss Henderson were assisted in receiving by the Misses Emma Haviland, Harriet Shreve, Agnes Opdyke, Mary Whiton and Mary Wells.

In the dining room Mrs. John Gray Foster and Mrs. Samuel St. J. McCutchen presided at the table, assisted by the Misses Marion Bowen, Gertrude Haviland, May Shreve, Loleta Hunn, Mabel VanDeventer, Alice Rushmore, Anna Miller and Alice Thompson.

Mr. Cooper Paid the Bill.

E. E. Cooper, Republican candidate for Assembly in Somerset county, says that he paid the bill of the Mt. Bethel hotel keeper for the refreshments furnished the delegates to the Warren township primary ten days ago.

NOT ENEMIES BUT FRIENDS.

Lord Rosebery Believes there is a Great Future for England and America United.

Perth, Scotland, Oct. 24.—Lord Rosebery, the Liberal leader, and former premier, in receiving the freedom of the city of Perth on Saturday referred in the most cordial terms to the "good understanding between Great Britain and our kinsmen in the United States."

Continuing, the speaker said he believed that the whole history of the ill feeling which existed was one vast misunderstanding.

"Since 1779, by the madness of one government and the want of wisdom of another, Great Britain has waged two wars against the United States, in neither of which were we conspicuously successful.

"But throughout my life I have never been cognizant of an unfriendly feeling in this country toward the United States.

"On the other hand the Americans, in whose territory the wars were fought, and with whom the recollection was most painful, have always had a sense of abiding soreness. But I am glad to say that after more than a century of misunderstanding, the United States has discovered that we are not enemies but friends. (Cheers.)

"I could not but believe that when they realize the truth of the position they would see that it was a great future before the two nations going hand in hand, and that it was their duty, function and destiny to perform a great service not merely in behalf of other nations, but in behalf of humanity and civilization." (Cheers.)

UNFIT FOR SELF GOVERNMENT.

America May Be Needed to Guide Cuban Affairs for Some Time.

Boston, Mass., Oct. 24.—At the annual dinner of the Massachusetts Club, General Stewart L. Woodford was the principal speaker.

He reviewed the political history of the present administration up to the time when the Cuban question became acute, and said that whatever might be the difficulties of our present statesmanship, and the problems of the future, it was at least certain that the president and the Republican party had kept faith with the people of the country.

General Woodford spoke of his appointment as minister to Spain and of the instructions which he received to avert war if possible.

He sketched briefly the stormy events which led up to the declaration of war, and resulting in his leaving his post.

"I frankly confess," he said, "that I do not believe that the inhabitants of Cuba are qualified to administer a government, and I am constrained to the personal belief that it will be necessary to maintain the American occupation until such time as Americans, Englishmen, Germans and Frenchmen shall have gone into the island to enable the fever to be stamped out on one side and good order established on the other.

"I am afraid that we have assumed a charge of care which will last longer than our friends in Congress dreamed of when the war began."

To Exclude American Meat.

Berlin, Oct. 24.—An American diplomat, who is in a position to know the inside facts of the case, discussing the German proposition to practically exclude American meat products from Germany, said:

"It is understood that there is danger of a meat inspection bill to exclude American products under sanitary pretexts. The agricultural department will probably present a bill to Congress, if American products are attacked, providing for the sanitary inspection of adulterations of German wines and the dangerous colors used in toys, woolens, etc., and of the adulterations in dyes, chemicals and other such products. Many Americans hold that German imports require careful sanitary inspection in both countries. Their representatives at Berlin and Washington are anxious above everything to avoid retaliatory measures. But there is good reason to suppose that they will be entirely unsuccessful if the reichstag passes a law of inspection, which is a virtual prohibition, or if the present system is continued.

IS IT A TRIFLE?

THAT COMMON TROUBLE, ACID DYSPEPSIA OR SOUR STOMACH.

Now Recognized as a Cause of Serious Disease.

Acid dyspepsia, commonly called heart-burn or sour stomach, is a form of indigestion resulting from fermentation of the food. The stomach being too weak too promptly digest it, the food remains until fermentation begins, filling the stomach with gas and a bitter, sour, burning taste in the mouth is often present. This condition soon becomes chronic and being an every day occurrence is given but little attention. Because dyspepsia is not immediately fatal, many people do nothing for the trouble.

Within a recent period a remedy has been discovered prepared solely to cure dyspepsia and stomach troubles. It is known as Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets, and is now becoming rapidly used and prescribed as a radical cure for every form of dyspepsia.

Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets have been placed before the public and are sold by druggists everywhere at 50 cents per package. It is prepared by the Stuart Chemical Co., Marshall, Mich., and while it promptly and effectually restores a vigorous digestion, at the same time is perfectly harmless and will not injure the most delicate stomach, but on the contrary by giving perfect digestion strengthens the stomach, improves the appetite and makes life worth living.

SEEKING A COMPROMISE

Spain's New Proposition for the Cuban Debt Settlement.

A REPLY EXPECTED TO-DAY

Our Commission to Consider a Voluminous Communication Presented by the Spaniards. Secretary of State Hay to Have an Important Conference With the President.

Paris, Oct. 24.—The state peace commission held two sittings Saturday to consider the voluminous communication presented by the Spanish commissioners.

This new proposition of the Spaniards looks to a compromise between the refusal of the Americans to assume any of the Cuban debt and the Spanish holding that the United States should assume it wholly.

The terms of this proposal are obviously unknown except to the commissioners.

The American commissioners will reply to the communication at to-day's joint session and an extended argument will then follow. The matter will possibly be carried over to another meeting.

Le Temps deals editorially with the work of the Spanish and American peace commissions, remarking at the outset that little progress has thus far been made in the negotiations. Both sides, the paper says, have the best intentions. No Spaniard desires a renewal of hostilities and no American has the purpose to crush the vanquished adversary.

Le Temps then cites the methods of written interchanges between the commissions as a cause of the slow progress and says it is very evident that such procedure is being adopted to retard and complicate the progress of the negotiations such a system of monologues, instead of dialogues, requiring illimitable time, labor and good humor.

It should be parenthically stated that, though contra-allegations have been made, the plan of written interchange had its birth in the Spanish commission, the Americans having been more disposed to a free hand discussion to the end of more speedily arriving at conclusions.

On this point Le Temps is clearly misinformed, for it affirms that the Spaniards would have been glad to simplify the procedure, and that Senor Abarzuza of the Spanish commission attempted a free discussion instead of long writings, but was not listened to.

This last statement is also misinformation, as all utterances on both sides are received with due attention.

Le Temps, continuing, remarks that the present cumbersome methods employed here mark a return to those of the interminable Congress of Munster, which after eight years produced a treaty of Westphalia.

Le Temps regards as very curious the fact that the modern republic of the United States has assisted in that species of archaeological resurrection.

The paper then recites at some extent the Spanish contention regarding the Cuban debt in terms as to indicate the Spaniards as the source of information, thus:

"Spain claims that there cannot be an interregnum of sovereignty, that from the moment Spain abandons Cuba it passes ipso facto and necessarily to the United States, and that the United States cannot repudiate either its prerogative or its obligation."

Le Temps closes with a defense of the choice of Paris as a place for holding the conferences.

Additional Instructions May Be Sent

Washington, D. C., Oct. 24.—It is said that Secretary of State Hay will at an early date hold an important conference with the president in reference to the peace commission complcatons and the delay in the evacuation of Cuba.

Additional and imperative instructions to the American commissioners to meet the new conditions in Paris will probably be the result.

It is generally conceded here tha the president returns to Washington more than ever impressed with the importance of our government retaining the Philippine islands.

Gold Boom in Ohio.

Canal Dover Oct. 24.—Excitement followed the discovery of gold at Malvern, north of here, and the extensive plans for mining it continue unabated, and to-day the little town is crowded with strangers.

This hamlet of scarcely five hundred souls has been transformed into a boom town.

The gold quartz vein has been probed for ninety feet. It is four feet thick and perhaps six feet wide. These dimensions are almost uniform so far as found.

At all points the quartz is rich and will average up to the assays which have been made. Speculators are buying up the land at fancy prices.

Kaffirs Repulsed by Burghers.

Pretoria, Transvaal Republic, Oct. 24. The Magato Kaffirs have been repulsed by the force of burghers sent against them. The burghers chased them into the mountains, killing several of the natives. The burgher artillery did good execution, and the Transvaal forces suffered no loss.

The fact that the natives attacked the burghers is regarded as a declaration of war.

Gen. Lawton at New Haven.

Washington, D. C., Oct. 24.—Major General Lawton, who recently returned from Cuba, is with friends in New Haven, Conn., and will not come to Washington until he has recovered his health and feels in condition to make a personal report of what he wishes to lay before the department.

In Honor of Germany's Empress

Shanghai, Oct. 24.—Prince Henry of Prussia paraded all the troops at Tsin-Tau fort in honor of the birthday of the Empress of Germany, his sister-in-law.

OCCUPATION OF CUBA.

Many Spanish Soldiers Wish to Remain.

Washington, D. ., Oct. 24.—It is believed at the war department that it may yet be possible for our troops to take possession of Havana on December 1, the date originally set for the occupation of Cuba.

A dispatch was received by Secretary Alger yesterday from General Wade stating that Governor General Blanco had issued a decree offering to discharge from the Spanish army all soldiers who wished to remain in Cuba. The Spanish commissioners estimate that at least fifteen thousand men will take advantage of this opportunity to stay in Cuba.

The American commissioners think that the number who will act on Blanco's decree will be considerably larger than this.

The evacuation of Havana will in all probability be hastened somewhat by the operation of this decree.

One of the main reasons why it has been thought doubtful whether or not the United States could ake possession of Havana on December 1 was the long time that would be required in removing the Spanish troops. By permitting some of them to remain in Cuba the task of removing those who want to return to Spain will be much simplified.

Emperor Off for Jerusalem.

Constantinople, Oct. 24.—The Emperor and Empress of Germany left here for Palestine at ten minutes past five o'clock Saturday evening. They received an ovation from the crowds of people assembled to witness their departure.

At the grand farewell banquet here the sultan sat between the Emperor and Empress of Germany. At about 10 o'clock their imperial German majesties withdrew to the Merassin Kiosk, and the emperor afterward returned the farewell visits of the diplomatic corps.

In the meantime the sultan and his son, Prince Mehemmed-Selim-Effendi, conducted the empress, the wife of the German ambassador and the maids of honor to the harem, where they conversed with the Valideh Sultana, the princesses and other ladies. Artin Pacha's daughter acted as interpreter.

Quarantine Raised in Louisiana

New Orleans, Oct. 24.—The Louisiana board of health has issued the following proclamation:

Whereas the weather bureau reports frosts occurring all over the state, and whereas it is a fact accepted by epidemitologists that no foci of yellow fever can be established in any place after frost is shown; therefore, be it ordained that all quarantine restrictions on traffic are hereby removed by the Louisiana state board of health as far as it is concerned.

EDMOND SOUCHON,
President Louisiana State Board of Health.

Gen Miles Back at Headquarters

Washington, Oct. 24.—General Miles was at his desk at army headquarters Saturday looking much benefitted by his western trip. He expressed himself as pleased with what he saw in the West. The Omaha exposition surpassed his greatest expectations, while the peace jubilee in Chicago, he said, was a most remarkable patriotic display. He expects to go to Philadelphia next Wednesday, where he will act as chief marshal in the peace jubilee celebration. Meanwhile he is giving attention ot the details of plans for the garrisoning of Cuba.

Blanco's Offer to Spanish Soldiers

Washington, Oct. 24.—General Wade, the president of the American military commission in Havana, has informed the war department that Capt. General Blanco has offered the Spanish soldiers to secure their honorable discharge from the army and give them their back pay if they desire to remain in Cuba.

The Spanish evacuation commissioners estimate that about fifteen thousand soldiers will accept this offer, but General Wade believes tha tthe actual number will be much larger.

To Be a Guard at Camp Wikoff

New York, Oct. 24.—Battery L of the Sixth artillery, which has been on duty at Fort Wadsworth, has been ordered to Camp Wikoff at Montauk Point. The battery will relieve the Second battalion of the Second United States volunteer engineers, which will be mustered out.

The duty of the battery will be to guard the government stores now at the camp. The battery will leave Long Island City for Camp Wikoff on Tuesday.

McKinley in Washington

Washington D. C., Oct. 24.—The president, Mrs. McKinley and party reached Washington on their return from the West at 2.30 o'clock Saturday afternoon and were driven to the White House.

All were in excellent health and spirits. Soon after their arrival the president walked through the several executive offices and shook hands with the clerks at their desks. The trip home from Pittsburg, Pa., was uneventful.

Maine Artillery Ordered South

Augusta, Me., Oct. 24.—Orders were received Saturday afternoon by Major Newcomb, commanding the First Maine Heavy Artillery, from Adjutant General Corbin, to have his command in Boston on Tuesday morning, ready to start for Savannah.

Major Newcomb has ordered all the absentees to return at once and will start to-night.

Mr Gladstone's Biographer.

London, Oct. 24.—The sons of the late William E. Gladstone have decided to intrust the task of writing their father's biography to Mr. John Morley, the distinguished liberal statesman and journalist, who was twice chief secretary for Ireland under Mr. Gladstone.

Russian Winter Sets in St. Petersburg Oct. 24.—Snow has fallen throughout European Russia, except in the Crimea and Caucasus. The navigation of the Volga has been partially suspended, but the Baltic ports are still open.

THE THREE GRACES

[By Jaquette.]

Grace Whitely, Grace Lorning and Grace Downlake were known far and wide as the "Three Graces." Grace by name, and possessing grace of form and manner, there was no stigma in the sobriquet. Another strange coincidence was the fact that they were chums, and lived at 15, 17 and 19 St. Valentine avenue. They belonged to the same "smart" set, and worshipped in the same sanctuary.

One day, recently, Grace Downlake rushed into No. 17 and found her friend Grace Lorning busy over a new recipe for making cake. Miss Lorning had already made several mistakes in compounding the ingredients, and when Miss Downlake bounced into the kitchen with, 'Oh, Grace, love, I want you to go right down town with me to look at a new fancy in dress goods!" Miss Lorning threw up her hands in dismay, and exclaimed, "Grace Downlake, you're a mean thing; you've made me spoil this delicious cake—I mean, it would have been delicious—by scaring me into putting in the yolk of an egg in place of a lump of butter!"

It was the end of cake making in that house that day—unless the cook may have plunged the conglomeration into a pan and baked it for the coachman, against whom she had a standing grudge.

Grace Whitely gave me a history of the trip the next day. "Why," she said, "we went to Hahne & Co.'s, Newark. I had no idea that such a splendid assortment of dress fabrics could be found outside of New York. Long after we bought our dresses we lingered in discussing the beautiful display. Hahne's is a lovely place to buy everything." Then she showed me her shopping list, and I give my readers an exact copy of what each girl said of her new suit.

Grace Whitely: "An all-wool camel's hair, fifty inches wide, rough effect, in a lovely cadet blue. I know I'll look stunning in it. I paid only 85 cents a yard."

Grace Lorning: "A suit in bayadere stripe, ruby shade, three-tone effect, and forty-five inches wide. If I don't cut a dash, I'll change my name. The price was low; I paid only 75c a yard."

Grace Downlake: "I think 79c a yard was real low for my duchesse satin. It's all silk, too, and twenty inches wide. It's a perfectly sweet shade of brown. When I get it on, I'll make all the other girls envious."

FRENCH CLAIM FASHODA

A Yellow Book Published Giving Information.

ENGLAND BLAMES FRANCE

Demand for the Evacuation of the Disputed Point Regarded as Equivalent to an Ultimatum, Which France Must Resist.

Paris, Oct. 24.—A semi-official note issued last evening, says:

"There is no foundation for the alarmist rumors regarding the relations between France and Great Britain. It is equally incorrect to say that extraordinary measures have been taken at any of our naval ports."

The Fashoda Yellow Book is voluminous, but it does not include Major Marchand's report, which will be published later. The dispatches were largely anticipated by the English Fashoda Blue Book.

The diplomatic conversations recorded show a curious endeavor on the French side to represent that Marchand's mission was quite as important as General Kitchener's, on the ground that the struggle was against the Khalifa and barbarism.

On September 18 M. Delcasse, the foreign minister, informed the British ambassador to France, Sir Edmund Monson, in explicit language that France did not regard Lord Salisbury's claim to the Soudan by virtue of conquest as applying to Fashoda, on the ground that the Marchand expedition went to the relief of the French expedition under Captain Lieotard, which dated from a period long before the declaration in the House of Commons by Sir Edward Grey, under secretary of state for foreign affairs under Lord Rosebery's cabinet, as to the policy of the British government toward the Soudan, and at a time when the equatorial provinces were lost to civilization. In fact, M. Delcasse argued, unless Great Britain possessed the sultan's mandate as well as the Khedive's to acquire all former Egyptian provinces, France considered herself equally entitled with England to possession of any point occupied by French officers.

Judging from the Yellow Book dispatches the foregoing represents the French standpoint, and M. Delcasse contends that as Marchand reached Fashoda first, England has no right to demand an evacuation of Fashoda prior to negotiations.

On September 9 M. Delcasse declared to Sir Edmund Monson that such a demand would be equivalent to an ultimatum, and while he could afford to sacrifice France's material interests so long as her honor was intact, for the sake of the Anglo-French entente,, no one could doubt what would be the reply of France to such a demand.

The subsequent dispatches appearing in the yellow book relate to the conversations between Baron de Courcel, French ambassador in London, and Lord Salisbury, the latter contending that the capture of Khartoum entitled Egypt to possession of all the Mahdi's dominions, and the French ambassador arguing that Major Marchand had captured Fashoda before Gen. Kitchener took Khartoum, and that France had for a long time held several posts in the Bahr-el-Gazal. Lord Salisbury retorted that the French forces in the regions referred to were too weak to constitute effective occupation.

London, Oct. 24.—The British cabinet has been summoned to meet early this week for the purpose of discussing the Fashoda question, and it is understood that the government proposes to take the steps necessary to insist upon an early and definite statement on the subject from France.

The British admiralty has ordered every sea going warship to have its crew made up to the full complement, as ordered in case of mobilization.

This order of the British admiralty practically means the complete telling off prospectively of every ship's company in detail.

Four torpedo boat destroyers, which were about to be fitted with new water tube boilers, have had their orders countermanded, and have been instructed to withdraw their stores.

Officers on leave of absence or unemployed have been notified to hold themselves in readiness to commission the reserved ships, if required.

The Times, referring to the Fashoda question, says:

"It is not we who are trying to humiliate France, but it is France that seeks to put a great humiliation upon us. We have beaten the Khalifa and have effectively occupied the provinces he usurped. We are now asked to clear out at the orders of an exploring party of nine Frenchmen, who owe their escape from destruction to our military success; or, if we are kindly permitted not to clear out, we are to rangements, but they are now admittedly directed against Great Britain. The minister of marine, M. Lockroy, is dispatching orders to all the naval stations along the coast, and he is receiving reports as to their condition. The French dockyards and arsenals are working at full pressure, hurriedly preparing warships and torpedo boats for active service.

Commission Powerless.

Havana, Oct. 24.—The American evacuation commission has been informed that J. B. Hamel was moving the old guns, bought from the Spanish government at a sale held by the authorities, despite the commission's protest.

Captain Brooks was at once detailed to go to the artillery depot and make an investigation. When he arrived there the commandant of the depot attempted to prevent Captain Brooks entering, asserting that it was against his orders, but the American insisted and finally got in.

Captain Brooks reported that the entire purchase had been removed, with the wagons and carriages. Each article was checked as it went out.

The commission addressed a note to Mr. Hamel, warning him that the American government would claim full right in the property and would hold him responsible for every piece removed.

DISCOVERIES IN ALASKA.

Twenty-five Hundred Square Miles More Territory

Washington, Oct. 24.—The discovery of twenty-five hundred square miles of additional territory of the United States on the Alaskan coast and of a new channel for Yukon bound vessels which will minimize distance, time and danger, is officially reported to Superintendent Pritchett of the Coast and Geodetic Survey, by John F. Pratt, the assistant in charge of the expedition which has been working in those waters.

What he expansion of the mileage of Alaskan territory is due to is not known. There is a possibility of accretion and constant outward growth of the land since the first charts were made, but the better opinion is that it is due to previous inaccurate charts, the present being the first regular and trustworthy survey of the region. The finding of the new channel will effect a saving of about four hundred or five hundred miles in reaching the Yukon. At present vessels destined for the Yukon region have to proceed outside the long bar some twenty-five miles off from the coast up to St. Michaels, there transhipping to small boats, which have to creep along the coast down to the Aphoon channel, one hundred miles or so below St. Michaels.

This channel carries the water only two feet over the bar at low tide.

The new channel just found is the Kuslivak, which will carry eight feet over the bar at low water, and, according to present expectations, will permit ships of moderate draft to proceed directly into the Yukon from the south and then continue up the river four hundred or five hundred miles to a safe landing before transshipping to the smaller boats, which will go the remainder of the way up the river. Aside from shortening the distance, this will put the Yukon region into much closer access from the south.

The party, which has just completed its labors for the season, is now at Seattle, where the survey maintains a branch office. It consisted of about 60 men, under six officers of the survey--the largest party ever sent out. All are reported safe and well.

The work of the party was dangerous. They had to work outside the bar, which was many miles out at sea, in order to do the sounding in deep water.

This kept them frequently out of sight of the coast. They carried two steam launches of about fifty tons' capacity, and about seventy-five feet in length.

All the information obtained will be embodied in a chart which will be ready for use in time for the first parties going up next spring, so as to afford greater safety to navigation for all that region.

The work on the chart, under the strict orders that have just been given will be pushed through with great vigor.

The same party will return to work next spring to complete the surveys, and the channel will be buoyed as soon as possible.

KILLED IN A RACE FEUD.

Nine Negroes Shot After Murdering a White Man.

New Orleans, Oct, 24.—A Vicksburg dispatch to the Picayune says:

"Telegrams report a wild state of affairs at Hermanville, on the line of the Alabama and Vicksburg Railroad, in Scott county.

"It is stated that bad blood has existed for some time in Hermanville between the whites and the blacks of that place.

"Saturday night a negro beat most unmercifully an old white man. Later a deputy sheriff and two others went to the negro's house with a warrant to arrest him.

"When the officers neared the house they found it surrounded by a crowd of some fifty negroes, all armed and were fired upon. Mr. Potter, a well known man, was killed, and the other two are thought to be mortally wounded.

"As soon as the news reached Hermanville the men hastily armed themselves and went to the scene of the riot. Then the fight opened in reality and lasted the greater part of the night. At daylight it was found that nine negroes had been killed and four captured, who are slightly wounded."

Negroes Caught With Hounds.

Wilmington, N. C., Oct. 24.—At three o'clock yesterday morning a squad of the negroes who were dispersed at Ashpole, Robinson county, crept up to town and shot three white men stationed there as a guard—Albert Floyd, Robert Inman and William Bullard.

Bullard is seriously wounded, the others slightly.

A hundred white men, with bloodhounds, went in pursuit and captured the four negroes near Ashpole. They were run down and brought to bay by the bloodhounds, which the thoroughly trained.

SATURDAY'S FOOTBALL.

Princetown vs. Cornell.

Princeton, N. J., Oct. 24.—Princeton defeated Cornell here Saturday by the score of six to nothing. The game was slow from start to finish. Cornell tried fancy football and found it an easy prey for Nassau's veteran forwards.

Harvard vs. Chicago.

Cambridge, Mass., Oct. 24.—Harvard rolled up thirty-nine points against the Chicago Athletic Association Saturday on Soldiers' field, completely outclassing the visitors at every point.

Chicago weight counted for little against the boys who have been practicing so much together and who are to-day in prime condition.

Yale vs. Carlisle Indians.

New Haven, Conn., Oct. 24.—With a crippled team, Yale Saturday afternoon scored eighteen points against the Carlisle Indians, but a clever drop kick by Hudson struck the cross bar of the Yale goal and bounded over, making five points for the sturdy Red Men and giving to Carlisle the honor of being the second team to score against Yale this season. The game was exciting, as Carlisle made a heroic effort to beat Yale.

VIENNA IS IN TERROR

Five New Cases of Bubonic Plague Since the Death of Barisch.

STRICT PRECAUTION USED

The Cultivation of the Plague Bacilli and His Wife Moved Freely in Public Before the Latter Saw a Physician. Anti Semitic Press Accuse Hebrews, and Riots May Result.

London, Oct. 24.—The outbreak of bubonic plague at Vienna due to the experiments in Professor Nothnagle's bacteriological establishment in the cultivation of the plague bacillus, has spread terror at the Austrial capital.

Five cases, in addition to that of the late Herr Barisch, the assistant in the establishment who contracted the bubonic plague, while cultivating the bacillus, have now occurred.

They are two nurses in the laboratory another of the assistants, Herr Barisch's wife, and Dr. Mueller, the physician who attended Herr Barisch. The last sacrament of the Roman Catholic church were administered to the latter and to one of the nurses by a priest through a window of the plague cells.

Dr. Mueller was considered an authority on the plague, having been to Bombay for the purpose of studying it on the spot, and he survived all the dangers there.

The disease at Vienna has assumed a pneumonic form. There are no bolls, but each case is accompanied by high fever and blood spitting.

Extraordinary precautions have now been taken to prevent an epidemic. The plague patients lie in an isolated building, attended by Dr. Pooch, a volunteer physician and by Sisters of Charity. They are surrounded by a rope, across which nobody is allowed to pass.

Dr. Pooch writes the prescriptions and fastens them to the window pane. The doctors outside read them and have them made up. Then the prescriptions are placed on the window ledge, whence they are removed by those inside.

Food is conveyed to the patients and their attendants by Sisters of Charity in a similar manner, and the nurses furnish accounts by telephone of all changes in the patients' condition.

Every person who came in contact with Herr Barisch, principally the hospital attendants, has been isolated. Some of them resisted and others tried to escape, but were captured and all were locked up.

It is feared, however, that the precautions were taken too late. Herr Barisch was ill for three days before he saw a doctor, during which time he lived with his wife and visited wine shops.

The wife, who has now developed suspicious symptoms, visited friends, rode in public omnibuses and came in contact with dozens of persons at her husband's funeral.

The excitement in medical circles is tremendous. The well known chemist, Professor Hofrotz Ludwig, has made a pathetic speech, during which he expressed the hope tha the doctors of Vienna will prove themselves equal to all emergencies. This reveals the fact that it is the opinion of medical men at the Austrian capital that the plague is likely to spread in that city.

Another significant indication of this apprehension is found in the fact that a temporary hospital consisting of several detached sheds was hastily erected during last night behind the Infections Hospital.

One hundred men worked by torchlight there in order to complete it as quickly as possible.

A painful feature of the Viennese situation is the unscrupulous attitude of the anti-Semitic newspapers, which are accusing the Jewish doctors of bringing the plague to Vienna.

It is feared that this appeal to the worst passions of the mob will lead to plague riots against the Jews if the disease spreads.

Chili and Argentina.

Valparaiso, Chili, via Galveston, Tex., Oct. 24.—The Chilian and Argentine governments have arrived at the following agreement:

The arbitration commission will be composed of five members of each country, who will assemble at Buenos Ayres to solve the Puna-Atacama problem.

The discussion must be finished in a few sittings. In case of disagreement one of the foreign ministers resident at Buenos Ayres will be requested definitely to solve the matter.

It is said that Argentine proposed the Uruguayan or Italian minister and that Chili proposed United States Minister Buchanan.

Spain Faces Another Crisis.

Madrid, Oct. 24.—The newspapers here regard a ministerial crisis as imminent and they urge the ministers to sink their differences, in view of the many difficulties of Spain.

Several of the papers violently attack Senor Gamazo, the minister of public instruction, for resigning and thus complicating the situation.

Speculation was caused by the holding of a long conference between the queen regent and General Polavieja, former governor of Cuba and of the Philippines.

Russia the Ally of France

St. Petersburg, Oct. 24.—Commenting upon the recent speech of the British chancellor of the exchequer, Sir Michael Hicks-Beach, the "Novoe Vremya" charges the chancellor with making a violent attack upon the rench government and says he failed to bear in mind that France has in Russia "an ally resolved to support her in the Fashoda question, in view of the full solidarity of their interests."

Son Born to the Duchess of Aosta

Turin, Oct. 24.—The Duchess of Aosta wife of Prince Emanuelo Filiberto, the Duke of Aosta, eldest nephew of the King of Italy, was safely delivered of a son Saturday.

The Duchess was formerly Princess Helena of Orleans, daughter of the late Count of Paris. She was married to the Duke of Aosta on June 25, in the year 1895.

Duty of the Common Council.

In the face of all the agitation concerning the granting of a franchise to the Plainfield Street Railway Company for the right to extend its line through the eastern section of the city and complete the pivotal link in the plans of the capitalists owning it, the company, its representatives and its supporters, if it has any outside of a select coterie of citizens, have all signally failed to state or attempt to state that the demands for better terms are unreasonable in any way. The only sort of defense of the street railway capitalists has been in the denunciation of the county trolley project plan and its probable cost—a subject so distant from the actual condition of affairs in Plainfield as to amount to nothing.

On the other hand both The Daily Press and The News, together with many citizens—a very large majority, in fact—have advanced many sound arguments why the Plainfield Street Railway Company should be made to pay more and submit to other stipulations than are proposed by them.

This agitation has been carried on because the interests of the people and the city demanded it. Though the public at large has not realized it for a long period, it is none the less true and forcible that there is now a prevailing sentiment against granting public franchises in perpetuity. Such action necessarily shuts the people off from the benefits of public rights that future developement in science and civilization serve to make inestimably more valuable as time goes on.

If the Common Council heeds the voice of the people and rejects the franchise under consideration, it will be doing its true duty—representing the people.

If the Common Council grants the franchise on the terms proposed by the capitalists, it will be perpetuating a great public wrong.

The duty of the Common Council is to the people—not to the caprices of its individual members or to the selfish interests of private capitalists.

About Judge Coddington.

The New York Mercantile and Financial Times, in discussing the Senatorial situation in Union county from a Democratic point of view, has this to say of former Judge Wm. A. Coddington:

There have been many names proposed for Senator this year, but no more respected, prominent or popular man has been mentioned than Hon. William A. Coddington, who was the best City Judge Plainfield ever had. He was elected over a very formidable and popular rival—Hon. John Ulrich—afterward Assemblyman, by 200 majority, and was the first Democrat who had ever beaten a Republican for the seat on the bench.

He is a prominent lawyer, being a member of the well-known firm of Reed & Coddington, and since the partnership was formed he has not run for public office, but has strictly followed his profession. He has, however, always taken a warm interest in politics. He is well known throughout the county, and has no savoring, whatever, of a politician. Should he be nominated we venture to predict that he will carry the city of Plainfield and the county solely on his popularity and well standing. Mr. Coddington is a member of the Union County Club, Park Club, League of American Wheelmen, Crescent Wheelmen and an active worker in the United Order of American Workmen. He also belongs to the Knights of Pythias, Royal Arcanum, Knights Templar, Odd Fellows, Knights of Trinity and the Order of Red Men.

He is a very public-spirited and liberal man and his constant aim is the material and moral advancement of the community.

How the Soldiers Vote.

About 5,000 soldiers will vote at the coming election although nearly 3,000 of them will be out of the State on November 8th; some of them at Camp Meade, Pa., with the Fourth Regiment; some at Huntsville, Ala., with the Third Regiment, and the rest way down south with the Sixth Alabama. All who are away have been provided with ballots and blank forms, on which have been printed instructions as to the method of casting the votes. The general statutes of the State provide that every qualified elector absent from the State, in time of war and in the service of the United States, shall be entitled to vote. He must prepare his own ballot, and then sign a paper which authorizes some elector in his election district to cast the ballot for him. The proxy takes the ballot, in a sealed envelope, to the election officers of the soldier's district and takes an oath to the effect that he has not opened the envelope or changed the ballot. Then the envelope is opened and the ballot cast by the election officers.

Tonight the Plainfield Republicans will select the men who are to represent them at the county convention. Particular inteterst is centred in the fact that among the candidates for the State Senatorial nomination is a prominent Plainfielder, E. R. Ackerman. Leaders of the party in this city are very positive that the Plainfield delegation will be solidly for one man. From present appearances then Mr. Ackerman seems sure of the vote at the convention of the local delegation.

There are now five candidates for Governor in the State of New Jersey. They are: Foster M. Voorhees, of Elizabeth, candidate of the Republican party; Elvin W. Crane, of Newark, candidate of the Democratic party; Fred Schrayshuen, of Mount Holly, candidate of the People's party; Matthew McGuire, of Paterson, candidate of the Socialistic-Labor party; and Thomas H. Langdon, of Bordentown, Prohibition candidate.

PASSING COMMENT

Things that Are Not Exactly News but Just as Interesting.

Only four of New Jersey's former Governors are still living. Two of these are Republicans and two Democrats. The oldest of the quartette is William A Newell, a Republican, who was elected in November, 1856. He is now an old man, although still in active service, being a practicing physician and a resident of Olympia, Wash. In 1846 and again in 1848 he was elected to Congress. In the course of his term he devised the life-saving service and had a bill passed which is still the law under which this work is carried on. The other Republican is John W. Griggs, who was elected in November, 1895, to the executive chair, and was last January elevated to the office of United States Attorney-General. George C. Ludlow is the senior Democratic ex-Governor. He is now on the New Jersey Supreme Court bench and lives in New Brunswick. The other Democrat who is at one time a Governor in this State is George T. Werts, who was elected in November, 1892. Mr. Werts has an extensive law practice in Hudson county

GUN EXPLODED AND HURT SHOOTER.

Martin Brennan Was Trying to Kill Mushrats at West Dunellen.

(Special to The Daily Press.)

Dunellen, October 24.—Martin Brennan, operator in the signal tower on the Lehigh Valley Railroad at West Dunellen, was trying to shoot a mushrat along Green brook, this morning, when the gun exploded and lacerated his hand in a terrible manner, besides filling his face with gun powder. Joseph Noel, of Plainfield, who drives a bakery wagon, happened along at the time and brought the injured man to his home in this place. How serious the wound will prove has not as yet been determined.

A Birthday Anniversary.

Miss Edna Randolph, daughter of Thomas Randolph, of Central avenue, celebrated the anniversary of her thirteenth birthday last Saturday and in the evening a party was given in her honor. It was arranged by her sister, Miss Carrie Randolph. There were present about fourteen schoolmates and the evening was passed in playing games and in listening to vocal and instrumental music. During the evening refreshments were served to the guests.

For a Postal Sub-station.

A petition is being circulated in the borough to have Dr. Mattison's drug store appointed as a sub-post office station, when Postmaster Bird makes the appointment for the borough. The people who are advocating Dr. Mattison's appoinment claims that the store is open every day until late at night and that in every way this store is the most convenient of any for the purpose desired.

The steady growth of the Pleasure Palace in favor of vaudeville patrons is one of the features of theatre-dom in Greater New York. Starting on its present policy of a refined entertainment, presented in the form of continuous performance, and fit for ladies and children, its patronage has increased weekly in a manner that shows conclusively the wisdom of the policy that dictated the change from the old music hall style of variety show. The bill offered for this week October 24th, is strong in "straight" vaudeville features, and includes the names of Caron and Herbert, the well-known comedy acrobats; Robert Fisher and company in a very amusing farcical comedy, "Naval Complication;" M'lle Orbasany and her cleverly trained parrots and a whole host of other high-class talent.

There is a double love story so developed as to admit of strong dramatic action on the one hand and contrasted humor on the other. The cast includes Louise Muller, Edith Ives, Anna Barclay, Harry Pierson and Herbert Jones. Following "On Land And Sea," will be Marie Wainwright in an elaborate production of "Shall We Forgive Her" and on the Wednesday and Saturday matinee, "East Lynn" year is given.

Both Mr. Ackerman and Mr. Codding stand high in their party as well as in the community in which they reside. Both are considered excellent men to represent the county in the Senate if elected. It remains to be seen, however, whether this city can rally sufficient support in the county to nominate its candidate. The primaries will be held tonight and will be watched with unusual interest to see how the other parts of the county are going.

A number of the law students in town, those who consider themselves too large to join the Plainfield Law Debating Society, organized here last winter, are about to organize a seperate club, composed altogether of older students. In a field so muddy that the players could hardly stand up, one of the most exciting games of football ever seen in Scotch Plains was played Saturday afternoon between the local eleven and the Dunellen team. The Dunellen boys were victorious by a score of 6 to 0. The Scotch Plains team was the heaviest, but it lacked the team play of the visitors. The visitors fumbled woefully and lost chance after chance of making a goal. The only scoring was done in the last part of the second half. Hardingham, the Dunellen fullback, punted. The Scotch Plains back fumbled and the ball rolled across the goal line, where Taylor, left tackle for Dunellen, fell on it. Hardingham kicked the goal.
